Enter ARTEMIDORUS reading a paper.

Art. Czesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou beest not immortal look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along, And as a suitor will I give him this. My heart laments that virtue cannot live Out of the teeth of emulation. If thou read this, O Cesar, thou mayst live; If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.

Exit.

Another part of the SCENE IV .- ROME. same Street, before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prythee, boy, run to the senatehonse;

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone: Why dost thon stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam. Por. I would have had thee there and here again

Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there .-

O constancy, be strong upon my sidel Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tonguel

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel?-Art thou here yet?

Madam, what should I do? Luc. Run to the Capitol, and nothing else? And so return to you, and nothing else? Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well, For he went sickly forth: and take good note What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.

Hark, boy! what noise is that? Luc. I hear none, madam

Por. Prythee, listen well: I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS.

Por. Come hither, fellow: Which way hast thou been? Art.

At mine own house, good lady. Por. What is't o'clock?

Art. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Cesar yet gone to the Capito?? Art. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand, To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thon not? Art. That I have, lady: if it will please

Cesar To be so good to Cesar as to hear me,

I shall beseech him to befriend himself. Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him? Art. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. Good-morrow to you. Here the street is PATTOW:

The throng that follows Casar at the heels Of senators, of prætors, common suitors, Will crowd a feeble man almost to death: Pil get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Casar as he comes along.

Exit. Por. I must go in.—Ah me! how weak a thing

The heart of woman is! O Brutus, The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!-Sure the boy heard me.—Brutus hath a suit That Cæsar will not grant.-O, I grow faint-Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord; Say I am merry: come to me again, And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Exeunt severally.

ACT III.

Scene L.—Rome. The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A crowd of People in the street leading to the Capital; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, ME-TELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Cas. The ides of March are come. Sooth. Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er read, Dec.

At your best leisure, this his humble suit-Art. O Cæsar, read mine first; for mine's [Cæsar. a suit

That touches Casar nearer: read it, great Cas. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Casar; read it instantly. Cæs. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

CESAR enters the Capital, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

And very wisely threat before you sting. Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar: You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds.

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet; Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind, Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers! Cas. Flatterers .- Now, Brutus, thank your-

This tongue had not offended so to-day If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops. Look,

I draw a sword against conspirators;

When think you that the sword goes up again?~ Never till Cæsar's three-and-thirty wounds Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,

Unless thou bring'st them with thee. So I hope;

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword. Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain, Young man, thou couldst not die more honour-

Cas. A peevish school-hoy, worthless of such honour,

Join'd with a masker and a reveller? Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony; away!— Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth: If you dare fight to-day, come to the field; If not, when you have stomachs.

Exeunt Oct., ART., and their Army. Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark! The storm is up, and all is on the hazard. Bru. Ho, Lucilius hark, a word with you.

Lucil. My lord. [BRU. and LUCIL. converse apart. Cas. Messala,

What says my general? Mes. Cas. Messala, This is my birth-day; as this very day Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand Messala: Be thou my witness that, against my will, As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties. You know that I held Epicurus strong, And his opinion: now I change my mind,

And partly credit things that do presage. Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd, Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;

Who to Philippi here consorted us: This morning are they fled away and gone;

And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us, As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem A canopy most fatal, under which Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I hut believe it partly; For I am fresh of spirit; and resolv'd To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Now, most noble Erutus, The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may, Lovers of peace, lead on our days to age! But, since the affairs of men rest still incertain, Let's reason with the worst that may befall. If we do lose this battle, then is this The very last time we shall speak together:

What are you, then, determined to do? Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy By which I did blame Cato for the death Which he did give himself .- I know not how, But I do find it cowardly and vile,

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent The time of life:—arming myself with patience To stay the providence of some high powers That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle, You are contented to be led in triumph Through the streets of Rome?

IRoman, Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome; He bears too great a mind. But this same day Must end that work the ides of March began; And whether we shall meet again I know not. Therefore our everlasting farewell take: For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius! If we do meet again, why, we shall smile; If not, why, then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutusi If we do meet again we'll smile indeed; If not, 'tis true this parting was well made. Bru. Why, then, lead on.-O that a man might know The end of this day's business ere it come! But it sufficeth that the day will end And then the end is known .- Come, hol Exeunt. Scene II.—The Plains of Philippi. The Field of Battle.

Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA. Alarum.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills

Unto the legions on the other side:

[Loud alarum. Let them set on at once; for I perceive But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, And sudden push gives them the overthrow. Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. Exeunt.

SCENE III .- THE PLAINS OF PHILIPPI. Another part of the Field.

Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O look, Titinius, look, the villains fly! Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy; This ensign here of mine was turning back; I slew the coward, and did take it from him. Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early; Who, having some advantage on Octavius, Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil: Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Ply further off, my lord, fly further off; Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord! Fly, therefore, noble Cassius! fly far off.

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over, In states unborn and accents yet unknown! Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport

That now on Pompey's basis lies along No worthier than the dust!

So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be call'd The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth? Ay, every man away: Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome. Bru. Soft, who comes here?

Enter a Servant.

A friend of Antony's Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel:

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down; And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:-Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest: Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving: Say I lov'd Brutus, and I honour him; Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death. Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead So well as Brutus living; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus Through the hazards of this untrod state With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant

Roman

I never thought him worse. Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit. Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose. Bru. But here comes Antony.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Welcome, Mark Antony. Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low? Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure?—Fare thee well.— I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, Who else must be let blood, who else is rank: If I myself, there is no hour so fit As Cæsar's death's hour; nor no instrument

Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world. I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke.

Fufil your pleasure. Live a thonsand years, I shall not find myself so apt to die: No place will please me so, no mean of death As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off, The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antonyl beg not your death of ns. Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As by our hands and this our present act You see we do; yet see you but our hands, And this the bleeding business they have done: Our hearts you see not, -they are pitiful; And pity to the general wrong of Rome. As fire drives out fire, so pity pity, Hath done this deed on Casar. For your part, To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:

Our arms no strength of malice, and our hearts, Of brothers' temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and rever-man's ence. Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver yon the cause Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him. Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom. Let each man render me his bloody hand: First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with yon;-Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand; Now, Decius Brutus, yours; -now yours, Metelius;-

Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca, yours;— Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentleman all,—alas, what shall I say? My credit now stands on such slippery ground That one of two bad ways you must conceit me, Either a coward or a flatterer. That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true: If then, thy spirit look upon us now, Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death To see thy Antony making his peace, Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes, Most noble! in the presence of thy corse? Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood, It would become me better than to close In terms of friendship with thine enemies. Pardon me, Julius !- Here wast thon bay'd, brave hart: Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy Lethe. O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;

And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee. How like a deer strucken by many princes Dost thou here liel

Cas. Mark Antony,

Pardon me, Caius Cassius: Ant. The enemies of Cæsar shall say this; Then in a friend it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Casar so; But what compact mean you to have with us? Will you be prick'd in number of our friends; Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed, Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar. Friends am I with you all, and love you all; Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle: Our reasons are so full of good regard Scene IV .- Another part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, LU-CILIUS, and others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your [with me? heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go I will proclaim my name about the field:—

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend; I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

[Charges the enemy. Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus! (Exit, charging the enemy. YOUNG CATO is overpowered, and falls.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius; And mayst be honour's, being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Only I yield to die? There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight; Offering money.

Kill, Brutus, and be honour'd in his death. I Sold. We must not .- A noble prisoner! 2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony Brutus is general.-

r Sold. I'll tell the news.—Here comes the Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord. Ant. Where is he? Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough: I dare assure thee that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus: The gods defend him from so great a shame! When you do find him, or slive or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like-himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you, A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe, Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on, And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead; And bring us word unto Octavius' tent How everything is chanc'd. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this\rock.

Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,

He came not back: he is or ta'en or slain. Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. (Whispering him. Yord?

No, not for all the Cli. What, I, my world. Bru. Peace, then, no words.

I'll rather kill myself. Cli. Bru. Hark thee, Dar Hanius!

Dar. Shall I do such a deed? Cli. O Dardanius!

Dar. O Clitus! Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee? Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he medi-

Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes. Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a Vol. What says my lord?

Bru.

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me Two several times by night,—at Sardis once, And this last night here in Philippi fields: I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord. Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

[Low alaryms. It is more worthy to leap in ourselves Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, Thou know'st that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I pray thee, Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarum still. Cli. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here. (Volumnius.-Bru. Farewell to you; -and you; -and you, Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,... My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life, I found no man but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue Hath almost ended his life's history: Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,

That have but labour's to attain this hour. [Alarum. Cry within, "Fly, fly, fly!" Cli. Fly, my lord, fly.

Hence! I will follow. [Exeunt CLI., DAR., and Vol. I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:

Thou art a fellow of a good respect; Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it: Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face, While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Stra. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [He runs on his sword, and dies.

Enter: OCTAVIUS, AN-Retreat. TONY, and Army; MESSALA and LUCILIUS, prisoners.

Oct. What man is that? Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master? [Messala: thy master?

Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, The conquerors can but make a fire of him; For Brutus only overcame himself, [Whispers him. | And no man else hath honour by his death.

The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony:

Enter Antony and others with Cæsar's body. who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying,-a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart,—that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live, live!

z Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors. 3 Cit. Let him be Casar.

4 Cit.

Cæsar's better parts Shall be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shonts and clamours.

Bru. My conntrymen .-

2 Cit. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

r Cit. Peace, ho?

Bru: Good countrymen, let me depart alone, And for my sake stay here with Antony: Do grace to Cæsar's corse, and grace his speech Tending to Cæsar's glories; which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make. I do entreat you, not a man depart,

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. I Cit. Stay, hol and let us hear Exit. Mark Antony. 3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;

We'll hear him.-Noble Antony, go up. Ant. For Brutus' sake I am beholden to you.

Goes up. "4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

з Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Casar was a tyrant.

Nay, that's certain: з Cit. We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him. [say. 2 Cit. Peacel let us hear what Antony can Ant. You gentle Romans,

Peace, ho! let us hear him. Cit. Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him. The evil that men do lives after them: The good is oft interred with their bones; So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious: If it were so, it was a grievous fault; And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it. Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,-For Brutus is an honourable man; So are they all, all honourable men, Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral. He was my friend, faithful and just to me: But Brutus says he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man. He hath brought many captives home to Rome, Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Casar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept:

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff. Yet Brutus says he was ambitions; And Brutus is an honourable man. You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition? Yet Brutus says he was ambitions; And, sure, he is an honourable man. I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke. But here I am to speak what I do know. You all did love him once,—not without cause: What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?

O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts. And men have lost their reason!-Bear with me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar. And I must pause till it come back to me.

I Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cæsar has had great wrong.

Has, he, masters? I fear there will a worse come in his place. 4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

I Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide [weeping. 2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with 3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony. [speak. 4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world: now lies he there, And none so poor to do him reverence. O masters, if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mntiny and rage, I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, Who, you all know, are honourable men: I will not do them wrong; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you, Than I will wrong such honourable men. But here's a parchment with the seal of Casar,-I found it in his closet,—'tis his will:

Let but the commons hear this testament, Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,-And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wonnds,

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it as a rich legacy Unto their issue.

IAntony. 4 Cit. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will. [not read it;

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd yon. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men; And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar, It will inflame yon, -it will make yon mad: 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;

For, if you should, O, what would come of it!
4 Cit. Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony; You shall read us the will, -Casar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?

Scene I.—Alexandria. A Room in Cleopatra's Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes, That o'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn

The office and devotion of their view Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart,

Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper, And is become the bellows and the fan To cool a gipsy's lust. [Flourish within. Look where they come:

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see!

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Cleo. If it be love, indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him: He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us anything.

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome. Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people, How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Rome. A Street.

Enter CINNA the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unlucky charge my fantasy: I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

I Cit. What is your name?

2 Cit. Whither are you going? 3 Cit. Where do you dwell?

4 Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor?

2 Cit. Answer every man directly. 1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.

4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.

3 Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I ling? Where do I dwell? Am I a married going? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly. Wisely, I say I am a bachelor.

2 Cit. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry: you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral. I Cit. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2 Cit. That matter is answered directly. 4 Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.

Cin. Briefly I dwell by the Capitol.

3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly. Cin. Truly my name is Cinna.

I Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator. Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

4 Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands: to Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all: some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away, go!

ACT IV.

Exeunt.

A room in Antony's Scene I.-Rome. House.

> ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Prick him down, Antony.

Prick him down, Antony.

Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony. Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him. But, Lepidus, go yon to Cæsar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine

How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here? Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

Exit LEPIDUS. Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,

Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, The threefold world divided, he should stand Oue of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,

In our black sentence and proscription. [You: Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than And though we lay these honours on this man, To ease ourselves of divers slanderons loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold. To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down his load, and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears

And gaze in commons. Oct. You may do your will: But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender: It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on,-His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit. And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth; A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds

On abject orts and imitations, Which, out of use and stal'd by other men, Begin his fashion: do not talk of him But as a property. And now, Octavius, Listen great things .- Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers: we must straight make head:

Therefore let our alliance be combin'd, Our best friends made, our means stretch'd; And let us presently go sit in council, How covert matters may be best disclos'd,

And open perils surest answered. Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies; And some that smile have in their hearts, I Millions of mischiefs. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before BRUTUS'S Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, Drum. and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them.

Bry. Stand, ho! Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.
Bru. What now, Lucilius! is Cassins near? Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come To do you salutation from his master. [PIN. gives a letter to BRU. Sooth. Your fortunes are alike. Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars. Sooth. I have said. Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it? Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend!-Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune!—O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Iris, I beseech theel Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a hearthear that breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isls, keep decorum, and fortune him accordinglyl

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do'tl

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony. Not he; the queen. Char.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord? No, lady. Eno. Was he not here? Cleo. Char. No, madam. [sudden Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobar-

bus. Eno. Madami

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither.—
Where's Alexas? [proaches [proaches. Alex. Here, at your service.-My lord ap-Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us. [Exeunt Cleo., Eno., Char., Iras, Alex. and Soothsayer.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius.

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Cæsar;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst? [teller. Mess. The nature of bad news infects the Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.-On:-

Things that are past are done with me.—'Tis thus;

Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death I hear him as he flatter'd.

Labienus,-This is stiff news,—hath, with his Parthian of nothing but the finest part of pure love: we force, Extended Asia from Euphrates; His conquering banner shook from Syria . To Lydia and to Ionia; Whilst, Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say, Mess.

O; my lord! Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue:

Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults With such full license as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds told us When our quick minds lie still; and our ills Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the newsl Speak therel

1 Att. The man from Sicyon,—is there such an one?

2 Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear,-These strong Egyptian fetters I must break, Or lose myself in dotage.—

Enter a second Messenger.

What are you? 2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she? 2 Mess. In Sicyon: [serious

Her length of sickness, with what else more Importeth thee to know, this bears.

Gives a letter. Ant. Forbear me. Exit second Messenger. There's a great spirit gonel Thus did I desire

What our contempts do often hurl from us, We wish it ours again; the present pleasure, By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone; The hand could pluck her back that shov'd

I must from this enchanting queen break off: Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch.—Ho, Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?
Ant. I must with haste from hence.
Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women: we see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought. Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not!

Bru. No. Cas. What, durst not tempt him!

Вти. For your life you durst not. Cas. Do not presume too much noon my love; I may do that I shall he sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats; For I am arm'd so strong in honesty That they pass by me as the idle wind. Which I respect not. I did send to you For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;

For I can raise no money by vile means: By heaven, I had rather coin my heart, And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash By any indirection; -I did send To you for gold to pay my legions, (Cassius? Which you denied me: was that done like Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so? When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous, To lock such rascal counters from his friend Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts. Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did. Cas. I did not: he was but a fool that brought My answer hack .- Brutus hath riv'd my heart: friend should hear his friend's infirmities. But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults. Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults. appear Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do come, As huge as high Olympus. Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius, For Cassius is aweary of the world: Hated by one he loves; hrav'd by his hrother; Check'd like a bondman: all his faults observ'd Set in a notehook, learn'd, and conn'd by rote, To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep My spirit from mine eyes!—There is my dagger,

And here my naked hreast; within, a heart Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold: If that thou he'st a Roman, take it forth; I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:

Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for I know When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Sheathe your dagger: Be angry when you will, it shall have scope; Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour. O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb, That carries anger as the fiint bears fire; Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark, And straight is cold again

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd To be hut mirth and laughter to his Brutus. When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?

Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus, Bru.

What's the matter? Cas: Have not you love enough to hear with Ime

When that rash humour which my mother gave Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth,

When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, He'll think your mother chides, and leave you Noise within.

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge hetween 'em; 'tis not meet

They he alone. Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them. Poet. [Within.] Nothing hut death shall stay Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius and TITINITIS.

Cas. How nowl what's the matter?

Poet. For shame, you generals! what do you mean! fbe: Love, and be friends, as two such men should For I have seen more years, I'm sare, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic rhymel [hence!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; tis his fashion. Bru. I'll know his humour when he knows his time: fools?

What should the wars do with these jigging Companion hence!

Cas. Away, away, he gonel

Exit Poet. Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, hid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night. Cas. And come yourselves, and hring Messala with von Immediately to us.

[Exeunt Lucil. and. Tit. Lucius, a bowl of winel Bru. Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs. Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man hears sorrow better.-Portia is dead.

Cas. Hal Portial

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!-

Upon what sickness?

Impatient of my absence, Bru. And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony

Have made themselves so strong; for with her death

That tidings came; with this she fell distract, And, her attendants, absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so? Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods.

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge By any desperate change. My more particular, And that which most with you should safe my going.

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness:—can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen: Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best.

See when and where she died.

Cleo.

O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,

In Fulvia's death how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease, As you shall give the advice. By the fire That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;— But let it be:—I am quickly ill and well, So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear; And give true evidence to his love, which stands An honourable trial.

Clco. So Fulvia told me.
I pr'ythee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood: no more. Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—
Cleo. And target.—Still he mends;
But this is not the best:—look, pr'ythee,
Charmian,

How this Herculean Roman does become The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it;
That you know well: something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty Holds idleness your subject, I should take you

For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with youl upon your sword
Sit laurel victoryl and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come
Our separation so abides, and files,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence ficeting, here remain with thee.
Away!
[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Rome. An Apartment in CESAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSER, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Cas. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Casar's natural vice to hate

Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news:—he fishes, drinks, and wastes

The lamps of night in revel: is not more manlike Than Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy lor More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, Youchsal'd to think he had partners: you shall find there

A man who is the abstract of all faults That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness: His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven, More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not

Amiss to tumble on the bcd of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say this becomes him.—

As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must Antony

No way excuse his soils when we do bear So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd His vacancy with his voluptuousness, Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones Call on him for't: but to confound such time, That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

As his own state and ours,—'tis to be chid As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge, Pawn their experience to their present pleasure, And so robel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done: and every hour,

Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea; And it appears he is belov'd of those That only have fear'd Cæsar: to the ports The discontents repair, and men's reports

Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less:

It hath been taught us from the primal state

That he which is was wish'd until he were;

And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth love, [body,

Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common Like to a vagabound flag upon the stream, Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide, To rot itself with motion.

th thee. Mess. Cresar, I bring thee word, [Exeunt.] Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates, Bru. Bear with me, good hoy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, And touch thy instrument a strain or two? Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my hov: I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing. Luc. It is my duty, sir. Imight:

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy I know young hloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well doue; and thou shalt sleep

again;

I will not hold thee loug: if I do live I will he good to thee. [Music and a Song. This is a sleepy tune.—O murderous slumber. Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my hoy That plays the music?—Geutle knave, goodnight; I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee: If thou dost uod, thou hreak'st thy instrument: I'll take it from thee; and, good hoy, goodnight .-Let me see, let me see; -is not the leaf turn'd awob

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think. Sits down.

Enter the Ghost of CESAR.

How ill this taper hurns!-Ha! who comes here? I think it is the weakness of mine eves That shapes this monstrous apparitiou. It comes upon me:—Art thou anything? Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil, That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare? Speak to me what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus. Why com'st thou? Ghost. To tell Philippi. To tell thee thou shalt see me at · Bru. Well; Theu I shall see thee again?

Ay, at Philippi. Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, theu.-Exit Ghost.

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest: Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee .-Boy Lucius!—Varro! Claudius!—sirs, awake!— Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument. -Lucins, awake!

Luc. My lord?

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry. Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou see anything?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. - Sirrah, Claudius! Fellow, thou, awakel

Var. My lord? Clau. My lord? Bru. Why did you cry so out, sirs, in your sleep? Var. and Clau. Did we, my lord? Вти.

Var. No, my lord, I saw uothing. Clau.

Nor I, my lord. Bru. Go and commend me to my hrother Cassius:

Bid him set on his powers hetimes hefore, And we will follow.

Var. and Clay. It shall he doue, my lord. Exeunt.

ACT V.

Scene I .- The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS. ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered: You said the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions; It proves not so: their hattles are at hand They mean to warn us at Philippi here, Answering hefore we do demand of them. Ant. Tut, I am in their hosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it: they could he conteut To visit other places; and come down
With fearful hravery, thinking by this face
To fasteu in our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals: The enemy comes ou in gallant show; Their bloody sign of hattle is hung out, And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your hattle softly ou, Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent? Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. March.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army: LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, Army; Lucilius, and others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley. Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk. fbattle?

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of Ant. No. Cæsar, we will answer on their (words.

charge. blake forth; the generals would have some [men? Oct. Stir not until the signal. Bru. Words hefore hlows: is it so, country-Oct. Not that we love words hetter, as you

Bru. Good words are hetter than had strokes,

Octavius. Ant. In your had strokes, Brutus, you give good words: Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,

Crying, Long live! hail, Cæsar! Antouy, The posture of your blows are yet unknown;

But for your words, they roh the Hybla hees, And leave them houeyless. Not stingless too. Ant.

Bru. O yes, and soundless too; Ay: saw you anything? | For you have stol'n their huzzing, Antony, Cleo. Who's born that day When I forget to send to Antony Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—

Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I. Charmian, Ever love Casar so?

Char. O that brave Cæsarl
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!

Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Casarl

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth If thou with Cæsar paragon again My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,

I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment:—cold in blood,
To say as I said then!—but, come, away;
Get me ink and paper: he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt.

[Execunt.

ACT II.

Scene I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist

The deeds of justest men.

Mene.

Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays the thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers

Deny us for our good; so find we profit

By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors: Cæsar gets money where

He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both, Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cæsar and Lepidus Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry. Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

Men. Where have you this? Its tales.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together, [love,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!

Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite;
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour Even till a Lethe'd duliness.

Enter VARRIUS.

Now now, Varrius!

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:—

Who's born that day Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Lattony
Latter A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter A better ear.—Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm

For such a petty war; his soldiership

Is twice the other twain: but let us rear

The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck

The ne'er lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope Casar and Antony shall well greet together; His wife that's dead did trespasses to Casar; His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think, Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas, How lesser enmities may give way to greater. Were't not that we stand up against them all, 'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves;

For they have entertained canse enough To draw their swords: but how the fear of us May cement their divisions, and bind up The petty difference, we yet not know. Be't as our gods will have't! It only stands Our lives upon to use our strongest hands. Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Rome. A Room in the House of Lepidus.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, And shall become you well, to entreat your captain

To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave't to-day.

Let. Tis not a time For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep.

Your speech is passion:
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ARTORY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder Cæsar.

Enter CESAR, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthiz: Hark, Ventidius.

Cæs. I do not know, Mecaenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends, [not That which combin'd us was most great, and let A leaner action rend us. What's amiss, May it be gently heard: when we debate Our trivial difference loud, we do commit

Cas. This hill is far enough.-Look, look, Titinius:

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire? Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lor'st me,

Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops And here again, that I may rest assur'd Whether youd troops are friend or enemy.

Til. I will be here again even with a thought. Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;

My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius And tell me what thou not'st about the field Exit PINDARUS. This day I breathed first: time is come round,

And where I did begin there shall I end; My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!
Cas. What news?
Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about

With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;-Yet he spurs on .- Now they are almost on him: Now, Titinius!-now some light:-O, he lights too:-He's ta'en; -and, hark! they shout for joy. Shout.

Come down, behold no more. O, coward that I am, to live so long, To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, sirrah: In Parthia did I take thee prisoner; And then I swore thee, saving of thy life, That whatsoever I did hid thee do Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath!

Now he a freeman; and with this good sword, That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this hosom.

Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hills; And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, Guide thou the sword .- Cæsar, thou are re-veng'd, Even with the sword that kill'd thee. Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have heen, Durst I have done my will. O Cassius! Far from this country Pindarus shall run, Where never Roman shall take note of him.

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius Is overthrown hy noble Brutus' power, As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius. Mes. Where did you leave him?

All disconsolate, Tit. With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill. Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart! Mes. Is not that he? No, this was he, Messala,

But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun,

As in thy red rays thon dost sink to-night. So in his red blood Cassius' day is set, The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone: Clonds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed. Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this

O hateful error, melancholy's child, Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd.

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth, But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee! Tit. What, Pindarus! where art thou, Pin-dams? Mes. Seek him, Titinius: whilst I go to meet . . The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it; For piercing steel and darts envenomed Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus Shall be as welcome.

As tidings of this sight.
Hie you, Messala, Exit MESSALA.

And I will seek for Pindarus the while. Why didst thou send me forth, hrave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me giv't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas, thou hast misconstru'd everything. But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow; Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his hidding .- Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Cassius .-By your leave, gods.—This is a Roman's part: Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. Dies.

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it. Bru. Titinius' face is upward. He is slain. Cato.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet! Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords [Low clorums. In our own proper entrails.

Cato. Brave Titinius!
Look, whe'r he have not crown'd dead Cassius! Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?-

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! It is impossible that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow. - Friends, I owe more tears To this dead man than you shall see me pay .-I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his hody: His funerals shall not he in our camp, Lest it discomfort us .- Lucilius, come;

And come, young Cato; let us to the field.-Laheo and Flavius, set our hattles on:-'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night We shall try fortune in a second fight.

[Excumt.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity, To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts With an unslipping knot, take Antony Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims No worse a husband than the best of men; Whose virtue and whose general graces speak That which none else can utter. By this marriage,

All little jealousies, which now seem great, And all great fears, which now import their dangers,

Would then be nothing: truths would then be

Where now half tales be truths: her love to both Would, each to other and all loves to both, Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke; For 'tis a studied, not a present thought, By duty ruminated.

Will Cæsar speak? Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd With what is spoke already.

What power is in Agrippa, Ant. If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,

To make this good?

The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never To this good purpose, that so fairly shows, Dream of impediment!-Let me have thy hand: Further this act of grace; and from this hour The heart of brothers govern in our loves And sway our great designs!

There is my hand. A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother Did ever love so dearly: let her live To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Happily, amen! Lep. Ant. I did not think to draw my sword

'gainst Pompey; For he hath laid strange courtesies and great Of late upon me: I must thank him only, Lest my remembrance suffer ill report; At heel of that, defy him.

Time calls upon's: Lep. Of us must Pompey presently be sought,

Or else he seeks out us.

Where lies he? Ant. Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength By land?

Cæs. Great and increasing: but by sea He is an absolute master.

So is the fame. Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it: Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we The business we have talk'd of.

With most gladness; And do invite you to my sister's view,

Whither straight I'll lead you.

Let us, Lepidus,

Not lack your company. Noble Antony. Lep.

Not sickness should detain me. [Flourish. -Exeunt Cas., Ant., and Lep.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir. Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecœnas!—my honourable friend, Agrippa!-Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feasts. which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus. Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne. Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold; Purple the sails, and so perfumed that The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver, made Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and

The water which they beat to follow faster. As amorous of their strokes. For her own person.

It beggar'd all description: she did lie In her pavilion,-cloth-of-gold of tissue,-O'er-picturing that Venus where we see The fancy out-work nature: on each side her Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did. cool,

And what they undid did.

O, rare for Antony! Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereids, So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes, And made their bends adornings: at the helm A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands That yarely frame the office. From the barge A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast Her people out upon her; and Antony, Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy, Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too, And made a gap in nature.

Rare Egyptian! Agr. Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her, Invited her to supper: she replied

It should be better he became her guest; Which she entreated: our courteous Antony Whom ne'er the word of No woman heard speak, Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast.

And, for his ordinary, pays his heart For what his eyes eat only

Royal wench! Agr. She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed: He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

I saw her once Eno. Hop forty paces through the public street; And having lost her breath, she spoke and panted, all:

Lucil. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.
Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?
Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them

All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, This was a man!
Oct. According to his virtue, let us use him
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like soldier, order'd honourably.—
So, call the field to rest: and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

[Execut.

Gracious madam,

I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn, Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed; Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst I wore his sword Philippan.

Will't please you hear me? Mess. Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Cesar, or not captive to him, I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee.

Madam, he's well. Mess.

Well said. Cleo. Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Thou 'rt an honest man. Cleo. Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever. Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me. Mess. But yet, madam,- Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay The good precedence; fie upon but yet! But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together: he's friends with Cæsar In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report:

He's bound unto Octavia.

For what good turn? Cleo. Mess. For the best turn i' the bed I am pale, Charmian. Cleo.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon Re-enter Charmian and Messenger.

Come hither, sir. Though it be honest, it is never good To bring bad news: give to a gracious message An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt.

I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married? I cannot hate thee worser than I do

If thou again say Yes. He is married, madam. Mess. Cleo. The gods confound theel dost thou hold there still!

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsaver.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas. where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O that I knew this husband, which you say must charge his horns with gerlands!

Alex. Soothsaver. Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?-Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy A little I can read. Alex. Show him your hand.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch. Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be-drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water. Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman bas a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal bearts. Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If be do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir? Eno. 'Tis true.

[getber.

Men. Then is Casar and he forever knit to-Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not bave his wife so? Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is

Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married but his occasion here. Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away. Exeunt.

Scene VII.—On board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

r Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

x Serv. They have made him drink almsdrink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more, reconciles them to his entreaty and himself to the drink. 1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to bave a name in great men's fellowship: I bad as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a buge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter Cæsar, Antony, Leptons Pompey, Agrippa, Mecænas ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun; so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so. [Lepidus] Pom. Sit,—and some wine!—A bealth to Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside to POM.] Pompey, a word. Pom. [Aside to MEN.] Say in mine ear: what is't?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Forbear me till anon.-

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile? Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and, the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of? Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?
Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure. Pom. [Aside to MEN.] Go, hang, sir, bang!

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir!

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulviel
Ant. Dead.
Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein that when old robes are worn out there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat:—and, indeed, the tears live in an onion that should water this

For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Casar, and commands The empire of the sea; our slippery people,-Whose love is never link'd to the deserver Till his deserts are past,—begin to throw Pompey the Great, and all his dignities, Upon his son; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier: whose quality, going on, The sides o' the world may danger: much is breeding,

When thou once Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st Hirtius and Pansa, consuls at thy heel Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against, Though daintily brought up, with patience more Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink

The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge; Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets, The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh.

Which some did die to look on: and all this, It wounds thine bonour that I speak it now .-Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek

So much as lank'd not.

Leb. 'Tis pity of him. Cas. Let his shames quickly Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain Did show ourselves 'i the field; and to that end Assemble we immediate council: Pompey Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Casar. I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can he able To front this present time.

Czs. Till which encounter It is my business too. Farewell. [meantime Lep. Ferewell, my lord: what you shall know Of stirs abroad, I shall heseech you, sir, To let me he partaker.

Doubt not, sir; Cxs. ' I knew it for my hond. Exeunt.

SCENE V .- ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian,---Char. Madam? Cleo. Ha, ha!---

Give me to drink mandragora.

Why, madam? Char.

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time My Antony is away.

You think of him too much. Clco. O, 'tis treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so. Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardiani
Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing, I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has; 'tis well for thee That, heing unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed! [nothing Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do But what indeed is bonest to be done:

Yet bave I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian. Where think'st thou be is now? Stands be or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his borse? O bappy borse to bear the weight of Antonyl Do bravely, horsel for wott'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm And burgonet of men.-He's speaking now, Or murmnring, Where's my scrpent of old Nile? For so he calls me, -Now I feed myself With most delicions poison:-think on me, That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black, And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Cresar,

When thou wast here above the ground I was A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;

There would he anchor his aspect and die With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Sovereign of Egypt, haill unlike art thou Mark Alex. Cleo. How much unlike art thou Antonyl (hath Yet, coming from him, that great medicine With his tinct gilded thee .-

How goes it with my hrave Mark Antony? Alex. Last thing be did, dear queen, He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—

This orient pearl:-his speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine car must plack it thence. Alex. Good friend, quoth he, Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot, To mend the petty present, I will piece Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east, Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded.

And soberly did mount an arm-girt steed, Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke

Was heastly dumb'd by him.

Clco. What, was he sad or merry? Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes

Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry. Cleo. O well-divided disposition!-Note him. Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:

He was not sad, -- for be would shine on those That make their looks hy his; he was not merry,

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay In Egypt with his joy; but between both:
O beavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad or merry, The violence of either thee hecomes,

So does it no man else .- Mett'st thou my posts! Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers:

Why do you send so thick?

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins, Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults Can never be so equal that your love Can equally move with them. Provide your going; cost Choose your own company, and command what Your heart has mind to. Exeunt.

Scene V .- Athens. Another Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros! Eros. There's strange news come, sir. Eno. What, man? Supon Pompey. Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars Eno. This is old: what is the success? Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivality; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony? spurns Eros. He's walking in the garden-thus; and The rush that lies before him; cries, Fool Lepidus!

And threats the throat of that his officer That murder'd Pompey.

Our great navy's rigg'd. Eno.Eros? For Italy and Cæsar. More, Domitius; My lord desires you presently: my news

But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

Scene VI.-Rome. A Room in Casar's House.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, and MECENAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more,

In Alexandria: here's the manner of't:-I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleonatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet sat Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son, And all the unlawful issue that their lust [her Unto ! Since then hath made hetween them. He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her Of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Absolute queen.

This in the public eye? Mec. Cæs. I' the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings: Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia: she In the habiliments of the goddess Isis [ence, That day appear'd; and oft before gave audi- Up to a whore; who now are levying As 'tis reported, so.

Мес. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him. Cas. The people know it: and have now receiv'd

His accusations.

Agr.

Who does he accuse? Cæs. Cæsar: and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him His part o' the isle: then does he say he lent me Some shipping, unrestor'd: lastly, he frets That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd. Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger

I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel; That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that. Cæs. Nor must not, then, be yielded to in Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Octa. Hail, Cæsar, and my lordi hail, most dear Cæsarl

Cæs. That ever I should call thee castaway! Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause. [come not

Cæs. Whyhave you stol' nu ponusthus? Like Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of her approach Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way Should have borne men; and expectation fainted,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops: but you are come

A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented The ostentation of our love, which left unshown Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you By sea and land; supplying every stage With an augmented greeting.

Good my lord Octa. To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted My grieved ear withal: whereon I begg'd His pardon for return

Which soon he granted, Cæs. Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

Octa. Do not say so, my lord. I have eyes upon him, Cæs. And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now? My lord, in Athens. Octa.

Cæs. No, my most wronged sister; Cleo-[empire patra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his ibled The kings o' the earth for war: he hath assemMurder in healing wounds: then, noble partners,-

The rather for I earnestly beseech,iterms, Touch you the sourcest points with sweetest Nor curstness grow to the matter.

'Tis spoken well. Were we before our armies, and to fight,

I should do thus.

Cæs. Welcome to Rome. Ani.

Thank you. Cæs.

Sit, sir. Ant. Cæs. Nay, then. Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,

Or being, concern you not.

I must be laugh'd at Cæs. If, or for nothing or a little, I Should say myself offended, and with you

Chiefly i' the world; more laugh'd at that I Iname Once name you derogately, when to sound your

It not concern'd me. My being in Egypt, Casar, Ant.

What was't to you? Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt ;

Might be my question. How intend you, practis'd? Ant. Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent Sbrother i By what did here befall me. Your wife and Made wars upon me; and their contestation Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it; And have my learning from some true reports That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours; And make the wars alike against my stomach, Having alike your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel As matter whole you have not to make it with, It must not be with this.

You praise yourself Cæs. By laying defects of judgment to me; but You patch'd up your excuses.

Not so, not so; I know you could not lack, I am certain on't, Very necessity of this thought, that I, Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought, Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars Which 'fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, I would you had her spirit in such another:

The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffie

You may pace easy, but not such a wife. Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the Might go to wars with the women.

Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils, Cæsar,

Made out of her impatience,—which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too,—I grieving grant Did you too much disquiet: for that you must But say I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you When rioting in Alexandria; you Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. He fell npou me ere admitted: then Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want

Of what I was i' the morning; but next day I told him of myself; which was as much As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,

Out of our question wipe him. Cæs. You have broken . The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar! Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak:

The honour is sacred which he talks on now, Supposing that I lack'd it.—But on, Cæsar; The article of my oath.

Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them;

The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather; And then when poison'd hours had bound me np From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,

I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia, To have me out of Egypt, made wars here; For which myself, the ignorant motive, do So far ask pardon as befits mine honour To stoop in such a case.

Tis noble spoken. Le⊅. Mec. If it might please you to enforce no further

The griefs between ye: to forget them quite Were to remember that the present need Speaks to atone you

Worthily spoken, Mecenes. Lep. Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.

Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone. Cæs. I do not much dislike the matter, but The manner of his speech; for't cannot be We shall remain in friendship, our conditions So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew

What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge O' the world I would pursue it.

Give me leave, Cæsar.-Agr. Cæs. Speak, Agrippa. Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side, Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa: If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof

Were well desery'd of rashness. Ant. I am not married, Cæsar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Ant. Well, well:—away.

[Exzunt ANT., CLEO., and ENO.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows

Not in the power on't: so our leader's led, And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Can: Marcus Octavius, Marcius Justeius,
Publicola, and Cælius are for sea:

But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome His power went out in such distractions as Beguil'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you? Sold. They say one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour: and throes forth

Each minute some.

Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter CESAR, TAURUS, Officers, and others.

Cæs. Taurus,— Taur. My lord?

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole; provoke not battle Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed

The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies
Upon this jump.
[Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Another part of the Plain.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on you side o'
the hill,
In eye of Cæsar's battle; trom which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. (Exeunt.

Scene X .- Another part of the Plain.

Enter Canidius, marching with his land Army one way; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, with his Army, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer: The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder: To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!
Eno. What's thy passion?
Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence.
Where death is sure. You ribaudred nag of Egypt,—
Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' the midst o' the
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,—
The breese upon her, like a cow in June,— Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: [not Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof of The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting mallard.

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her: I never saw an action of such shame; Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, And sinks most lamentably. Had our general Been what he knew himself, it had gone well: O, he has given example for our fight Most grossly by how own!

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why, then, good-night indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fied. Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend What further comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render My legions and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. Pil yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't,— [hither: It is asham'd to hear me!—Friends, come I am so lated in the world that I Have lost my way forever:—I have a ship Laden with gold, take that, divide it; fly, And make your peace with Casar.

All. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards [gone;
To run and show their shoulders.—Friends, be
I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you; begone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you

Shall
Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Fray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint Which my despair proclaims; let that be left Toat she did make defect perfection. And, breathless, power hreathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly. Eno. Never; he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety: other women cloy

The appetites they feed; but she makes bungry Where most she satisfies: for vilest things Become themselves in her; that the holy priests Bless ber when she is riggisb.

Mec. If heauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle The heart of Antony, Octavia is

A blessed lottery to him. Agr.

Let us go .--Good Encharhus, make yourself my guest Whilst you abide here. Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them, and Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

All which time Before the gods my knee shall how my prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good-night, sir.—My Octavia, Read not my hiemishes in the world's report: I have not kept my square; hut that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good-night, dear lady.

Octa. Good-night, sir.

Cas. Good-night. [Exeunt CEs. and OCTA. Enter Soothsaver.

An.. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt? nor you Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, Thither! Ant. If you can, your reason?

I see it in Sooth. My motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet Hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, Imine? Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Casar's or Sooth. Cæsar's

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side: Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee,

Nohle, courageous, high, unmatchable, Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel Becomes afear'd, as being o'erpower'd: there-

Make space enough hetween you.

Speak this no more. Ant. Sooth. To none hut thee; no more hut when to thee.

If thon dost play with him at any game, Thou art sure to lose; and of that natural inck He heats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre thickens

When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit Is all afraid to govern thee near him; But, he away, 'tis noble.

Get thee gone: Ant. Say to Ventidius I would speak with him:- He shall to Parthia .- Be it art or hap, He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;-And in our sports my better cunning faints Under his chance: if we draw lots he speeds; His cocks do win the battle still of mine, When it is all to naught; and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt: And though I make this marriage for my peace. P the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius; You must to Parthia: your commission's ready, Follow me and receive it. Excunt.

Scene IV .- Rome. A Street.

Enter Lepidus, MecEnas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony

Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow. Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,

Which will become you hoth, farewell. Mec.

We shall. As I conceive the journey, be at the mount Before you, Lepidus.

Your way is shorter; My purposes do draw me much shout: You'll win two days noon me.

Mec. and Agr. Sir, good success! Lcp. Farewell. Excunt.

Scene V .- Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS and Attendants.

Cleo. Give me some music, -music, moody food Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards:

Char. Myarmis sore; hest play with Mardian. Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd As with a woman. - Come, you'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Clco. And when good-will is show'd, though't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. Pil none now:-Give me mine angle, -we'll to the river: there, My music playing far off, I will hetray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my hended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up I'll think them every one an Antony,

And say, Ah ha! you're caught. Twas meny when You wager'd on your angling; when your diver Did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he [Exit Soothsayer. I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this? Eno. Antony only, that would make his will ord of his reason. What though you fied Lord of his reason. From that great face of war, whose several ranges Frighted each other why should we follow? The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point, When half to half the world oppos'd, he being The mered question: 'twas a shame no less Than was ms 1000 . And leave his navy gazing. Prythee, peace. Than was his loss to course your flying flags Enter Antony, with Euphronius.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so

Will yield us up.

He says so. Eup.

Let her know't .-Ant. To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head. And he will fill thy wishes to the brim With principalities.

That head, my lord? Cleo. Ant. To him again: tell him he wears the

Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular: his coins, ships, legions, May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child as soon fore As i' the command of Cæsar: I dare him there-To lay his gay comparisons apart, And answer me declin'd, sword against sword, Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the

Against a sworder.—I see men's judgments are 'A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them, To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Cesar will Answer his emptiness!-Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd

His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

 A messenger from Cæsar. Cleo. What, no more ceremony?-See, my women!nose Against the blown rose may they stop their That kneel'd unto the buds .- Admit him, sir.

[Exit Attendant. Eno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square.

The loyalty well held to fools does make Our faith mere folly:-yet he that can endure To follow with allegiance a fallen lord Does conquer him that did his master conquer, And earn a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

7:1

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly. Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cesar has;
Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's.

Thyr. So.-Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st, ... Furtber than he is Cæser.

Go on: right royal. Cleo. Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. 0! [he Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deserv'd.

He is a god, and knows Cleo. What is most right: mine honour was not

But conquer'd merely.

To be sure of that, I will ask Antony .- Sir, sir, thou art so leaky That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

Shall I say to Cæsar Thyr. What you require of him? for he partly begs To be desir'd to give. It much would please him That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits To hear from me you had left Antony, And put yourself under his shroud, who is The universal landlord.

What's your name?. Cleo.

Thyr. My name is Thyreus. Cleo. Most kind messenger, Say to great Casar this:-in deputation I kiss his conquering hand: tell him I am prompt To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel: Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear.

The doom of Egypt.

'Tis your noblest course.

'Tagether. Wisdom and fortune combating together, If that the former date but what it can, No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand. Your Cæsar's father -Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Favours, by Jove that thunders!-Ant. What art thou, fellow?

One that but performs Thyr. The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest To have command obey'd.

You will be whipp'd. Eno. [Aside.] Ant. Approach there!-Ay, you kite!-Now, gods and devils! Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried. Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth And cry, Your will? Have you no ears? I am

I faint-O Iras, Charmian!-'tis no matter. Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her hair: -bring me word quickly.

Exit ALEXAS. Let him for ever go:-let him not-Charmian. Though be be painted one way like a Gorgon, T' other way he's a Mars.—Bid you Alexas To MARDIAN.

Bring me word how tall she is .- Pity me. Charmian But do not speak to me.-Lead me to my chamber. Exeunt.

Scene VI.-Near Misenum.

Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one side, with drum and trumpet; at the other, CASAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECENAS, with Soldiers marchina.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine:

And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs. Most meet That first we come to words; and therefore have

Our written purposes before us sent; Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword, And carry back to Sicily much tall youth That else must perish bere.

Pom. To you all three, The senators alone of this great world Chlef factors for the gods,-I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son and friends; since Julius Cosar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, There saw you labouring for him. What was't That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire; and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,

To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it Hatb made me rig my navy; at whose burden The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome Cast on my noble father.

Take your time. Cæs.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with [know'st thy sails; We'll speak with thee at sea: at land thon

How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house: But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, Remain in't as thou mayst.

Leb. Be pleas'd to tell us,-For this is from the present,-how you take

The offers we have sent you.

There's the point. Cas. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh What it is worth embrac'd.

And what may follow, Cæs. To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon, I known, sir.

To part with unback'd edges, and bear back Our targes undinted.

Cæs., Ant., and Lep. That's our offer. Pom. I came before you here a man prepar'd To take this offer: but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience:-though I lose The praise of it by telling, you must know, When Cæsar and your brother were at blows, Your mother came to Sicily, and did find Her welcome friendly.

I bave heard it, Pompey; Ant. And am well studied for a liberal thanks Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me bave your hand: I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and, thanks to you, hither:

That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, For I have gain'd by it.

Since I saw you last Cæs. There is a change upon you.

Pom.Well,'I know not What counts harsb fortuae casts upon my face; But in my bosom shall she never come To make my heart ber vassal.

Lep. Well met here. Pom, I hope so, Lepidus.-Thus we are

I crave our composition may be written, And seal'd between us.

That's the next to do. Cæs. Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part; and let's Draw lots who shall begin.

That will I, Pompey. Ant. Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir. Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much bave I heard:

And I have heard Apollodorus carried,-Eno. No more of that:-he did so. What, I pray you? Pom.

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress. Pom. I know thee now: how far'st thon, soldier?

Well; Eno. And well am like to do; for I perceive Four feasts are toward.

Let me sbake thy hand; I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight, When I have envied thy behaviour.

I never lov'd you much; but I ba' prais'd ye, When you have well deserv'd ten times as much As I have said you did.

Enjoy thy plainness, Pom.

It nothing ill becomes thee. Aboard my galley I invite you all:

Will you lead, lords? Cas., Ant., and Lep. Show us the way, sir. Pom. Come.

[Excunt all but MEN., and ENO. Men. [Aside.] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.-You and I have Restores his heart: when valour preys on reason It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. Exit.

ACT IV.

Scene L.—Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria. Enter CESAR reading a letter; AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS, and others.

Cæs. He calls me boy; and chides as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat, Cæsar to Antony:-let the old ruffian know I have many other ways to die; meantime Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think, When one so great begins to rage, he's bunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction:—never anger Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads Know that to-morrow the last of many battles We mean to fight .- Within our files there are, Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done: And feast the army; we have store to do't, And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! Exeunt.

SCENE II .- ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius. Eno. No. Ant. Why should he not? fortune, Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better He is twenty men to one. Ant. To-morrow, soldier,

By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well? Eno. I'll strike, and cry, Take all.

Ant.Well said; come on.-Call forth my household servants: let's to-night Be bounteous at our meal.-

Enter Servants.

Give me thy hand, Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou;-Thou,—and thou,—and thou;—you have serv'd me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What means this? Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots

Out of the mind.

And thou art honest too. Ant. I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbidi Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me tonight:

Scant not my cups; and make as much of me As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What does he mean? Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] To make his followers

Tend me to-night; Ant. Maybe it is the period of your duty: Haply you shall not see me more; or if. A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow: You'll serve another master. I look on you As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master Married to your good service, stay till death: Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, And the gods yield you for 't!

What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep; And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd: for shame, ...

Transform us not to women.

Ho, he, ho! Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus! Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends, You take me in too dolorous a sense; you For I spake to you for your comfort,—did desire To burn this night with torches: know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you Where rather I'll expect victorious life Than death and honour. Let's to supper; come,

And drown consideration.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ALEXANDRIA. Before the Palace

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

r Sold. Brother, good-night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

r Sold. Nothing. What news? | to you. 2 Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good-night I Sold. Well. sir, good-night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch. 3 Sold. And you. Good-night, good-night.

[The first two place themselves at their posts. 4 Sold. Here we: [The third and fourth our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope Our landmen will stand up.

'Tis a brave army, з Sold.

And full of purpose. Music as of hautboys under the stage.

4 Sold. Peace, what noise? List, list!

I Sold.

2 Sold. Hark!

r Sold. Music i' the air.

Under the earth. 3 Sold.

4 Sold. It signs well, does it not?

3 Sold. Peace, I say! I Sold.

[lov'd, What should this mean? 2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony

Now leaves him.

Pom. [Aside to MEN.] I think thou'rt mad-The matter? [Rises and walks aside. Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes. Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith.

What's else to sav?--

Be jolly, lords. These quicksands, Lepidus, Änt. Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world? What say'st thou? Pom. Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

That's twice. Pom. How should that be?

But entertain it, and, Men. Although thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well? Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: Whate'er the ocean pales or sky inclips Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Show me which way. Pom.Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors.

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats: All then is thine.

Ah, this thou shouldst have done, Pom. And not have spoke on't! In me 'tis villainy; In thee't had been good service. Thou must

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour; Mine honour it. Repent that e'er thy tongue Hath so hetray'd thine act: being done unknown.

I should have found it afterwards well done: But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never find it more. Pom. This health to Lepidus! Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him,

Pompey. Eno. Here's to thee, Menasl

Men. Enobarhus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid. Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lep. Mcn. Why? 'A bears Eno.

The third part of the world, man; see'st not? Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,

That it might go on wheelsl

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels:

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, Here is to Cæsar!

Cæs. I could well forbear't. It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain And it grows fouler.

Be a child o' the time. Cæs. Possess it, I'll make answer: But I had rather fast from all four days Than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my hrave emperor!

[To ANTONY. Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier. Ant. Come, let's all take hands, sense Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our In soft and delicate Lethe.

All take hands.-Make battery to our ears with the loud music:-The while I'll place you: then the boy shall sing:

The holding every man shall beat as lond As his strong sides can volley, Music plays. Eno. places them hand in hand.

Come, thou monarch of the vine Plumpy Bacchus with pink eynel In thy fats our cares be drown'd. With the grapes our hairs he crown'd: Cup us, till the world go round, Cup us, till the world go round!

Cæs. What—would you more?—Pompey, good-night. Good brother, Let me request you off: our graver husiness Frowns at this levity. - Gentle lords, let's part; You see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarh

Is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost night.-Antick'd usall. What needs more words. Good-Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.
Ant. And shall, sir: give's your hand.

Pom. O Antony. You have my father's house, -hut, what? we are friends.

Come, down into the hoat.

Take heed you fall not. Eno. Exeunt POM., CES., ANT., and Attendants. Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cahin.— These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!— Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd, sound out! [A flourish of trumpets, with drums. Eno. Hool says 'a.—There's my cap.

Men. Hoo!-noble captain, come. [Excunt.

ACT III.

Scene I .- A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, in triumph, with SILIUS and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne in front.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck: and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death Make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body Belore our army.—Thy Pacorus, Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus. Noble Ventidins, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is

The fugitive Parthians follow: spur through Media.

That Antony may seem to spend his fury Upon himself. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.
Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry On affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar, And leave his master Antony: for this pains Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the

That fell away, have entertainment, but No honourable trust. I have done ill; Of which I do accuse myself so sorely That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CESAR'S.

Sold. Encharbus, Antony Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus: the messenger Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you. Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus. I tell you true: best you sai'd the bringer Out of the host; I must attend mine office. Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. Œxit.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth And feel I am so most. O Antony, [paid Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart: If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't.

I feel, I fight against thee!—No: I will go seek Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits My latter part of life. Exit.

Scene VII.—Field of Battle between the Cambs.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA and others.

Agr. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression [Exeunt. Exceeds what we expected.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had driven them home .

With clouts about their heads.

Thou bleed'st apace. Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T, But now 'tis made an H.

They do retire .. Ant.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes: I have vet:

Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves.

For a fair victory Let us score their backs, And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind: Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee Once for thy spritely comfort, and tenfold For thy good valour. Come thee on. Scar. I'll hait after. [Excunt.

Scene VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Enter ANTONY marching; SCARUS A larum.and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before, [morrow, And let the queen know of our gests .- To-Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all; For doughty-handed are you, and have fought Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful

Wash the congealment from your wounds, and The honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand;

[To SCARUS.

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' the world, Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and Through proof of harness to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphing.

Lord of lords! Cleo. O infinite virtue, com'st thou smiling from.

The world's great snare uncaught? Ant. My nightingale, What, girll We have beat them to their beds.

[yet ha' we though grey Do something mingle with our younger brown; A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man; Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand;-Kiss it, my warrior: he hath fought to-day As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape. I'll give thee, friend, Cleo.

An armour all of gold; it was a king's. Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled Like holy Phoebus' car.—Give me thy hand: Through Alexandria make a jolly march; Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them: Had our great palace the capacity To camp this host, we all would sup together, And drink carouses to the next day's fate, Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters, With brazen din blast you the city's ear; Make mingle with our rattling tabourines; That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together, Applauding our approach.

[Exeunt.

Scene IX.—CESAR'S Camp.

Sentinels at their Post.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour, We must return to the court of guard: the night

Cæs. Adieu; be happyl Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light

To thy fair way! Cas. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia. Ant. Farewell!

[Trumpets sound within. Exeunt

SCENE III .- ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

CHARMIAN, IRAS, and CLEOPATRA, ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow? Half afear'd to come. Alex. Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter a Messenger.

Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd.

Clen. That Herod's head I'll have: but how? when Antony is gone, Through whom I might command it?-Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty, Didst thou behold Cleo.

"Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen. Cleo. Where? Mess Madam, in Rome I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony. Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam. Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill tongu'd or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low voic'd. ther long. Cleo. That's not so good:-he cannot like Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible. Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue and dwarfish!-

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

She creeps,-Her motion and her station are as one; She shows a body rather than a life, A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain? Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note. He's very knowing; Cleo. I do perceiv't:-there's nothing in her yet:

The fellow has good judgment. Char. Excellent. Cleo. Guess at her years, I prythee.

Madam, Mess. She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow!-Charmian, hark! Mess. And I do think she's thirty. Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness. Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam: and her forehead As low as she would wish it.

Clco. There's gold for thee. Thou must not take my former sharpness ill:-I will employ thee back again; I find thee Most fit for business: go make thee ready; Our letters are prepar'd. Exit Messenger. Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much That so I harried min.
This creature's no such thing.
Nothing, madam. That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend.

And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:

But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me Where I will write. All may be well enough. Char. I warrant you, madam. Excunt.

> Scene IV .- Athens. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,-That were excusable, that and thousands more Of semblable import,—but he hath wag'd New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it [uot To public ear: Spoke scantly of me: when perforce he could But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly He vented them; most narrow measure lent me: When the best hint was given him, he not took't.

Or did it from his teeth.

Octa. O my good lord. Believe not all; or, if you must believe, Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady, If this division chance, ne'er stood between, Praying for both parts: Sure the good gods will mock me presently When I shall pray, O, bless my lord and husband!

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud, O, bless my brother! Husband win, win brother, Prays and destroys the prayer; no midway 'Twixt these extremes at all.

Gentle Octavia. Ant. Let your best love draw to that point which seeks

Best to preserve it: if I lose mine houour I lose myself: better I were not yours Than yours so branchless. But, as you re-flady, quested, Yourself shall go between's: the meantime, haste: I'll raise the preparation of a war

Shall stain your brother: make your coonest So your desires are yours. Thanks to my lord. Õcta.

The Jove of power make me, most week, most wesk. Wars 'twixt you twain would Your reconciler! As if the world should cleave, and that slain

Should solder up the rift.

If it be well to live; but better 'twere Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death Might have prevented many.—Eros, hol— The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me, Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage: Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon; And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club. Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall To the young Roman boy she hath sold me. and I fall Under this plot: she dies for't .- Eros. ho! Exit.

SCENE XIII.—ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my woman! O, he is more mad Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thes-Was never so emboss'd. Char. To the monument!

There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.

The soul and body rive not more in parting Than greatness going off.

To the monument!-Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself: Say that the last I spoke was Antony And word it, pr'ythee, piteously: hence, Mardian;

And bring me bow he takes my death.— Exeunt. To the monument!

SCENE XIV .- ALEXANDRIA. Another Room.

.. Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me? Eros. Ay, noble lord. Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion. A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock, A forked mountain, or blue promontory With trees upon't, that nod unto the world, And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;

They are black vesper's pageants.

Ay, my lord. Eros. Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct, As water is in water.

It does, my lord. lis Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain Even such a body: here I am Antony; Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave. I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,-Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine; Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't A million more now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph.-Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us Ourselves to end ourselves.—

Enter Mardian.

O, thy vile lady! She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony; My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy ennuch; peacel She bath betray'd me, and shall die the death. Mar. Death of one person can be paid but

And that she has discharg'd: what thou wouldst Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake Was, Antony! most noble Antony! Then in the midst a tearing groan did break

The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life. Thy name so buried in her.

Ānt.

Dead then? Mar. Dead. Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is Isafe And we must sleep .- That thou depart'st hence Does pay thy labour richly; go.

Exit Mardian. Off, pluck off;-The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep

The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sidest Heart, once be stronger than thy continent, Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.— No more a soldier.—Bruised pieces, go; You have been nobly borne.—From awhile.-Exit EROS.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now All length is torture. - Since the torch is out. Lie down, and stray no further: now all labour Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done. Erosl-I come, my queen.-Erosl-stay for

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops, . And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord? Since Cleopatra died, I have liv'd in such dishonour that the gods Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack The courage of a woman; less noble mind Than she which by her death our Cæsar tells, I am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn,

Eros, That, when the exigent should come,-which 110W Is come indeed—when I should see behind me The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and borror, that, on my command, Thou then wouldst kill me: do't; the time is come: Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cæsar thou defeat'st. Put colour in thy cheek.

Bocchus, the king of Lihya; Archelaus Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas; King Malchus of Arahia; King of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas, The kings of Mede and Lycaonia, with a More larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me, most wretched. That have my heart parted hetwixt two friends

That do afflict each other!

Cas. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our hreaking forth,
Till we perceiv'd hoth how you were wrong led
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;

But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unhewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome; Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods, To do you justice, make their ministers of us and those that love you. Best of comfort;

And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In its abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir? [90u Cxs. Most certain. Sister, welcome: pray Be ever known to patience: my dear'st sister! [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Antony's Camp near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENGBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why? [wars,
Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these
And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it? Cleo. If not denounc'd against us, why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—
If we should serve with horse and mares together [hear
The horse were merely lost; the mares would
A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle
Antony; (time,

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's What should not then he spar'd. He is already Traduc d for levity: and 'tis said in Rome That Photinus an eunuch and your maids Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against usl A charge we bear i'

the war,

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it; I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done. Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDHIS.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd

Than hy the negligent.

Ant.

A good rebuke,
Which might have well become the best of men
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By seal what else? Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Casar fought with Pompey: hut these effers.

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off; - And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd: Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people Ingross'd by swift impress; in Cæsar's fleet Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:

Their ships are yare; yours heavy: no disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away

The absolute soldiership you have hy land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
From firm security.

Ant.

I'll fight at sea.

Clco. I have sixty sails, Casar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;

And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cosar. But if we fail We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy husiness?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried:

descried;
Cæsar has taken Toryne. [possible;
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis imStrange that his power should he.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold hy land,
And our twelve thousand horse.—We'll to our ship:

Away, my Thetisl

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier?
Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdouht
This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians

And the Phonicians go a-ducking: we Have used to conquer standing on the earth

And fighting foot to foot.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

O sun, Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!-darkling stand The varying shore o' the world.—O Antony, Antony, Antonyi-Help, Charmian; help, Iras, i help,-

Help, friends below;-let's draw him hither. Ant. Peecel Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,

But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but wee 'tis sot Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I here importune death awhile, until Of many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear,-Dear my lord, pardon,-I dare not, Lest I be taken: not the imperious show Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall lhave ! Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe; Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me.-But come, come, Antony,lup;-

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee! Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport indeed!-How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness, That makes the weight: had I great Juno's power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,-[come;

Wishers were ever fools,-O, come, come, They draw ARTORY up.

And welcome, welcomel die where thou hast liv'd:

Onicken with kissing: had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out.

A heavy sight! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little. Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so [wheel, hizh That the false housewife Fortune break her Provok'd by my offence.

One word, sweet queen: Anl. Of Cæsar seek your honour, with your safety.-ΛI

Cleo. They do not go together.

Gentle, hear me: Ant. None about Cæsar trust but Proculeius

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;

None about Casar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts In feeding them with those my former fortunes Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world, The noblest; and do now not basely die, Not cowardly put off my helmet to My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going: I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die? Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty?-O, see, my women, [ANTONY dies. The crown o' the earth doth melt. - My lord! -O, wither'd is the garland of the war, The soldier's pole is fallen: young boys and Are level now with men: the odds is gone, And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon, [Faints.

O, quietness, lady! Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign. Char. Lady,- Madam,~ Iras. Char. O madam, madam, madam, Royal Egypt, Iras. Empress,

Char. Peace, peace, Irasl [manded Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and com-By such poor passion as the maid that milks And does the meanest chares.—It were for me To throw my sceptre at the injurous gods; To tell them that this world did equal theirs Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught Patience is sottish, and impatience does Become a dog thet's mad: then is it sin To rush into the secret house of death Ere death dare come to us?-How do you, women? (Charmian! What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, My noble girls!—Ah, women, women, look, Our lamp is spent, it's out!-Good sirs, take heart:inoble. We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's Let's do it after the high Roman fashion, And make death proud to take us.

This case of that huge spirit now is cold: Ah, women, women!-Come; we have no friend

AWS V

But resolution, and the briefest end. [Exeunt; those above bearing off ANTONY'S body.

ACT V.

Scene I .- CESAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Entet Cæsar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Me-CENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him that he mocks The panses that he makes. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit. Dol.

Enter DERCETAS with the sword of ANTONY.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st Appear thus to us? I am call'd Dercetas; ·Det. Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy

Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spoke, He was my master; and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.

Which leaves itself: to the sea-side straightway: | Some wine, within there, and our viands!-I will possess you of that ship and treasure. Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now:-Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command, Therefore I pray you:- I'll see you hy and hy. Sits down.

Enter CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS, EROS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him,-comfort him. Iras. Do, most dear queen.

Char. Do! why, what else? Cleo. Let me sit down. O Junol Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir? Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam,— Iras. Madam, O good empress,—

Eros. Sir, sir,—
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes;—he at Philippi kept His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I That the mad Brutus ended; he alone Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had In the brave squares of war: yet now-no matter.

Cleo. Ah, stand hy. Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen. Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Iros. Go to him, madam, speak to him: He is unqualitied with very shame.

Cleo. Well then .- sustain me: - O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches:

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but

Your comfort make the rescue

Ant. I have offended reputation,-A most unnoble swerving

Sir, the queen. [See Eros.

Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? How I convey my shame out of thine eyes By looking back, what I have left hehind 'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord, I little thought Forgive my fearful sails!

You would have follow'd.

Egypt, thou knew'st too well Ant. My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, And thou shouldst tow me after; o'er my spirit Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the hidding of the gods Command me.

O, my pardon! Cleo. Now I must Ant. To the young man send humble treaties, dodge And palter in the shifts of lowness; who With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd, Making and merring fortunes. You did know How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak hy my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Pardon, pardon! _Cleo. Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates All that is won and lost: give me a kiss; Even this repays me. -We sent our schoolmaster;

Is he come hack?—Love, I am full of lead.—

Fortune knows

We scorn her most when most she offers blows. Exeunt.

Scene XIL-CESAR'S Camp in Egypt.

Enter Casar, Dolabella, Thyreus. and others.

Cas. Let him appear that's come from An-Know you him?

Dol. Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster: An argument thet he is pluck'd, when hither He sends so poor a pinion of his wing, Which hea superfluous kings for messengers Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Cæs. Approach, and speak. Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony: I was of late as petty to his ends As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leef To his grand sea.

Cæs. Be't so; declare thine office. Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,

He lessens his requests; and to thee sues To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,

A private man in Athens: this for him. Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness; Suhmits her to thy might; and of thee craves The circle of the Prolemies for her heirs, Now hazarded to thy grace.

For Antony, Cæs. I have no ears to his request. The queen Of audience nor desire shall fail; so she From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend. Or take his life there: this if she perform She shall not sue unheard. So to them hoth.

Eup. Fortune pursue theel
Cas. Bring him through the bands. Cæs.

Exit EUPHRONICS. To try thy eloquence, now its time: despatch; From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,

To THYR. And in our name, what she requires; add more, From thine invention, offers: women are not In their best fortunes strong; but want will. perjure

The ne'er-touch'd vestel: try thy cunning. Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we Will answer as a law.

Cæsar, I go. Thyr.

Cas. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw, And what thou think'st his very action speaks In every power that moves.

Cæsar, I shall. [Exeunt. Thyr.

SCENE XIII.-ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN. and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Encharhus? Think, and die. Eno.

[Here Proculeius and two of the Guard ascend the Monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, having descended come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.

Guard her till Cæsar come.

[To PRO. and the Guard. Exit.

Iras. Royal queen! Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen! Cleo. Quick, quick, good bands.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this

Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Wbat, of death too, That rids our dogs of languish? Pro. Cleopatra. Do not abuse my master's bounty by

The undoing of yourself: let the world see His nobleness well acted, which your death Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death? Come hither, comel come, come, and take a queen Worth many babes and beggars!

O, temperance, lady! Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,

If idle talk will once be accessary, I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin, Do Cæsar what be can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;

Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up, And show me to the shouting varletry Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make My country's high pyramides my gibbet,

And hang me up in chains! You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Proculeius, Dol. What thou bast done thy master Cæsar knows, And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen, I'll take her to my guard.

So, Dolabella, It shall content me best: be gentle to her.— To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please, [To CLEOPATRA.

If you'll employ me to him.

Say I would die. Cleo. [Exeunt PROCULEIUS and Soldiers. Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me? Cleo. I cannot tell.

Assuredly you know me. Dol. Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or dreams;

You laugh when boys or women tell their Is't not your trick?

I understand not, madam. Dol. Cleo. I dream'd there was an emperor Antony:-

O, such another sleep, that I might see But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,-Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein strick

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,-Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd

Crested the world: his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas That grew the more by reaping: his delights Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in: in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets; realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket. Dol.

Cleopatra,-Cleo. Think you there was or might be such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Gentle madam, no. Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. But if there be, or ever were, one such, It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff To vie strange forms with fancy: yet to imagine An Antony were nature's peace 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Hear me, good madam. Your loss is, as yourself, great; and you bear it As answering to the weight: would I might O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel, By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir. Know you what Cæsar means to do with me? Dol. I am loth to tell you what I would you knew. Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph? Madam, he will; Dol.

I know it. Flourish within. Within. Make way there, - Cæsar!

Enter Cæsar, Gallus, Proculeius, MECENAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt? Dol. It is the emperor, madam.

CLEOPATRA kneels. Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel:-I pray you rise; rise, Egypt.

Sir, the gods Cleo. Will have it thus; my master and my lord

I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no bard thoughts: The record of what injuries you did us, Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance.

Sole sir o' the world, Cleo. I cannot project mine own cause so well

To make it clear: but do confess I have Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him. Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp Than with an old one dying

Moon and stars! Ant. Whip him.-Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them

So saucy with the hand of she here, -what's her name

Since she was Cleopatra?-Whip him, fellows, Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face. And whine aloud for mercy: take him hence. Thyr. Mark Antony,- Tug him away: being whipp'd, Bring him again .- This Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

Exeunt Attend. with THYR. You were half blasted ere I knew you.-Ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome. Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of women, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,-Ant. You have been a boggler ever: But when we in our viciousness grow hard. O misery on't!—the wise gods seal our eyes; In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us Adore our errors; laugh at's, while we strut To our confusion.

Cleo.

O, is't come to this? Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment

Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you bave Luxuriously pick'd out:-for I am sure, Though you can guess what temperance should You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this? Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards. And say, God quit you! be familiar with My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal And plighter of high hearts!—O that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar The horned herd! for I have savage cause; And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

x Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cried he? and begg'd he pardon? I Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou SOTTY

To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee, Shake then to look on't.—Get thee back to Cæsar,

Tell him thy entertsinment: look thou say He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,

Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry; And at this time most easy 'tis to do't. When my good stars, that were my former guides. Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires Into the abysm of hell. If he mislike My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture, As he shall like, to quit me: urge it thou: Hence with thy stripes. be gone.

Exit THYREUS. Cleo. Have you done yet?

Alack, our terreae moon Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time. leves Ant. To fintter Cæsar, would you mingle With one that ties his points?

Not know me yet? Ant. Cold-hearted toward me? Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,

From my cold heart let heaven engender hail, And poison it in the source; and the first stone Drop in my neck: as it determines, so Dissolve my life! The next Casarion smite! Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb. Together with my brave Egyptians all, By the discandying of this pelleted storm, Lie graveless,—till the flies and gnats of Nile Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied. Cæsar sits down in Alexandria; where I will oppose his fate. Our force by land Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too Have knit again, and fleet, threat niag most sea-like. [hear, lady?

Where hast thou been, my heart?-Dost thou If from the field I shall return once more To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood: I and my sword will earn our chronicle: There's hope in't yet.

Clco. That's my brave lord! Ant. I will Ъe treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd.

And fight maliciously: for when mine hours Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth. And send to darkness all that stop me. - Come. Let's have one other gaudy night; call to me All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more Let's mock the midnight bell. It is my birthday. Clco.

I had thought to have held it poor; but since my lord

Is Antony again I will be Cleopatra. Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so; we'll speak to them: and tonight I'll force [my queen; [my queen:

The wine peep through their scars.-Come on, There's sap in't yet. The next time I do firht I'll make death love me; for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe.

Exeunt all but ENO. Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. be furious

Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still A diminution in our captain's brain

Iras. O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.
Iras. I'll never see't; for I am sure my nails Are stronger than mine eye:

Cleo. Why, that's the way To fool their preparation and to conquer Their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now, Charmian!-Show me, my women, like a queen.—Go fetch My best attires; - I am again for Cydnus, To meet Mark Antony:-sirrah, Iras, go.-Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed: And when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave To play till doomsday.—Bring our crown and Wherefore's this noise?

1Exit IRAS. A noise within.

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow That will not be denied your higness' presence:

He brings you figs. Cleo. Let him come in. Exil Guard. What poor an instrument May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty. My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing Of woman in me: now from head to foot I am marble-constant; now the ficeting moon No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with Clown bringing a basket.

This is the man. Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exil Guard. Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there

That kills and pains not? Clown. Truly, I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do [on't? die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,-truly she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell. Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Sets down the basket.

Cleo. Farewell. Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind. Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded. Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me? Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not est a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell. Clown. Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy o' the Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me: now no more

The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this Yare, yare, good Iris; quick.—Methinks I hear

Antony call; I see him rouse himself To praise my noble act; I hear him mock The luck of Cæser, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come: Now to that name my courage prove my title! I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done? Come then, and take the last war nth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies. Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall? If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch, Which hurts and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still? If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say

The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base: If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss Which is my heaven to have. -- Come, thou mortal wretch,

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast. With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool, Be angry, and despatch. O couldst thou speak, That I might hear thee call great Casar ass

Unpolicied! Char. O eastern starl

Cleo. Peace, peacel Dost thou not see my baby at my breast That sucks the nurse asleep?

O, break! O, break! Char. Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentie:-

O Antony!-Nay, I will take thee too:-[Applying another csp to her arm.

What, should I stay, [Falls on a bed and dies. Char. In this vile world?—So, fare thee well.-Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close; And golden Phoebus never be beheld Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's away; I'll mend it and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

I Guard. Where is the queen? Speak softly, wake her not. · Char. I Guard. Casar hath sent,-

I Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another post. 2 Sold. How now, masters!

Soldiers. [Speaking together.] How now! How now! do you hear this?
I Sold. Ay; is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
I Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter:

Let's see how't will give off.

Soldiers. [Speaking tage ther.] Content. 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN IRAS, and athers attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Clea. Sleep a little.
Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS with armaur.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on.—
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.

Clea. Nay, I'll help too. What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let bel thou art
The armourer of my heart. False, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well;
We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow? Go put on thy defences.

Eras. Briefly, sir. Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unhuckles this, till we do please
To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.—
Thou fumhlest, Eros; and my queen's a squire
More tight at this than thou: despatch.—O love, [knew'st

'That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and
The royal occupation! thou shouldst see
A workman in't.—

Enter an Officer, armed.

Good-morrow to thee; welcome: Thou lack'st like him that knows a warlike charge:

To business that we love we rise betime, And go to't with delight.

Off. A thousand, sir,

Early though it be, have on their riveted trim, And at the port expect you. [Shaut. Flaurish of Trumpets within.

Enter ather Officers and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good-morrow, general.

All. Good-morrow, general.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads: Is come into the field.
This morning, like the spirit of a youth

Cæs.

That means to he of note, hegins betimes.—

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well.

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes af me: This is a soldier's hiss: rebukable, [Kisses her. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee Now, like a man of steel.—You that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu. [Exeunt ANT., EROS, Officers, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.
Cleo. Lead me.
He gaes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might

Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony,—but now—Well, on,

[Exeunt.

Scene V.—Antony's Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets saund within. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so, The kings that have revolted, and the soldier That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Sold. Who.
Onc ever near thee: call for Encharbus.

He shall not hear thee; ar from Cæsar's camp Say, I am none of thine.

Ant. What say'st thou? Sold. Sir,

He is with Casar.

Eras.

Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his tressure after; do it:

Detain no jot, I charge thee; write to him,— I will subscribe,—gentle adieus and greetings; Say that I wish he never find more cause To change a master.—O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men!—Eros, despatch. [Excunt.

Scene VI .- Cæsar's Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter CESAR, with AGRIPPA, ENOBARBUS, and athers.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight: Our will is Antony he took alive;

Make it so known.

Agr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.

Cæs. The time of universal peace is near:

Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd

world

Shall hear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony

Cas. Go charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,

ACT L

Scene I.—Britam. The Garden behind Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

I Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns:
our bloods

No more obey the heavens than our courtiers. Still seem as does the king.

2 Gent. But what's the matter? I Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son,—a widow

That late he married,—hath referr'd herself

Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded:

Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all Is outward sorrow; though I think the king Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?
1 Gent. He that hath lost her too: so is the oueen, (courtier, That most desir'd the match. But not a Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

I Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing

Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,—
I mean that married her—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd,—is a creature such oceans.—Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us, 2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

I Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit. 2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

I Lord. I'll attend your lordship. Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

Der. There, Diomed, there. Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man?

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio.

Most absolute lord, My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee. Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she? Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw,-Which never shall he found,-you did suspect She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage

Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me;

we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more,—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

lach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

SCENE II.-ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar; Not being Fortune, be's but Fortune's knave, A minister of her will: and it is great To do that thing that ends all other deeds; Which shackles accidents and bolts up change; Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the gates of the Monument, PRO-CULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt; And hids thee study ou what fair demands

Thou mean'st to have him grant thee. Clco. What's thy name? Pro. My name is Proculeius, Cleo. Antony Did tell me of you, hade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to he deceiv'd,

That have no use for trusting. If your master Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell . him

That majesty, to keep decorum, must No less beg than a kingdom: if he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son, He gives me so much of mine own as I Will kneel to him with thanks.

Be of good cheer; . Pro. You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing: Make your full reference freely to my lord, Who is so full of grace that it flows over On all that need: let me report to him Your sweet dependency; and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him The greatness he has got. I honrly learn A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly Look him i' the face.

This I'll report, dear lady. Pro. Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied Of him that cans'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd:

To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs

Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through, And keep their impious turbans on, without Good-morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!

We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder livers do.

As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport: up to yond hill,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
Consider.

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off:
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service so being done,
But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bauble,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unflegd'd, know not

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor What air's from home. Haply this life is best, If quiet life be best; sweeter to you That have a sharper known; well corresponding With your stiff age: but unto us it is A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;

A cell of ignorance; travelling abed; A prison for a debtor, that not dares To stride a limit.

Arv, What should we speak of When we are old as you? when we shall bear The rain and wind beat dark December, how, In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:

We are beastly; subtle as the fox for prey; Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat: Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird, And sing our bondage freely.

Bel.

How you speak

Bel. How you speak! Did you but know the city's usuries, And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court, As bard to leave as keep; whose top to climb Is certain falling, or so slippery that The fear's as bad as falling: the toil o' the war, A pain that only seems to seek out danger I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i'

the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse, Must court'sy at the censure.—O, boys, this story

The world may read in me: my body's mark'd With Roman swords; and my report was once First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me; And when a soldier was the theme, my name Was not far off: then was I as a tree [night Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one A storm or robbery, call it what you will, Shook, down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,

And left me bare to weather.

Clo. Hum! Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen.

Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think. Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry,—that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment. Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me?—for since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine,-wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven!-I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon: even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee.-I would these garments were come. She said upon a time,—the bitterness of it I now beich from my heart,—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined,—which, as I say, to ver her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,-to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. base:

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.

I'm not their father; yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.-

'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn. Brother, farewell. Arv.

Imo. I wish ye sport. Arv. You health, --- so please you, sir. These are kind creatures: Imo. [Aside.] Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say all's savage but at court: Experience, O, thou disprov'st report! The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish, Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick .- Pisanio, I'll now taste of thy drug. (Swallows some. I could not stir him: Gui.

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate; after Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said here-

I might know more. To the field, to the fieldi-Bel. We'll leave you for this time: go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick. For you must be our housewife.

Well, or ill,

I am bound to you. And shalt be ever. Bel.

[Exit IMOGEN into the Cave. This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors. Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots in characters;

And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick, And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes A smiling with a sigh,—as if the sigh Was that it was for not being such a smile; The smile mocking the sigh that it would fly From so divine a temple to commix

With winds that sailors rail at. I do note, Gui.

That grief and patience, rooted in him both, Mingle their spurs together.

Grow, patience! And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine His perishing root with the increasing vinel Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that vil-

Hath mock'd me.-I am faint.

Who's there?

Those runagates! Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.

I saw him not these many years, and yet I know 'tis he.-We are held as outlaws: hence! Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search What companies are near: pray you, away;

Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus. Soft!-What are you Clo. That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers? I have heard of such .- What slave art thou? A thing

More slavish did I ne'er than answering

A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber, A law-breaker, a villain: yield thee, thief. Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou?

have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big? Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art, Why I should yield to thee?

Thou villain base, Clo.

Know'st me not by my clothes?

No, nor thy tailor, rascal, Gui. Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes, Which, as it seems, make thee.

Thou precious varlet, Clo.

My tailor made them not. Hence, then, and thank Gui. The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool:

I am loth to beat thee.

Iach.

Iach. If I had lost it I should have lost the worth of it in gold. I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy A second night of such sweet shortness which Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by. Not a whit, Iach.

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir, Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must, If you keep covenant. Had I not brought The knowledge of your mistress home. I grant We were to question further: but I now Profess myself the winner of her honour, Together with your ring; and not the wronger Of her or you, having proceeded but By both your wills.

If you can make't apparent Post. That you have tasted her in bed, my hand And ring is yours: if not, the foul opinion You had of her pure honour gains or loses Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both To who shall find them.

Sir, my circumstances, Being so near the truth as I will make them. Must first induce you to believe: whose strength I will confirm with oath; which I doubt not You'll give me leave to spare when you shall find

You need it not.
Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber, Where, I confess, I slept not; but profess Had that was well worth watching,-it was hang'd With tapestry of silk and silver; the story Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman, And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for The press of boats or pride: a piece of work So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd Could be so rarely and exactly wrought. Since the true life on't was,- Post. This is true: And this you might have heard of here, by me Or by some other.

More particulars Inch.

Must justify my knowledge. Post. So they must,

Or do your honour injury.

The chimney Iach. Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece Chaste Dian bathing: never saw I figures So likely to report themselves: the cutter Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her, Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing Which you might from relation likewise reap;

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

The roof o' the chamber Iach. With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons,

I had forgot them,—were two winking Cupids Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely Depending on their brands

Post. This is her honour! Let it be granted you have seen all this, -and praise

Be given to your remembrance,-the description

Then, if you can.

Of what is in her chamber nothing saves The wager you have laid.

Pulling out the bracelet. Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel; seet-And now 'tis up again: it must be married To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Toyel Once more let me behold it: is it that

Iach. Sir,-I thank her,-that: She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet; Her pretty action did outsell her gift, And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it me, and said

She priz'd it once.

Post. Maybe she pluck'd it off To send it me.

lach. She writes so to you? doth she? Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis true. Here, take this too; Gives the ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye, Kills me to look on't .- Let there be no honour . Where there is beauty: truth where semblance; love

Where there's another man: the vows of women Of no more bondage be to where they are made Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.—

O, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir, And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won: It may be probable she lost it; or,

Who knows if one o' her women, being corrupted

Hath stolen it from her?

Very true; Post. And so I hope he came by't .- Back my ring: Render to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm. Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. 'Tis true,-nay, keep the ring,-'tis true: I am

She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn and honourable:-they induc'd to steal it!

And by a stranger!-No, he hath enjoyed her: The cognizance of her incontinency Is this,-she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly. There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell

Divide themselves between you Sir, be patient:

This is not strong enough to be believ'd Of one persuaded well of,-Never talk on' t.

Post.

She hath been colted by him. If you seek Iach. For further satisfying, under her breast, Worthy the pressing,—lies a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,

I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?

Ay, and it doth confirm Post. Another stain, as big as hell can hold, Were there no more but it.

In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage For his return [Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument! Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now. Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter? Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys Is jollity for apes and grief for boys. Is Cadwal mad?

Bel. Look, here he comes. And brings the dire occasion in his arms Of what we blame him for!

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN as dead in his arms.

Arv. The bird is dead That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty.

To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch.

Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily! My brother wears thee not the one half so well As when thou grew'st thyself.

O melancholyl Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find The coze to show what coast thy sluggish crare Might easiliest harbour in?-Thou blessed thing!

Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,

Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy! How found you him?

Stark, as you see: Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, Not as death's dart, being leugh'd at: his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Where? Gui.

O' the floor; Arv. His arms thus leagu'd: I thought he slept; and My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose Answer'd my steps too loud.

Why, he but sleeps: Gui. If he be gone he'll make his grave a bed;" With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,

And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers, Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose;

nor The azure hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would With charitable bill,—O bill, sore shaming Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie Without a monument!—bring thee all this; Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,

To winter-ground thy corse.

Pr'vthee, have done; And do not play in wench-like words with that

Let us bury him, Which is so serious. And not protract with admiration what Is now due debt .- To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him? Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother. Arv. Be't so: And let us, Polydore, though now our voices

Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground

As once our mother; use like note and words. Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,

I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee; For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse Than priests and fanes that lie.

Aτυ. We'll speak it, then. Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less: for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys: And though he came our enemy, remember, He was paid for that: thou mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,— That angel of the world,—doth make distinction Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely;

And though you took his life, as being our foe,

Yet bury him as a prince.

Pray you, fetch him hither. Thersites' body is as good as Ajax', When neither are alive.

If you'll go fetch him, Arv. We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin. Exit BELARIUS.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east:

My father hath a reason for't.

'Tis true. Arv. Gui. Come on, then, and remove him. So.—Begin. Arv.

SONG.

Fear no more the heat o' the sun, Gui. Nor the furious winter's rages: Thou thy worldly task hast done, Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages: Golden lads and girls all must, As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke:
Care no more to clothe and eat; ATT. To thee the reed is as the oak: The sceptre, learning, physic, must All follow this, and come to dust.

Fear no more the lightning-flash, Gui. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stine; $A\pi r.$ Fear not slander, censure rash; Gui. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan: $A\pi r.$

All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust. Both.

No exorciser harm thee! Gui. Nor no withcraft charm thee! Arv. Ghost unlaid forbear theel Gui. Nothing ill come near thee! Arr. Quiet consummation gave: Both.And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: come, lay him down.

Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be. Clo. We do.

Say then to Cæsar, Cym. Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws,-whose use the sword of [franchise] Cæsar

Hath too much mangled; whose repair and Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry: - Mulmutius made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did out His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar, Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy: Receive it from me, then:—War and confusion In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted .- Thus defied, I thank thee for myself.

Thou art welcome, Caius. Cym. Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth i spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour; Which he to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms,-a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold: So Caesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak. Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find remains loyal to his vow, and your, increosing us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out | in love, of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir. [mine: Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he All the remain is, welcome. Exeunt.

SCENE II .- BRITAIN. Another Room in the Paloce.

Enter PISANIO with a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not

What monster's her accuser?-Leonatus1 O masterl what a strange infection Is fallen into thy earl What false Italian, As poisonous tongu'd as handed,-hath pre-

On thy too ready hearing?-Disloyall No: She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would tzke in some virtue.—O my master! Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows which I Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her plood?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look L That I should seem to lack humanity [Reading.] So much as this fact comes to?

Do't: the letter That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity:-O damn'd paper!

Black as the ink that's on theel Senseless bauble.

Art thou a fedary for this act, and look'st So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes. I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter IMOGENE.

Imo. How now, Pisanio! Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord. Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord,-Leonatus?

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer That knew the stars as I his characters; He'd lay the future open .- You good gods, Let what is here contain'd relish of love, Of my lord's health, of his content,-yet not That we two are asunder,-let that grieve him; Some griefs are med'cinable; that is one of them.

For it doth physic love;-of his content All but in that!-Good wax, thy leave:-bless'd You bees that make these locks of counsell Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike: Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet You clasp young Cnpid's tables.—Good news, gods! Reads. Justice, and your fother's wroth, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the degrest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I om in Cambria, at Milford-Hoven: what your own love will, out of this, cdvise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness that LEONATUS POSTHUMUS. O for a horse with wings!-Hear'st thou, Pisanio? He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs May plod it in a week, why may not'I

Glide thither in a day?-then, true Pisanio,-Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st—

O, let me 'bate-but not like me; yet long'st, But in a fainter kind: O, not like me; For mine's beyond beyond,—say, and speak thick.

Love's councillor should fill the bores of hearing To the smothering of the sense,—how far it is To this same blessed Milford: and, by the way, Tell me how Wales was made so happy as To inherit such a haven: but, first of all, How we may steal from hence; and for the gap That we shall make in time, from our hencegoing [hence:

But first, how get And our return, to excuse. Why should excuse be born or e'er begot? We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak, How many score of miles may we well ride 'Twirt hour and hour?

One core 'twixt sun and sun, Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to's execution, man, Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding

Wagers. Where horses have been nimbler than the sands That run i' the clock's behalf; but this is foolery:

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods.

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep As these poor pickares can dig: and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers, Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh; And leaving so his service, follow you, So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee than master thee.—

My friends,
The hoy hath taught us manly duties: let us
Find out the prettiest dasied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

Scene III.—Britain. A Room in Cym-Beline's Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIA, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.

A fever with the absence of her son;
[Exit an Attendant.

A madness, of which her life's in danger,— Heavens,

How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen, The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen Upon a desperate hed, and in a time When fearful wars point at me; her son gone, So needful for this present: it strikes me, past The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours, [tress, I humbly set it at your will: hut, for my mis-I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness, Hold me your loyal servant.

r Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare he bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.
For Cloten,—

There wants no diligence in seeking him, And will no doubt be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome,—We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy [To Pisanio.

Does yet depend.

r Lord. So please your majesty, The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, Are landed on your coast; with a supply Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!—

I am amaz'd with matter.

t Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of; come more, for more you're ready:

The want is but to put those powers in motion

That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw, And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here.—Away!

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him Imogen was slain: 'tis strange: Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings; neither know I What is betid to Cloten; but remain Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.

Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true:

These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them. All other doubts, by time let them he clear'd: Fortune hrings in some boats that are not steer'd.

Exit.

Scene IV .- Wales. Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel.

Let u

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gui.

Nay, what hope
Have we in biding us? this way the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel.

We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going; newness
Of Cloten's death,—we being not known, not muster'd Among the bands,—may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd; and so extort from's That which we've done, whose answer would be death, Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt In such a time nothing hecoming you

Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known

Of many in the army: many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to he still hot summer's tanlings and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself

O Cymbelinel beaven and my conscience knows Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon, At three and two years old, I stole these babes; Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their Scene IV.—Wales, near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place

Was near at hand.—Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first as I have now.—Pisanio! Man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

From the inward of thee? One but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my steadier senses. What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with A look untender? If't be summer news, Smile to't before; if winterly, thou need'st But keep that countenance still.—My hushand's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath ont-craftied him, And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man;

thy tongue May take off some extremity, which to read

Would be even mortal to me.

Pis.

Piease yon, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That apart thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What, shall I need to draw my sword?

the paper
Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, Imo. False to his bed? What is it to be To lie in watch there, and to think on him? To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature.

To break it with a fearful dream of him, And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed, Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady! [lachimo, Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness:—Thou didst accuse him of incontinency; Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks.

Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath hetray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion; And for I am richer than to hang by the walls I must he ripp'd: to pieces with me!—O, Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought Put on for villainy,—not born where't grows, But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, bear me. Imo. True honest men heing heard, like false Eneas, [weeping Were, in his time, though false: and Sinon's

Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men; Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest: [him,

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou sees't A little witness my obedience: look! I draw the sword myself: take it, and hit The innocent mansion of my love, my heart: Fear not: 'tis empty of all things but grie! Thy master is not there; who was indeed The riches of it: do his hidding; strike. Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause; But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument! Thou shalt not damn my band.

Imo. Why, I must die; And if I do not by thy band, thou art Noservantof thymaster's: against self-slaughter There is a prohibition so divine [heart: That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my Something's afore 't.—Soft, soft! we'll no defence:

Obedient as the scabbard.—What is bere? The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus All turn'd to heresy? Away, away, Corrupters of my faithl you shall no more Bestomacherstomy heart. Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: though those that are

hetray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor

Stands in worn-case of woe.

And thou, Posthumns, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt he disedg'd by her
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, When I desire it too.

Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backa of Britons seen all flying
Through a straight lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling

Merely through fear; that the strait path was damm'd

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living,

To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf,

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's country:—athwart the lane
He, with two striplings,—lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,—
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards!
Stand:

Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save.

But to look back in frown: stand, stand!—
These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many,— For three performers are the file when all The rest do nothing,—with this word, Stand, stand!

Accommodated by the place, more charming With their own nobleness,—which could have

A distaff to a lance,—gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward

But by example,—O, a sin in war Damn'd in the first beginners!—'gan to look The way that they did, and to grin like lions Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon

A rout, confusion thick: forthwith they fly, Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves, [cowards,— The strides they victors made: and now our Like fragments in hard voyages,—became The life o' the need; having found the backdoor open [wound]

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they
Some slain before; some dying; some their friends

O'erborne i' the former wave: ten chas'd by one
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty: Those that would die or ere resist are grown The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance,—A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane,
Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post.

'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe I'll be his friend;

For if he'll do as he is made to do

I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too. You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery,—

To be i' the field and ask what news of me! To-day how many would have given their honours

To have say'd their carcasses! took heel to do't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him
groan, [monster,

Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly 'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find him:

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in: fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall lis
Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter
Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take: for me, my ransom's death:
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

. 1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:

'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave the affront with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found.—Standi who's there?

Post. A Roman; Who had not now been drooping here if seconds

Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!—

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here:—he brags his service.

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline attended; Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which all go out.

SCENE IV.—BRITAIN. A Prison.

Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

I Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;

So, graze as you find pasture. 2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

[Execut Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven.-Madam, all joy befall his grace and you! Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;

The due of honour in no point omit.-

I wear it as your enemy.

Sir, the event Luc. Is yet to name the winner: fare you well. Cum. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my fords.

Till he have cross'd the Severn.-Happiness! Exeunt Lucius and Lords. Oucen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us That we have given him cause.

Tis all the better; Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it. Cym. Lucins hath wrote already to the em-

How it goes here. It fits us therefore rively Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness: The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves His war for Britain.

'Tis not sleepy business; But must be look'd to speedily and strongly. Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd The duty of the day: she looks us like A thing more made of malice than of duty:

We have noted it.-Call her before us; for We have been too slight in sufferance. Exit on Attendant.

Oueen. Royal sir, Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord, 'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady So tender of rebukes that words are strokes, And strokes death to her-

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son!

'Tis certain she is fled. Clo. Go in and cheer the king: he rages; none Dare come about him.

plenty.
Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not: either both or nothing: Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaoler.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death? Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago. Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and hrain both empty, the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cordl it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debitor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge:-your neck, sir, is pen, | But no trace of him.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know; or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of hlindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king. Post. Thou bringest good news,-I am called to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hanged, then.
Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

Exeunt Post. and Messenger. Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gal-lowses! I speak against my present profit; but [Exit. my wish hath a preferment in't.

Scene V .- Britain. Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my beart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:

He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

I never saw Bel.Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd naught But beggary and poor looks.

I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal; and parted With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt! And 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Whither bound? Bel.

Imo. To Milford-Haven. What's your name? Bel. Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;

To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,

I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd! 'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat it.-Boys, bid him welcome.

Scene VII .- Rome. A public Place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes. I Sen. This is the tenor of the Emperor's

That since the common men are now in action 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians, And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite The gentry to this business. We will discharge our duty. 1 Tri. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I .- WALES. The Forest near the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve mel Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather,—saving reverence of the word,—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself,—for itis not vainglory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber,-I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, be-yond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into

I stand on fire:

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so? Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please To give me hearing.

Cum. Ay, with all my heart. And lend my best attention. What's thy name? Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cum.Thou'rt my good youth, my page;

I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely. CYM. and IMO. converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death? One sand another Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad

Who died, and was Fidele.-What think you? The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear:

Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside.₁ It is my mistress: Since she is living, let the time run on

To good or bad.

CYM. and IMO. come forward. Come, stand thou by our side; Make thy demand aloud .- [To IACH.] Sir, step you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely; Or, by our greatness and the grace of it. Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him. frender Imo. My boon is that this gentleman may

Post. (Aside.) What's that to him? Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say, How came it yours? ithat lach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken Which to be spoke would torture thee.

Howi me? Cym. lach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which Torments me to conceal. By villany I got this ring: 'twas Leonatus' jewel Whom thou didst banish; and,—which more may grieve thee, As it doth me,—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord? Cym. All that belongs to this.

That paragon, thy daughter, Iach. For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail to remember,-Give me leave; I faint. Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength: I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will

Than die ere I hear more: strive, man, and speak.

lach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock That struck the hour!-it was in Rome, [would accurs'd

The mansion where!—'twas at a feast,—O, Our viands had been poison'd, or at least Those which I heav'd to head!—the good

Posthumus, What should I say? he was too good to be Where ill men were; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones,—sitting sadly, Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast Of him that best could speak; for feature laming The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerya. Postures beyond brief nature; for condition, A shop of all the qualities that man

Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving, Fairness which strikes the eye,

Cym. Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall, Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly.-This Posthumus,

Most like a noble lord in love, and one That had a royal lover,-took his hint: And not dispraising whom we prais'd,—therein He was as calm as virtue,—he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made.

And then a mind put in't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose. lach. Your daughter's chastity-there it begins.

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams And she alone were cold: whereat I, wretch, Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with

Pieces of gold, 'gainst this, which then he wore Upon his honour'd finger, to attain In suit the place of's bed, and win this ring By hers and mine adultery: he, true knight, No lesser of her honour confident Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring; And would so, had it been a carbuncle Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had

Been all the worth of's car. Away to Britain Post I in this design. Well may you, sir, Remember me at court, where I was taught Of your chaste daughter the wide difference 'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain 'Gan in your duller Britain operate Most vilely,—for my vantage excellent; And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd That I return'd with simular proof enough To make the noble Leonatus mad, By wounding his belief in her renown With tokens thus and thus; averring notes Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet. O cunning how I got it!-nay, some marks Of secret on her person, that he could not But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd, Whereupon,-I having ta'en the forfeit. Methinks I see him now,

Post. [Coming forward.] Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous fool, Egregious murderer, thief, anything That's due to all the villains past, in being, To come!-O, give me'cord, or knife, or poison, Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out For torturers ingenious: it is I That all the abhorr'd things o' the earth amend By being worse than they. I am Posthumus, That kill'd thy daughter: -villain-like, I lie,-

That caus'd a lesser villain than myself, sacrilegious thief, to do't:-the temple

Clo. Thou injurious thief, Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name? Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,

I cannot tremble at it: were it toad, or adder, spider,

'Twonld move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear, Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know I'm son to the queen. Gui.

I'm sorry for't; not seeming

So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear,the wise:

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death: When I have slain thoe with my proper hand, I'll follow those that even now fled hence. And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads: Yield, rustic mountaineer. Excunt fighting.

Re-enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company's abroad. Arv. None in the world: you did mistake !

him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him. But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of

Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice, And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them: I wish my brother make good time with him, You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made np. I mean to man, he had not apprehension Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment Is off the cure of fear.—But, see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,-There was no money in't: not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne My head as I do his.

What hast thou done? Bel.

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head. Son to the queen, after his own report;

Who call'd me traitor, moutaineer; and swore, With his own single hand he'd take us in, Displace our heads where,—thank the gods!they grow,

And set them on Lud's town

Bel. We are all undone. Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us: then why should we be tender, To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us; Play judge and executioner all himself, For we do fear the law? What company Discover you abroad?

No single soul Bel. Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd, To bring him here alone: although perhaps

It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,

As it is like him,—might break out, and swear He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable To come alone, either he so undertaking [fear,

Or they so suffering: then on good ground we If we do fear this body hath a tail More perilons than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er,

My brother hath done well. Bel. I had no mind To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness

Did make my way long forth. Gui. With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek Behind our rock; and let it to the sea. And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten: Exit. That's all I reck. Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd;

Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done'tl

though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Would I had done't. Arv. So the revenged alone pursu'd me!-Polydore, I love thee brotherly; but envy much

Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would jus through, revenges, That possible strength might meet, would seek

And put us to our answer. Bel. Well, 'tis done:-

We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock; You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him Till hasty Forger To dinner presently.

Poor sick Fidele 1

I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood, And praise myself for charity.

Exit. Bel. O thon goddess, Thou divine nature, how thyself thou blazon'st In these two princely boys! They are as gentle As zephyrs blowing below the violet, Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough, Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rud'st wind

That by the top doth take the mountain pine, 'Tis wonder And make him stoop to the vale. That an invisible instinct should frame them To royalty unlearn'd; honour untanght; Civility not seen from other; valour

That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange What Cloten's being here to us portends, Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Where's my brother? Gưi. I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream, Cym. What of him? he is A banish'd traitor.

He it is that hath Bel. Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man; I know not how a traitor.

Take him hence: Cym. The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot: First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;

And let it be confiscate all so soon,

As I have receiv'd it.

Cym.Nursing of my sons! [knee: Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: here's my Ere I arise I will prefer my sons

Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir, These two young gentlemen, that call me father,

And think they are my sons, are none of mine; They are the issue of your loins, my liege,

And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue! Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan, Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd: Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes, For such and so they are,—these twenty years Have I train'd up: those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding, was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, Whom for the theft I wedded stole these chil-

Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't: Having receiv'd the punishment before For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty Excited me to treason: their dear loss, The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir, Here are your sons again; and I must lose Two of the sweet'st companions in the world: The benediction of these covering heavens Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy

To inlay heaven with stars.

Thou weep'st, and speak'st. The service that you three have done is more Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children: If these be they, I know not how to wish

A pair of worthier sons.

Be pleas'd awhile .-Bel. This gentleman, whom I call Polydore, Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius: This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand Of his queen mother, which, for more probation, I can with ease produce.

Cym.Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;

It was a mark of wonder.

This is he: Who hath upon him still that natural stamp: It was wise nature's end in the donation, To be his evidence now.

O, what, am I Cym. A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more.—Bless'd may you be,

That, after this strange starting from your orbs. You may reign in them now!-O Imogen. Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo.No, my lord; I have got two worlds by't .- O my gentle brothers,

Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother When I was but your sister; I you brothers When you were so indeed.

Did you e'er meet? Cym.

Arv. Ay, my good lord. Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;

Continued so until we thought he died. Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct! When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.-Where? how liv'd you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers? how first met them?

Why fled you from the court? and whither? And your three motives to the battle, with I know not how much more, should be demanded; And all the other by-dependencies, place From chance to chance: but nor the time nor Will serve our long inter'gatories. Posthumus anchors upon Imogen; leye And she, like harmless lightning, throws her On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting Each object with a joy: the counterchange Is severally in all.—Let's quit this ground, And smoke the temple with our sacrifices. Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever. To BELARIUS.

Imo. Youare myfather too; and didrelieve me, To see this gracious season Cym. All o'erjoy'd,

Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too, For they shall taste our comfort.

My good master, Imo.I will yet do you service.

Happy be you! Luc. Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,

He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd

The thankings of a king.

I am, sir, Post. The soldier that did company these three In poor beseeming; 'twas a fitment for The purpose I then follow'd.—That I was he, Speak, Iachimo: I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

I am down again: [Kneeling. Iach. But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee, As then your force did. Take that life, beseech 70U.

Which I so often owe: but your ring first; And here the bracelet of the truest princess That ever swore her feith.

Kneel not to me: Post. The power that I have on you is to spare you; The malice towards you to forgive you: live, I And deal with others better.

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout midnight, more:

The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night [faces.—
Are strewings fitt'st for graves.—Upon their You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so

You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so These herblets shall, which we upon you strew.—

Come ou, away: apart upon our knees. The ground that gave them first has them again:

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.
[Exeunt Bel. Gol., and Arv.
Imo. [Awakening.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?— {thither? I thank you.—By you bush?—Pray, how far 'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?— I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow:—O gods and goddesses! [Seeing the body.

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care ou't.—I hope I For so I thought I was a cave-keeper, And cook to honest creatures: but 'tis not so; 'Twas but a bolt of uothing, shot at uothing, Which the brain makes of fumes: our very eyes

Which the brain makes of tumes: our very eres
Are sometimes, like out judgments, blind.
Good faith.

I tremble still with fear: but if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it! The dream's here still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt. A headless man!—The garments of Posthu-

I know the shape of's leg: this is his hand; His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh; The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face— Murder in heaveu?—How!—'Tis gone.—Pisanio,

All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks, And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou, Conspir'd with that irregulous devil, Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord.—To write and read Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio,—From this most bravest vessel of the world Struck the main-top!—O Posthumus! alas. Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me!

where's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,

And left thy head on.—How should this be?

Pisanio?

'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lucre in them Have laid this woe here. O 'tis pregnant, pregnant!

The drug he gave me, which he said was precions And cordial to me, have I uot found it [home Murderous to the senses? That confirms it This is Pisanio's deed and Cloten's: Ol—Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, That we the horrider may seem to those Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending You here at Milford-Haven with your ships: They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome? Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits; That promise noble service: and they come Uuder the couduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them? Cap. With the uext benefit o' the wind.

Luc.
This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers [sir,
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a visiou.—

I fast and pray'd for their intelligence,—thus:—I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd From the spongy south to this part of the west, There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends.—

Unless my sins abuse my divination,—

Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here
Without his top?—The ruin speaks that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!— Or dead or sleeping ou him? But dead, rather; For nature doth abhor to make his bed With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.— Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He's alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then, instruct us of this body.—
Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes; for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? or who was he,
That otherwise than uoble nature did, terest
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy inIn this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not, Nothing to be were better. This was my master, A very valiant Briton and a good, That here by mountaineers lies slain: alas! There is no more such masters: I may wander From east to occident, cry out for service, Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than Thy master in bleeding: say his name, good friend. [lie, and do

Scene, -Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

Scene I .- Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers on one side, and Bassianus and his Followers on the other, with drums and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords: I am his first-born son that was the last That wore the imperial diadem of Rome: Then let my father's honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,-friends, followers, favourers of my right,-

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep then, this passage to the Capitol; And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility: But let desert in pure election shine; And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice. Enter Marcus Andronicus, aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes,—that strive by factions and by friends Ambitiously for rule and empery,— Know that the people of Rome, for whom we A special party, have by common voice, In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius For many good and great deserts to Rome:

So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown, Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines, I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man diel scarce ever look'd on blood, But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel Nor iron on his heell I am asham'd To look upon the holy sun, to have

The benefit of his blessed beams, remaining So long a poor unknown.

Gui.

By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I,—Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!

If in your country wars you chance to die, That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie: Lead, lead.—[Aside.] The time seems long;

their blood thinks scorn
Till it fly out, and show them princes born.

[Excunt.

ACT V.

Scene I.—Britain. A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus with a bloody handkerehief

Post. Yes, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd Thou shouldst he colour'd thus. You married ones.

If each of you should take this course, how many

Must murder wives much better than themselves

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put on this: so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But alack,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,

To have them fall no more: you some permit To second ills with ills, each elder worse, And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift. But Imogen is your own: do your best wills, And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace! I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, Hear patiently my purpose:—I'll disrobe me Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life Is every breath a death: and thus unknown, Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me than my habits show. Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in mel To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin The fashion,—less without and more within.

[Exit.

Scene II.—Britain. A Field between the Camps.

Enter, at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, Imogen and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following it like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus: he varquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Ich. The heaviness and guilt within my Takes off my manhood: I bave belied a lady, The princess of this country, and the air on't Revengingly endeedles me; or could this carl, A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me In my profession? Knighthoods and honours

As I wear mine are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

iExit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly: CYM-BELINE is taken: then enter to his rescue BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand: We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but

The villainy of our fears.

Gui. and Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

Re-enter Posthumus and seconds the Britons: they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then re-enter Lucius, fachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself; For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce or hy. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Britain. Another part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord.

I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost.

But that the heavens fought: the king himself

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive

To tremble under Titus' threatening looks.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal

The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of

Trov

With opportunity of sharp revenge Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent, May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,— When Goths were Goths and Tamora was queen,—

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the sky.

Remaineth naught but to inter our brethren, And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome. Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus Make this his latest farewell to their souls. [Trumpets sounded and the coffin laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons; Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest, Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells, Here grow no damned grudges; here are no storms.

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter LAVINIA.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome:
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!
Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly

reserv'd
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!—
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter, below, MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes; re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Attendants.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Til. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother

Marcus. [ful wars, Marc. And welcome, nephews, from success-You that survive and you that sleep in fame! Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all, That in your country's service drew your swords:

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness, And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.— Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome, Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust, This palliament of white and spotless hue; And name thee in election for the empire With these our late-deceased emperor's sons: Be candidatus, then, and put it on, And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness:
What, should I don this robe and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroach new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right;—
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.—
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee [selves.

The people's hearts, and wean them from themBas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,

The people's hearts, and wean them from themBas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,

But honour thee, and will do till I die.
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable meed. [here,
Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son, Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope, Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth, And ripen justice in this commonweal: Then, if you will elect by my advice, Crown him, and say, Long live our emperor!

Marc. With voices and applause of every

Marc. With voices and appliance of every sort, Patricians and plebeians, we create

Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,
And say, Long live our emperor Saturnine!
[A long flourish.

Saf. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done. To us in our election this day. I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, And will with deeds requite thy gentleness; And for an onset, Titus, to advance.

I think, to liberty: yet am I better rather Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd By the sure physician death, who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd gods, give me More than my shanks and wrists: you good The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, Then free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry? So children temporal fathers do appease; Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent? I cannot do it better than in gyves, Desir'd more than constrain'd: to satisfy, If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take No stricter render of me than my all. I know you are more clement than vile men, Who of their broken debtors take a third, A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again On their abatement: that's not my desire: For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though 'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis n life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp; Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake: You rather mine, being yours: and so, great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life, And cancel these cold bonds.—O Imogent I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to POSTHUMUS an old man attired like a warrior, leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife and mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them: then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to POSTHUMUS with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show Thy spite on mortal flies: With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,

That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor how done aught but wel

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whitst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law:

Whose father then,—as men report
Thou orphans' father art,—
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid, But took me in my throes; That from me was Posthumus ripp'd, Came crying 'mongst his foes, A thing of pityl Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry, Moulded the stuff so fair That he deserv'd the praise o' the world As great Sicilius' heir.

I Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,

To be exil'd, and thrown

From Leonati' seat, and thrown From ber his dearest one, Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this from stiller seats we came.
Our parents and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely and were slain;
Our fealty and Tenantius' right

With honour to maintain.

I Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus ha
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good, Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help; Or we poor ghosts will cry To the shining synod of the rest Against thy deity.

Both Bro. Help, Inpiter; or we appeal, And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderboll. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing; hushl—How dare you ghosts Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know, Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts? Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers: Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd; No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.

Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in

Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fadel—

He shall be lord of Lady Imogen, And happier much by his affliction made. This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine: And so away: no further with your din Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.— Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.

In a bad quarrol slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish trihune, no; no son of mine,—

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed That hath dishonour'd all our family; Unworthy brother and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes; Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, awayl he resta not in this tomb:—

This monument five hundred years hath stood, Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls:—

Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you:

My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;

He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. and Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany. [that word?

Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. [spite?

Tit. What, would you bury him in my de-Marc No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, [wounded: And with these boys mine honour thou hast

My foes I do repute you every one;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Marc. He is not with himself: let us with

Marc. He is not with himself; let us with-

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[MARCUS and the Sons of TITUS kneel.
Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plend,—
[speak,—
Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Mare Renowned Titus, more than helf my

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, That died in honour and Lavinia's cause: Thou art a Roman,—be not barbarous. The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax, That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son Did graciously plead for his funerals: Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy, Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise:
The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!—
Well, bury him, and hury me the next.

[MUTIUS is put into the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble

Mutius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Marc. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is,— Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell:

Hich Rome reputes to be a heinous six Yield at entreats; and then let me along the properties of the proper

Is she not, then, beholden to the man
That brought ber for this high good turn so far?
Marc. Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, Saturninus attended; Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron: at the other, Bassianus Lav-inia, and others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride!

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power.

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to scize my own,

My true-betrothed love, and now my wife? But let the laws of Rome determine all; Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine. [us; Sat. 'Tis good, sir: you are very short with But if we live we'll be as sharp with you.

But if we live we'll be as sharp with you.

Bus. My lord, what I have done, as best I may.

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.
Only this much I give your grace to know,—
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own band did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds:

'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me. Rome and the righteous heavens he my judge How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine.
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.
Sal. What, madaml be disbonour'd openly,

And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome

forfend
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus, innocence in all,
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs:
Then at my suit look graciously on bim;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—
My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last;

(Aside.

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest, then, the people and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,—
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,—
Yield at entreats; and then let me alone:
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction and their family,

To my grief, I am Cum. The heir of his reward, which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and hrain of Britain,
[To Bell., Gui., and ARV.]
By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time

To ask of whence you are:- report it. Bel.

In Camhria are we horn, and gentlemen: Further to hoast were neither true nor modest. Unless I add we are honest.

Bow your knees. Cym. Arise my knights o' the hattle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities hecoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's husiness in these faces .- Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report

The queen is dead.

Cym. Would this report become? But I consider By medicine life may he prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too .- How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, heing cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you: these her women i Can trip me if I err; who with wet cheeks Were present when she finish'd.

Pr'ythee, say. Cym. Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you: Married your royalty, was wife to your place; Abborr'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; And hut she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she hore in hand; to love With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off hy poison. Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman?-Is there more? Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had For you a mortal mineral; which, heing took, Should by the minute feed on life, and, linger-

By inches waste you: in which time she purpos'd,

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; and in time, When she had fitted you with her craft, to work Her son into the adoption of the crown: But, failing of her end hy his strange absence, Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so,

Despairing, died. Cym. Heard you all this, her women? I Lady. We did, so please your highness. Mine eyes Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;

Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious

To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter! That it was folly in me thou mayst say, And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; Posthu-MUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that The Britons have raz'd ont, though with the loss

Of many a bold one, whose kinsmen have made That their good souls may be appeared with slaughter granted: Of you their captives, which ourself have

So, think of your estate. Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the Was yours by accident; had it gone with us We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd Igods Who worse than a physician Our prisoners with the sword. But since the Will have it thus, that nothing hut our lives May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer: Augustus lives to think on't: and so much For my pecuhar care. This one thing only I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born, Let him he ransom'd: never master had

> A page so kind, so duteous, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join With my request, which I'll make hold your highness

> Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir, And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him: His favour is familiar to me. Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, And art mine own.-I know not why nor wherefor To say live, hoy: ne'er thank thy master; live: And ask of Cymheline what hoon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it; Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, The noblest ta'en.

I humhly thank your highness. Imo. Lur. I do not hid thee beg my life, good lad; And yet I know thou wilt.

No, no: alack, Imo. There's other work in hand: I see a thing Bitter to me as death: your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself.

The hoy disdains me, He leaves me, scorns me: hriefly die their joys That place them on the truth of girls and boys.-

Why stands he so perplex'd?

What wouldst thou, boy? Cym. I love thee more and more: think more and [on? speak, more What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me Than I to your highness; who, heing born your vassal.

Am something nearer.

What is, Lavinia, then, become so loose, Or Bassianus so degenerate, That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd Without controlment, justice, or revenge? Young lords, beware! and should the empress know

This discord's ground, the music would not Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are you mad! or know ye not in Rome ow furious and impatient they be.

How furious and impatient they be, And cannot brook competitors in love? I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose to achieve her whom I love.
Aar. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange? She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd; She is a woman, therefore may be won; She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd. What, man! more water glideth by the mill Then wots the miller of; and easy it is Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know: Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What, hast not thou full often struck a doe;
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?
Aar. Why, then, it seems some certain snatch or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too! Then should not we be tir'd with this ado. Why, hark ye, hark ye,—and are you such fools To square for this? Would it offend you, then, That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:

'Tis policy and stratagem must do -That you affect; and so must you resolve That which you cannot as you would achieve, You must perforce accomplish as you may. Take this of me,-Lucrece was not more chaste Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love. A speedier course than lingering languishment Must we pursue, and I have found the path. My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand; There will the lovely Roman ladies troop: The forest-walks are wide and spacious; And many unfrequented plots there are Fitted by kind for rape and villany: Single you thither, then, this dainty doe, And strike her home by force if not by words: This way, or not at all, stand you in hope. Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit To villany and vengeance consecrate,

Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and

There speak and strike, brave boys, and take your turns; [eye, There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits, Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Forest near Rome: a Lodge seen at a distance. Horns and cry of hounds heard.

Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, &c., Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green.

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay, And wake the emperor and his lovely bride, And rouse the prince, and ring a hunter's peal, That all the court may echo with the noise. Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours, To attend the emperor's person carefully: I have been troubled in my sleep this night, But dawning day new confort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a peal. Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Deme-Trius, Chiron, and Attendants.

Many good-morrows to your majesty;— Madam, to you as many and as good:— I promised your grace a hunter's peal. Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord;

Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say no; I have been broad awake two hour or more.

Sat. Come on, then, horse and chariots let us have.

And to our sport.—[To TAMORA.] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord, Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase, And climb the highest promontory top

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—A lonely part of the Forest.

Enter AARON with a bag of gold.

Agron. He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,

Of virtue was she: yea, and she herself. Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set Prove holy water on theel Imogen, The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and Be villainy less than 'twas!-O Imogen! My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!

Peace, my lord; hear, hear, Imo. Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

. [Striking her: she falls. O, gentlemen, helpl - [mus] There lie thy part. Mine and your mistress!-O, my lord Posthu-You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now .- Help. help!-

Mine honour'd lady!

Does the world go round? Cym. Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress! Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

How fares my mistress? Pis.

Imo. O, get thee from my sight; Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

Breathe not where princes are.

Cum. The tune of Imogen. Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of susphur on me if That box I gave you was not thought by me A precious thing: I had it from the queen. Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

O godsl-Cor. I left out one thing which the queen confess'd Which must approve thee honest: If Pisanio Have, said she, given his mistress that confection Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd As I would serve a rat.

What's this, Cornelius? Cym. Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me To temper poisons for her, still pretending The satisfaction of her knowledge only In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs, Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose Was of more danger, did compound for her A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease The present power of life; but in short time All offices of nature should again

Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo: Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

This is sure Fidele. Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you? Think that you are upon a rock; and now Throw me again. [Embracing him.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul, Till the tree die!

How now, my flesh, my child! What, mak'st thon me a dullard in this act? Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir. (Knceling.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;

You had a motive for it.

To Guiderius and Arviragus. Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. My tears that fall Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord. Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was That we meet here so strangely: but her son

Is gone, we know not how nor where.

Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten.

Upon my lady's missing, came to me With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone, It was my instant death. By accident I had a feigned letter of my master's Then in my pocket; which directed him To seek her on the mountains near to Milford: Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments, Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate My lady's honour: what became of him I further know not.

Let me end the story: Gui. I slew him there

Cum. Marry, the gods forfend! I would not thy good deeds should from my lips Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth. Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it. Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most incivil one: the wrongs he did Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me With language that would make me spurn the sea,

If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head; And am right glad he is not standing here To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee: By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and Endure our law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headless man I thought had been my lord.

Bind the offender, Cym. And take him from our presence.

Stay, sir king: This man is better than the man he slew, As well descended as thyself; and hath More of thee merited than a band of Clotens

Had ever scar for .- Let his arms alone; To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.

Why, old soldier, Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for By tasting of our wrath? How of descent

As good as we? In that he spake too far. Arv.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't. We will die all three: Bel. But I will prove that two on's are as good As I have given out him.-My sons, I must, For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech. For mine own part, Though, haply, well for you.

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Cym. Nobly doom'd! We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law; Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You holp us, sir, As you did mean indeed to be our brother; Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome.

Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, methought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus.—

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning. Sooth. [Reads.] Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be looped branches, which, being dead many years, shall efter revire, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and flenty.

Thou, Leonstus, art the lion's whelp;

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
[To CYMBELINE.

Which we call mollis acr: and mollis acr
We term it mulier: which mulier I divine
Is this most constant wife; who even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle.
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point Thy two sons forth, who, by Belanius stol'n, For many years thought dead, are now retir'd, To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
By peace we will begin:—and, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Casar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice both on her and hers,
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do

The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant,
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,

The imperial Cæsar, should again unite His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods; And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd alters. Publish we this peace

To all our subjects. Set we forward: let A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together: so through Lud's town march:

And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt.

If I do wake, some planet strike me down, That I may slumber in eternal sleep!— Speak, gentle niece,—what stern ungentle hands [bare Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body Of her two branches,—those sweet ornaments Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness
As have thy love! Why dost not speak to me?—
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honeyed breath.
But sure some Tereus hath deflowered thee,
And lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue. Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame: And notwithstanding all this loss of blood. As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,-Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud, Shall I speak for thee! shall I say 'tis so? O, that I knew thy heart, and knew the beast. That I might rail at him, to ease my mind! Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd. Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is. Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue, And in a tedius sampler sew'd her mind: But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee; A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met, And he hath cut those pretty fingers off That could have better sew'd than Philomel. O, had the monster seen those lily hands Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute, And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,

He would not then have touch'd them for his Or had he heard the heavenly harmony Which that sweet tongue hath made, He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet. Come, let us go, and make thy father blind; For such a sight will blind a father's eye: One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;

What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes!

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee; O, could our mourning ease thy misery! [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I .- Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with Martius and Quintus bound, passing on to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept; For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed; For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks; Be pitiful to my condemned sons, souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.

For two-and-twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
For these, good tribunes, in the dust I write [Throwing himself on the ground.

My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad
tears;

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite: My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Sen., Trib., &c., with the prisoners. O earth I will befriend thee more with rain, That shall distil from these two ancient ruins, Than youthful April shall with all his showers: In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still; In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow, And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle aged men! Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death; And let me say, that never wept before, My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain: The tribunes hear you not, no man is by; And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.—

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

[hear
Tri Why Vic no motter many if they did

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did They would not mark me; or if they did mark They would not pity me; yet plead I must, And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;

Why, though they cannot answer my distress, Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale:
When I do weep they humble at my feet
Receive my tears and seem to weep with me;
And were they but attired in grave weeds
Rome could afford no tribnne like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,—
And tribunes with their tongues doom men

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn! [death:

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers!
Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou, then,
From these devourers to be banished!—
But who comes with our brother Marcus here!

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep; Or if not so, thy noble heart to break: I bring consuming sorrow to thine age. Tit. Will it consume mel let me see it then.

He by the senate is accited home From weary wars against the barbarous Goths: That, with his sons, n terror to our foes. Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms. Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons In coffins from the field; And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms. Let us entreat, -by honour of his name Whom worthily you would have now succeed, And in the Capitol and senate's right, Whom you pretend to honour and adore. That you withdraw you, and abate your Rome, be as just and gracious unto me As I am confident and kind to thee .-Open the gates, tribunes, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[Flourish. Exeunt; SAT. and BAS. go up into the Capitol.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way. The good Andronicus, Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, Successful in the battles that he fights, With honour and with fortune is return'd From where he circumscribed with his sword, And brought to voke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. Enter Martius and Mutius; after them two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then Lucius and After them TITUS ANDRONICUS; QUINTUS. and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Deme-trius, Chiron, Aaron, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People following. The bearers set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught Returns with precious lading to the bay

From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs, To re-salute his country with his tears, Tears of true joy for his return to Rome .-Thou great defender of this Capitol, Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!-Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons, Half of the number that King Priam had Behold the poor remains, alive and dead! These that survive let Rome reward with love; These that I bring unto their latest home. With burial amongst their ancestors: Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword. Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own. Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet, To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?-Make way to lay them by their brethren .-[The tomb is opened.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, And sleep in peace, slain in your country'a wars! O sacred receptacle of my joys, Sweet cell of virtue and nobility, How many sons of mine hast thou in store, That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths. That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile

Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh Before this earthly prison of their bones; That so the shadows be not unappeas'd. Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on enrth.

Tit. I give him you, -the noblest that survives.

The eldest son of this distressed queen. Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! - Gracious conqueror, Victorius Titus, rue the tears I shed, A mother's tears in passion for her son: And if thy sons were ever dear to thee, O, think my son to be as dear to mel Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome, To beautify thy triumphs and return, Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke; But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets For valiant doings in their country's cause? O, if to fight for king and common weal Were piety in thine, it is in these. Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood: Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods? Draw near them, then, in being merciful: Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge: Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon

These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain Religiously they ask a sacrifice: To this your son is mark'd; and die he must, To appease their groaning shadows that are gone. Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;

And with our swords, npon a pile of wood Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning | Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd. | Exeunt Luc., Quin., Marc., and Mur., with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine. Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And for our father's sake and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you: I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.
Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest.

And never whilst I live deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say ere half an hour pass.
[He cuts off Tirus's hand.

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is despatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited, —that let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.
Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand

Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand Look by and by to have thy sons with thee:-Their heads I mean. O, how this villany

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it? Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace, Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven, And bow this feeble ruin to the earth: If any power pities wretched tears, To that I call!—[To LAVINIA.] What, wilt thou kneel with me?

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim, And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds When they do hug him in their melting bosoms. Marc. O brother, speak with possibilities,

And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no hottom?

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes:
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad, Threatening the welkin with his big-swoln facel And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do flow? She is the weeping welkin, I the earth: Then must my sea be moved with her sighs; Then must my earth with her continual tears Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd: For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,

But like a drunkard must I vomit them. Then give me leave; for losers will have leave To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor. Here are the heads of thy two noble sons; And here's thy hand, in scorn, to thee sent back,—

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd:
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily, And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal:

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,

And yet detested life not shrink thereat? That ever death should let life bear his name, Where life hath no more interest but to breathe! [LAVINIA kisses him.

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless

As frozen water to a starved snake. [end? Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an Marc. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus; [heads,

Thou dost not slumber: see thy two sons'. Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here; Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I, Even like a stony image, cold and numb. Ahl now no more will I control thy griefs; Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes:
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?
Tit He he he! [this he

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! [this hour. Marc. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed: Besides, this sorrow is an enemy, And would usurp upon my watery eyes, And make them blind with tributary tears: Then which way shall I find revenge's cave? For these two heads do seem to speak to me, And threat me I shall never come to bliss Till all these mischiefs be return'd again Even in their throats that have committed them Come, let me see what task I have to do.—You heavy people circle me about, That I may turn me to each one of you,

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
Aud in the sacred Pantheon ber espouse:
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match

I hold me highly bonour'd of your grace:
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor,—do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord:
Receive them, theu, the tribute that I owe.
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life! How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts Rome shall record; and when I do forget The least of these unspeakable deserts, Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;

To him that for your honour and your state

Will nse you nobly and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose were I to choose enew.—
Clear np, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer.

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome: Princely shall be thy usage every way. Rest on my word, and let not discoutent Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts

Can make you greater than the Queen of . Goths.—

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sal. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go: Ransomless bere we set our prisoners free: Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and Sat. Surpris'd 1 by whom?

Bas.

By him that justly may

Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Excunt Bas. and Mar. with Lav. Mut. Brothers, belp to convey her hence away.

And with my sword Pil keep this door safe.

[Exeunt Luc., Quin., and Mar.

Tif. Follow, my lord, and Pil soon bring her back.

Mui. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boyl Barr'st me my way in Rome? (Stabbina Murius.

Mut. Help, Lucius, help! [Dies.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and more than so,

In wrongful quarrel you bave slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou nor he are any sons of mine;
My sons would never so dishouour me:
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; hut not to he his wife,

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife, That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit. Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs ber not.

Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
I'll trust hy leisure him that mocks me once;
Thee never, nor thy traitorons haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
Was there none else in Rome to make a stale
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That said'st I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these? [ing piece Sat. But go thy ways; go, give the chang-To him that flourish'd for her with his sword: A valiant son-in-law thou shalt eujoy; One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of That, like the stately Phæbe mongst her nymphs,

Dost overshine the gallant dames of Rome,—
If then be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Bebold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome.
Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,— Sith priest and holy water are so near, And tapers burn so bright, and everything In readiness for Hymenæus stand,— I will not re-salute the streets of Rome, Or climb my palace, till from forth this place I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, She will a bandmaid be to his desires, A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sal. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.—Lords, and her sons; AARON and Goths.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this hride.—
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,

Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Marc. O Titus, see, O see what thou hast done!

Good Uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes! Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean. Marc. Stand by me, Lucius: do not fear thine aunt.

Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus? -

Y. Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her: For I have heard my grandsire say full oft Extremity of griefs would make men mad; And I have read that Hecuba of Troy Ran mad through sorrow: that made me to fear;

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did, And would not, but in fury, fright my youth: Which made me down to throw my hooks, and fly, Causeless, perhaps: but pardon me, sweet aunt: And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will. [LAVINIA turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall. Tit. How now, Lavinia!-Marcus, what means this? Some book there is that she desires to see. Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.-But thou art deeper read and better skill'd: Come, and take choice of all my library, And so heguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed .-Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there was more than one Confederate in the fact;—ay, more there was, Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so? Y. Luc. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis:

My mother gave it me.

For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how husily she turns the leaves! Help her: What would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philomel, And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes the leaves.

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart That dies in tempest of thy angry frown. Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath pre-vail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty and her, my lord: These words, these looks, infuse new life in me. Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome. A Roman now adopted happily, And must advise the emperor for his good. This day all quarrels die, Andronicus; And let it be mine honour, good my lord, That I have reconcil'd your friends and you. For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd My word and promise to the emperor That you will be more mild and tractable. And fear not, lords, -and you, Lavinia, -By my advice, all humbled on your knees, You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to his

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats, I do remit these young men's heinons faults: Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl, I found a friend; and sure as death I swore I would not part a hachelor from the priest. Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends. This day shall he a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty To hant the panther and the hart with me, With horn and hound we'll give your grace bonjout.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I .-- Rome. Before the Parace. Enter AARON.

Agron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top, Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft, Secure of thunder's crack or lightning's flash Advanc'd above pale envy's threatening reach. As when the golden sun salutes the morn, And, having gilt the ocean with his heams. Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach. And overlooks the highest-peering hill; So Tamora: Upon her will doth earthly honour wait,

And virtue stoops and trembles at ber frown. Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy thoughts To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress. And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains. And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus. Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughtsl I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold, To wait upon this new-made empress. To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen. This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph, This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine. And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's .-

Enter Demetrius and Chiron braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd:

And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be. Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all; And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 'Tis not the difference of a year or two

Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate: I am as able and as fit as thou To serve and to deserve my mistress' grace;

And that my sword upon thee shall approve, And plead my passion for Lavinia's love. Aar. [Aside.] Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace. Dem. Why, hoy, although our mother, un-advis'd, Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side, Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends? Go to; have your lath glu'd within your sheath Till you know better how to handle it. Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare, . Dem. Ay, hor, grow ye so hrave?

(They draw. Aar. [Coming forward.] Why, how now. lords!

So near the emperor's palace dare you draw, And maintain such a quarrel openly? Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:

I would not for a million of gold The cause were known to them it most concerns:

Nor would your noble mother for much more Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome. For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd My rapier in his hosom, and withal Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat

That he hath hreath'd in my dishonour here. Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full retongue, solv'd.-Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Acr. Away, I say!-Now, hy the gods that warlike Goths adore, This petty hrabble will undo us all. Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous

It is to jet upon a prince's right?

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone. [choice! Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live. Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.
Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point:—

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon despatch it.

Aar. Soonerthisswordshall plough thy bowels [Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws. Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky, That shone so brightly when this boy was got, He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point That touches this my first-born son and heir! I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus, With all this threatening band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what, ye sanguine shallow-hearted boysl
Ye white-lim'd wallsl ye alchouse-painted

Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn a swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own,—excuse it how she can.
Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress

thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, myThe vigour and the picture of my youth:
This before all the world do I prefer;
This maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd, Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears:

Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own. He is your brother, lords; sensibly fed Of that self-blood that first gave life to you; And from the womb where you imprison'd were He is enfranchised and come to light:

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side, Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aaron. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you: Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor, The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.— But say, again, how many saw the child? Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself; And no one else but the deliver'd empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and your-self:

Two may keep counsel when the third's away: Go to the empress, tell her this I said:—

[Stabs her, and she dies.

Weke, wekel—so cries a pig prepar'd to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Agron? Wherefore

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy: Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no: And now be it known to you my full intent. Not far, one Muliteus lives, my countryman; His wife but yesternight was brought to bed; His child is like to her, fair as you are: Go pack with him, and give the mother gold, And tell them both the circumstance of all; And how by this their child shall be advanc'd, And be received for the emperor's heir, And substituted in the place of mine, To calm this tempest whirling in the court; And let the emperor dandle him for his own. Hark ye, lords; ye see I have given her physic. [Pointing to the Nurse. And you must needs bestow her funeral; The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms:

This done, see that you take no longer days, But send the midwife presently to me. The midwife and the nurse well made away, Then let the ladies tattle what they please. Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
[Exeunt DEM. and CHI., bearing off the dead Nurse.

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies:

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms, And secretly to greet the empress' friends.—Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence;

For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave; and bring you up
To be a warrior and command a camp. [Exit.

Scene III.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows, with letters at the ends of them; with him Marcus, Young Lucius, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come:—kinsmen, this is the way.—

And never after to inherit it. Let him that thinks of me so abjectly Know that this gold must coin a stratagem, Which, cunningly effected, will beget A very excellent piece of villany. And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad When everything doth make a gleeful boast? The birds chant melody on every bush; The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun; The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind, And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground: Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit, And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns, As if a double hunt were heard at once, Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise; And,-after conflict such as was suppos'd The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd, When with a happy storm they were surpris'd, And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,-We may, each wreathed in the other's arms, Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber; Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds

Be unto us as is a nurse's song Of lullaby to hring her babe asleep. Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires, Saturn is dominator over mine: What signifies my deadly-standing eye, My silence and my cloudy melancholy, My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls Even as an adder when she doth unroll To do some fatal execution? No, madam, these are no venereal signs, Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand, Blood and revenge are hammering in my head. Hark, Tamora, -the empress of my soul. Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee, This is the day of doom for Bassianus: His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day; Thy sons make pillage of her chastity, And wash their hands in Bassianns' blood. Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee, And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.-Now question me no more,—we are espied; Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty, Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life! [comes:

Adr. No more, great empress, Bassianus Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. Exit.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress, Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop? Or is it Dian, hahited like her, Who hath ahandoned her holy groves

To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps! Had I the power that some day Dian had, Thy temples should he planted presently With horns, as was Acteon's; and the hounds Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs, Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress, 'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning; And to be doubted that your Moor and you Are singled forth to try experiments: Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue, Spotted, detested, and abominable. Why are you sequester'd from all your train, Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed, And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, Accompanied but with a harbarous Moor, If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport, Great reason that my noble lord be rated For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence, And let her joy her raven-colour's love; This valley fits the purpose passing well. Bas. The king my brother shall have note of [noted long: this. Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him Good king, to be so mightily abus'd? Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan? Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place:-A barren detested vale you see it is; The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe: Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds, Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven: And when they show'd me this ahhorred pit They told me, here at dead time of the night A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes, Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins, , Would make such fearful and confused cries As any mortal body hearing it Should straight fall mad or else die suddenly. No sooner had they told this hellish tale But straight they told me they would bind me here Unto the body of a dismal yew, And leave me to this miserable death: And then they call'd me foul adulteress, Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms That ever ear did hear to such effect: And had you not by wondrous fortune come, This vengeance on me had they executed. Revenge it, as you love your mother's life, Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son. [Stabs BASSIANUS.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs Bas., who dies. .

And when thou hast given it to the emperor, Knock at my door, and tell me what he says. Clo. God be with you, sir; I will. Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go.--Publius. follow me. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, CHIRON, Lords, and others; SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt? My lords, you know, as do the mightful gods. However these disturbers of our peace Buzz in the people's ears, there neught hath passid,

But even with law, against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus afflicted in his freaks, His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? And now he writes to heaven for his redress: See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury; This to Apollo; this to the god of war;-Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! What's this but libelling against the senate, And blazoning our injustice everywhere? A goodly humour, is it not, my lords? As who would say, in Rome no justice were. But if I live, his feigned ecstasies Shall be no shelter to these outrages: But he and his shall know that justice lives In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep, He'll so awake as she in fury shall Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine, Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age, The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scarr'd his heart; And rather comfort his distressed plight Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempts.-[Aside]. Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all: But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, Thy life-blood on't: if Agron now be wise, Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.-

Enter Clown.

How now, go with ul?

Clo. Yes, forbooth, an your mistership be imperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor. Clo. 'Tis he .- God and Saint Stephen give you good-den: I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeous here.

SATURNINUS reads the letter. Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have? Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit guarded. Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongst Shall I endure this monstrous villany? I know from whence this same device proceeds: May this be borne, as if his traitorous sons. That died by law for murder of our brother, Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully?-

Go, drag the villain hither by the hair: Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege .-For this proud mock I'll be thy slanghter-man: Sly frantic weetch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enler EMILIUS.

What news with thee, Emilius? Emîl. Arm, my lord! Rome never had more cause!

The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power.

Of high resolved men, bent to the spoil, They hither march amain, under conduct Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus; Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths? These tidings nip me; and I hang the head As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms:

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach: Tis he the common people love so much; Myself hath often overheard them say, When I have walked like a private man, That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius, And will revolt from me to succour him. Tam. King, he thy thoughts imperious, like thy name. Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it? The eagle suffers little birds to sing, And is not careful what they mean thereby, Knowing that with the shedow of his wing He can at pleasure stint their melody: Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome. Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor, I will enchant the old Andronicus With words more sweet, and yet more danger-0115,

Than baits to fish or honey-stalks to sheep, d fellow! wouldst thou speak When as the one is wounded with the bait, The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us. Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will: For I can smooth and fill his aged ear With golden promises that, were his heart Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf, Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue .-Go thou before [to EMILIUS]; be our ambassador:

Say that the emperor requests a parley Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus. Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know

'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear A precious ring that lightens all the hole, Which, like a taper in some monument. Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks, And shows the ragged entrails of the pit: So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus When he hy night lay hath'd in maiden blood. O hrother, help me with thy fainting hand,—If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—Out of this fell devouring receptacle, As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good, I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. I have no strength to pluck thee to the hrink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Ouin. Thy hand once more; I will not lose Till thou art here aloft, or I below: Thou canst not come to me,—I come to thee.

(Falls in. Enter SATURNINUS with AARON.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is here.

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.—
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth!

Into this gaping hollow of the earth!

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy hrother Bassianus dead. | jiest:

Sat. My brother dead? I know thou dost but He and his lady both are at the lodge Upon the north side of this pleasant chase; 'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him all alive:

But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS
ANDRONICUS and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
Sat. Now to the hottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a letter.
The complet of this timeless tragedy;

And wonder greatly that man's face can fold In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny. Sat. [Reods.] An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—

Sweet huntsmon, Bassianus'tis we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
Thou know'st our meoning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder tree Which overshodes the mouth of that same pit

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.
O Tamoral was ever heard the like?—
This is the pit and this the elder tree:—
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.
Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

[Showing it. Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my hrother of his life.— Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison: There let them bide until we have devis'd Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tom. What, are they in this pit! O wondrous thing?

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feehle knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed.
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,—
Accursed if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sol. If it he prov'd! you see it is apparent.—
Who found this letter! Tamora, was it you!
Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.
Tit. I did my lord; ret he me he their heil

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me he their bail; For, by my father's reverend tomh, I vow They shall be ready at your highness' will To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not hail them; see thou follow me.— [murder'd body, some the Let them not speak a word,—the guilt is plain; For, hy my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.
Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.
Til. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.

Excunt severally. Attendants bearing the body.

Scene IV .-- Another part of the Forest.

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia rovished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, and if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twes that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,

And if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe,

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit [Excunt DEM. and CHI.

Enter MARCUS.

Marc. Who is this,—my niece,—that flies away so fast?—

Cousin, a word; where is your husband!—

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st. (trimming?

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that Agr. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas [them: Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct The codding spirit had they from their mother, As sure a card as ever won the set; That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me, As true a dog as ever fought at head. Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth. I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay: I wrote the letter that thy father found, And hid the gold within the letter mention'd, Confederate with the queen and her two sons: And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue, Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in't? I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand: And when I had it, drew myself apart, And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter:

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall When, for bis band, he had his two sons' beads; Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily That both mine eyes were rainy like to his: And when I told the empress of this sport, She swooned almost at my pleasing tale, And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What, canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is. Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Agr. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day,—and yet, I think, Few come within the compass of my curse,-Wherein I did not some notorious ill: As, kill a man, or else devise his death; Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it; Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself; Set deadly enmity between two friends; Make poor men's cattle stray and break their necks;

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night, And bid the owners quench them with their

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves, And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot; And on their skins, as on the bark of trees, Have with my knife carved in Roman letters, Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead. Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things As willingly as one would kill a fly; And nothing grieves me heartily indeed

But that I cannot do ten thousand more. Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not So sweet a death as hanging presently,

Agr. If there be devils, would I were a devil, To live and burn in everlasting fire, So I might have your company in hell, But to torment you with my bitter tongue! Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

3 Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome

Desires to be admitted to your presence. Luc. Let him come near.

Enter EMILIUS.

Welcome, Emilius: what's the news from Rome?

Emil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the The Roman emperor greets you all by me; And, for he understands you are in arms, He craves a parley at your father's house, Willing you to demand your hostages, And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

I Goth. What says our general? Luc. Emilius, let the emperor give his pledges Unto my father and my uncle Marcus, And we will come .- March away. Exeunt.

Scene IL-Rome. Before TITUS'S House.

Enter Tamora, Demetrius, and Chiron disouised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habili-I will encounter with Andronicus,

And say I am Revenge, sent from below To join with him and right his beinous wrongs. Knock at his study, where they say he keeps To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge; Tell him Revenge is come to join with him, And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock.

Enter Tirus, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation? Is it your trick to make me ope the door, That so my sad decrees may fly away, And all my study be to no effect? You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do See here in bloody lines I have set down; And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee. Tit. No, not a word: how can I grace my talk.

Wanting a hand to give it action? Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more. Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.

Til. I am not mad; I know thee well enough: Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care; Witness the tiring day and heavy night; Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well For our proud empress, mighty Tamora: Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora; She is thy enemy and I thy friend: I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes. Come down and welcome me to this world's light;

Confer with me of murder and of death:

Marc. This was thy daughter.
Til. Why, Marcus, so she is.
Luc. Ay me! this object kills me! [her.—
Til. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight! What fool hath added water to the sea, Or brought a fagot to bright-burning Troy! My grief was at the height before thou cam'st; And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too; For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain; And they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life; In bootless prayer have they been held up. And they have serv'd me to effectless use: Now all the service I require of them Is that the one will help to cut the other.— 'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands; For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain. Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee? Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage, Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every earl

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed!

Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park.

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer That hath receiv'd some unrecurring wound. Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead: For now I stand as one upon a rock, Environ'd with a wilderness of sea; Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave, Expecting ever when some envious surge Will in his brinish bowels swallow him. This way to death my wretched sons are gone; Here stands my other son, a banish'd man; And here my brother, weeping at my woes: But that which gives my sonl the greatest spurn Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul .-Had I but seen thy picture in this plight It would have madded me: what shall I do Now I behold thy lively body so! Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears, Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee: Thy husband he is dead; and for his death Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this. Look, Marcus!-ah, son Lucius, look on her! When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew) Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband:

Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy hasband, then be jo yiui,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them. No, no, they would not do so foul a deed; Witness the sorrow that their sister makes. Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips; Or make some sign how I may do thee ease: Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius, And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain, Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd, as meadows, yet not dry. With miry slime left on them by a flood! And in the fountain shall we gaze so long, Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness, And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears! Or shall we cut away our hands like thine! Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days! What shall we do! let us, that have our tongues, Plot some device of further misery,

To make us wonder'd at in time to come. Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears, for at your grief See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps. Marc. Patience, dear niece.-Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy checks. Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she

Say That to her brother which I said to thee: His napkin, with his true tears all bewet, Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks. O, what a sympathy of woe is this, As far from help as limbo is from bliss!

Enfer AARON.

Agr. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor Sends thee this word,—that if thou love thy sons Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,

Or any one of you, chop off your hand And send it to the king: he for the same Will send thee hither both thy sons alive And that shall be the ransom for their fault. Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!

Did ever raven sing so like a lark That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise! With all my heart I'll send the emperor My hand:

Good Asron, wilt thou help to chop it off? Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies, Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn: My youth can better spare my blood than you; And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, Writing destruction on the enemy's castle! O, none of both but are of high desert: My hand hath been but idle; let it serve To ransom my two nephews from their death; Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aur. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,

For fear they die before their pardon come. Marc. My hand shall go.

By heaven, it shall not gol Luc. Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd? [do.—
Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius and others.

Pub. What is your will?
Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The empress' sons,

I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fiel thou art too much deceiv'd,—

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius:—
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them:—
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it; therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit. Publius, &c., loy hold on Chiron and Demetrius.

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons. [manded.—

Pub. And therefore do we what we are com-Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.

Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with LAVINIA; he bearing a knife and she a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.— [me; Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to But let them hear what fearful words I utter.— O villains, Chiron and Demetrius! Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud;

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband; and for that vile fault
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off and made a merry jest;
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that,
more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity. Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd. What would you say, if I should let you speak? Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace. Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you. This one hand yet is left to cut your throats, Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood.
You know your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad:—

Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust, And with your blood and it I'll make a paste; And of the paste a coffin I will rear, And make two pasties of your shameful heads; And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam, Like to the earth, swallow her own increase. This is the feast that I have bid her to, And this the banquet she shall surfeit on; For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter, And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd: And now prepare your throats. Lavinia.come. [He cuts their throats.

Receive the blood; and when that they are dead.

Let me go grind their bones to powder small, And with this hateful liquor temper it; And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd. Come, come, be every one officious To make this banquet; which I wish may prove More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook, And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes. [Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.

Scene III.—Rome. A Pavilion in Titus's Gardens, with tables, &c.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

I Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

[Moor.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil; Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him, Till he be brought unto the empress' face For testimony of her foul proceedings: And see the ambush of our friends be strong; I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear, And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!—

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—
[Exeunt Goths with AAR. Flourish within.
The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself the sun?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parie;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. The feast is ready, which the careful Titus Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome: places.

Places and take your

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your Sat. Marcus, we will.
[Hautboys sound. The compony sit at table.

Enter Titus, dressed like a cook, Lavinia, voiled, Young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius; And welcome all: although the cheer be poor, 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. Sot. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus? Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well

To entertain your highness and your empress.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus.

[were.

Tit. And if your highness knew my heart, you My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Execut Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia. Luc. Farewell. Andronicus, my noble father,-

The woefull'st man that ever liv'd in Rome: Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again, He leaves his pledges dearer than his life: Farewell, Lavinia, Lavinia, my noble sister; O, would thou wert as thou 'tofore hast been! But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives But in oblivion and hateful griefs. If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs, And make proud Saturnine and his empress Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. Exit Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and Young Lucius, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look you est no more Than will preserve just so much strength in us As will revenge these bitter woes of ours. Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot: Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hends.

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; And when my heart, all mad with misery, Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh. Then thus I thump it down. Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

TO LAVINIA. When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still. Wound it with sighing, girl; kill it with groans; Or get some little knife between thy teeth, And just against thy heart make thou a hole, That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall May run into that sink, and, soaking in, Drown the Ismenting fool in sea-salt tears

Marc. Fie, brother, fiel teach her not thus to lay

 Such violent hands upon her tender life. Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I, What violent hands can she lay on her life? Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands; To bid Eness tell the tale twice o'er How Troy was burnt and he made miserable? O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands, Lest we remember still that we have none. Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,-As if we should forget we had no hands, If Marcus did not name the word of hands! Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.— Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she 5275;· I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;-She says she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd upon her cheeks:-

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought; In thy dumb action will I be as perfect As begging hermits in their holy prayers: Thou shalt not sign, nor hold thy stumps to heaven. Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,

But I of these will wrest an alphabet, [ing. And by still practice learn to know thy mean-

Y. Luc. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:

Make my sunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Merc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mor'd, Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away. MARCUS strikes the dish with a knife. What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Merc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord,a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thon kill'st my heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny: A deed of death done on the innocent Becomes not Titus' brother: get thee gone;

I see thou art not for my company.

Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly. Tit. But how if that fiy had a father and mother?

How would be hang his slender gilded wings, And buzz lameuting doings in the airl Poor harmless fly,

That with his pretty burning melody Came hereto make us merry! and thou hast kill'd him. lfavour'd fly.

More. Pardon me, sir; 'twas a black ill-Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd him.

Tit. O. O, O. Then pardon me for reprehending thee, For thou hast done a charitable deed. Give me thy knife, I will insult on him Flattering myself as if it were the Moor Come hither purposely to poison me. There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.-Ah, sìrrah! Yet I do think we are not brought so low

But that between us we can kill a fly That comes in likeness of a coal-black Meer.

Marc. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances. Tit. Come, take away.-Levinis, go with me: Pil to thy closet; and go read with thee Sad stories chanced in the times of old .-Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young. And thou shalt read when mine begins to dazzle. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene L-Rome. Before Titus's House.

Enter Trrus and MARCUS. Then enter Young Lucius numing, with books under his erm, and LAVINIA running after him.

F. Luc. Help, grandsire, help! my sunt Lavinia Follows me everywhere, I know not why. --

Romans. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail,
Rome's gracious governor! [so

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern To heal Rome's harms and wipe away her woel But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,—For nature puts me to a heavy task:—Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near, To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.—O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, face,

The last true duties of thy noble son!
Marc. Tear for tear and loving kiss for kiss
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!
Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us [well:

To melt in showers: thy grandsire lov'd thee
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so: [woe: Friends should associate friends in grief and Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave; Do him that kindness, and take leave of him. Y. Luc. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart

Would I were dead, so you did live again!—
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants with AARON.

Emil. You sad Andronici, have done with woes:

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,

For the offence he dies. This is our doom:

Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done:
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did,

I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor

hence,
And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey:
Her life was beast-like and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne'er it ruinate.

[Exeunt.

Y. Luc. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.
Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury:
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy,
Shalt carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents that I intend to send them both:
Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

[grandsire.

Y. Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.—

Lavinia, come.—Marcus, look to my house: Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court; Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited [Excunt Tir., LAV., and Y. Luc. Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,

And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;
But yet so just that be will not revenge:

Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus!

Scene II .- Rome. A Room in the Palace.

Enter AARON, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, at one door; at another door, Young Lucius and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius; He hath some message to deliver us. Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather. {may, Y. Luc. My lords, with all the humbleness I

I greet your honours from Andronicus,—
And pray the Roman gods confound you both!
[Aside.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius; what's the news?

Boy [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news, [yon, For villains mark'd with rape.—May it please My grandsire, well-advis'd, hath sent by me The goodliest weapons of his armoury To gratify your honourable youth, The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say; And so I do, and with his gifts present Your lordships, that whenever you bave need Yon may be armed and appointed well:

And so I leave you both,—[aside] like bloody villains.

[Excunt Y. Luc. and Attendant.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:—
[Reads.] Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus,

Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:

I read it in grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just,—a verse in Horace;—right, you have it.—

Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! [Aside. Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt;

And canel them weapons weap'd shout with

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty empress well a-foot, Sbe would applaud Andronicus' conceit. But let her rest in her unrest awhile.— And now, young lords, was't not a happy star Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so, Captives, to be advanced to this height? It did me good before the palace gate To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good to see so great a lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius? Did you not use his daughter very friendly? Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish

thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Softl wbo comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child in her arms.

Nur. Good-morrow, lords: O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Agr. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all, Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now? Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. 0, that which I would hide from heaven's eye,

Our empress' shame and stately Rome's disgracel-

She is deliver'd, lords,—she is deliver'd.

Aar. To wbom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought a-bed.
Aur. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam; a joyful issue. sissue:

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime: The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal. And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's

Aar. Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue?— Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom,

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.
Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

To keep her still, and men in awe,—
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.

SCENE I .- ANTIOCH. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd

The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,

Think death no hazard in this enterprise.

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,

For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Music. Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,

Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king Of every virtue gives renown to men! Her face the book of praises, where is read Nothing but curious pleasures, as from hence Sorrow were ever raz'd and testy wrath Could never be her mild companion. Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love, That have inflam'd desire in my breast To taste the fruit of you celestial tree, Or die in the adventure, be my helps, As I am son and servant to your will, To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,

That, without covering, save you field of stars,
Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught

My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will, then; and, as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe.

Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did; So I bequeath a happy peace to you And all good men, as every prince should do: My riches to the earth from whence they came:—

But my unspotted fire of love to you.

Thus ready for the way of life or death, I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus.

Ant. Scorning advice,—read the conclusion, then:

Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed, As these before thee, thou thyself shall bleed. Daugh. In all save that, mayst thou prove prosperous!

In all save that, I wish thee happiness!

Per. Like a bold champion I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

[Reads the Riddle.

I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh which did me breed.
I sought a husband, in which la bour
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild;
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers. That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts.

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually, If this be true, which makes me pale to read

Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still, [Takes hold of the hand of the Princess. Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill: But I must tell you,—now my thoughts revolt; For he's no man on whom perfections wait That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate. You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings; Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music, Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken;

But, being play'd upon before your time, Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime. Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy

For that's an article within our law As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd: Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act
'Twould 'braid yourself too near for me to tell

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown:
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in other's eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear:
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind

Sir boy, now let me see your archery; Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.

Terras Astræa reliquit:

Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. Yon, cousins, shall. Go sound the ocean and cast your nets; Happily you may catch her in the sea: Yet there's as little justice as at land. No; Publins and Sempronius, you must do it; 'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade, And pierce the inmost centre of the earth: Then, when you come to Pluto's region, I pray you deliver him this petition; Tell him it is for justice and for aid, And that it comes from old Andronicus. Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome. Ah, Rome!-Well, well; I made thee miserable What time I threw the people's suffrages On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd: This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said. Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas,

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon:

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Hal hal

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done? See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord; when Publius shot,

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court; And who should find them but the empress' villain?

She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joyl

Enter a Clown, with a basket and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters? Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. Ho, the gibbet-maker? he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?
Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.
Tif. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?
Clo. From heaven! alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwirt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace? Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado, But give your pigeons to the emperor: By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.

Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges.

Give me pen and ink .-Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplica-

Clo. Ay, sir.
Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir, let me alone. Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it. Here. Marcus, fold it in the oration: [ant:-For thou hast made it like an humble suppliWhereas reproof, obedient, and in order, Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err. When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace He flatters you, makes war upon your life. Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you please; I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. To bear with patience Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,

That minister'st a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of

death,
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest,—hark in thine ear,—as black as

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss. Which fear so grew in me, I hither fied, Under the covering of a careful night, Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here, Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears Decrease not, but grow faster than their years: And should he doubt it,—as no doubt he doth,—

That I should open to the listening air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,—
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this iand with arms,

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts How I might stop this tempest ere it came; And, finding little comfort to relieve them, I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak, Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear, And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant, Who either by public war or private treason Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for awhile, Till that this rage and anger be forgot, Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life, Your rule direct to any, if to me,

Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be. Per. I do not doubt thy faith;

But should he wrong my liherties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,

From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee, then, and to Tharsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee; And hy whose letters I'll dispose myself. The care I had and have of subjects' good On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath: Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both:

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—Tyre. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'its dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for't: for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escanes, and other Lords. Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question me of your king's departure:
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside.] Howl the king is gone!

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch.—

Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?

Hel. Royal Antiochus,—on what cause I know not,—

[50]

Took some displeasure at him; at least he judg'd And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd, To show his sorrow, he'd correct himself;

Aor.

EMIL. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

Tom. Now will I to that old Andronicus, And temper him, with all the art I have, To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths. And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again, And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him. Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I .- Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius and Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors and my faithful friends.

I have received letters from great Rome, Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are. Therefore, great lords, be as your titles witness, Imperious and impatient of your wrongs; And wherein Rome hath done you any scath Let him make treble satisfaction.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON with his Child in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops

I stray'd To gaze upon a ruinous monastery: And as I earnestly did fix mine eye Upon the wasted building, suddenly I heard a child cry underneath a wall. I made unto thee noise; when soon I heard The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:-Peoce, tawny slave, holf me and holf thy dom! Did not thy hue bewroy whose brat thou art, Had noture lent thee but thy mother's look, Villain, thou mightst hove been an emperor: But where the bull ond cow are both milk-white They never do beget a coal-black calf. Peoce, villoin, peoce!-even thus he rates the babe, For I must bear thee to o trusty Goth; Who, when he knows thou art the empress?

bobe. Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake. With this, my weapon drawn I rush'd upon him.

Sat. EMILIUS, do this message honourably: Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither

To use as you think needful of the man. [devil Luc. O wortby Goth, this is the incarnate That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand; This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye; And bere's the base fruit of his burning lust.— Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey This growing image of thy fiend-like face? Why dost not speak? what, deaf? No: not a word?~

A halter, soldiers; hang him on this tree,

And by his side his fruit of bastardy,

Aor. Touch not the boy,—be is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good .-First hang the child, that be may see it sprawl-A sight to vex the father's soul withal. Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which AARON is obliged to ascend. Lucius, save the child,

And bear it from me to the empress. If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things That highly may advantage thee to hear: If thou wilt not, befall what may befall, I'll speak no more, -but vengeance rot you all!

Luc. Say on: an if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd. Agr. An if it please theel why, assure thee, Lucius,

'Twill ver thy soul to hear what I shall speak; For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres.

Acts of black night, abominable deeds. Complots of mischief, treason, villanies, Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd: And this shall all be buried by my death, Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st no god:

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath? Aor. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not; Yet, for I know thou art religious, And hast a thing within thee called conscience, With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies Which I have seen thee careful to observe, Therefore I urge thy oath; -for that I know An idiot holds his bauble for a god, And keeps the oath which by that god he swears; To that I'll urge him: - therefore thou shalt vow By that same god, -what god soe'er it be That thou ador'st and hast in reverence, To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up;

Or else I will discover naught to thee. Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will. Agr. First know thou, I begot him on the empress. Luc. O most insatiate luxurious woman! Aor. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon. 'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus; They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her, Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread, And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!-And we'll pray for you.

Rise, I pray you, rise: We do not look for reverence, but for love, And harhourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify, Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought, Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves, The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils! seen.

Till when,—the which I hope shall ne'er be Your grace is welcome to our town and us. Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while. Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king His child, I wis, to incest bring; A better prince, and benign lord That will prove awful both in deed and word. Be quiet, then, as men should be, Till he hath pass'd necessity. I'll show you those in troubles reign, Losing a mite, a mountain gain. The good in conversation, To whom I give my benison, Is still at Tharsus, where each man Thinks all is writ he spoken can; And, to remember what he does, Gild his statue to make him glorious: But tidings to the contrary Are brought your eyes: what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter, at one side, Pericles, talking with CLEON; their Trains with them. Enter, at the other, a Gentleman with a letter to PERICLES, who shows it to CLEON, then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES and CLEON with their Trains, severally.

Good Helicane hath stay'd at home, Not to eat honey like a drone From others' labours; for though be strive To killen bad, keep good alive; And, to fulfil his prince' desira, Sends word of all that haps in Tyre: How Thaliard came full bent with sin And hid intent to murder him; And that in Tharsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest. He, knowing so, put forth to seas, Where when men been, there's seldom ease; For now the wind begins to blow; Thunder above and deeps below Make such unquiet that the ship Should house him safe is wreck'd and split; And he, good prince, having all lost, By waves from coast to coast is toss'd: All perishen of man, of pelf, Ne aught escapen but himself; Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad, Threw him ashore, to give him glad: And here he comes. What shall be next Pardon old Gower,—this longs the text. [Exit.

Scene I .- Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven! Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly Is but a substance that must yield to you: And I, as fits my nature, do oney you; Alas, the sea bath cast me on the rocks, Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me hreatb

Nothing to think on but ensuing death: Let it suffice the greatness of your powers To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes: And having thrown him from your watery grave, Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

r Fish. What, ho, Pilch!

2 Fish. Ho, come and hring away the nets!

1 Fish. What, Patchbreech, I sayl
3 Fish. What say you, master?
1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.

3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish half flesh: a plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

r Fish. Why, as men do a-land,—the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful: such whales have I heard on the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the beliry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly I would have kept such a jangling of the bells that he should never have left till he cast bells. steeple, church, and parish up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,— . Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

3 Fish. He would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey. Per. [Aside.] How from the finny subject of the sea These fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve or men detect!-Peace be at your labour, bonest fishermen.

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place, No vast obscurity or misty vale, Where bloody murder or detested rape Can couch for fear but I will find them out; And in their ears tell themmy dreadful name, Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me

To be a torment to mine enemies? [come me. Tam. I am; therefore come down and wel-Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee. Lo, by the side where Rape and Murder stands; Now give some 'surance that thon are Revenge,- Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels; And then PII come and be thy waggoner, And whirl along with thee about the globe. Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet, To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away, And find out murderers in their guilty caves: And when thy car is loaden with their heads I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel Trot, like a servile footman, all day long, Even from Hyperion's rising in the east Until his very downfall in the sea: And day by day I'll do this heavy task, So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there. Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called 'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men. Tit. Good lord, how like the empress sons they are! And you the empress! But we worldly men Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes. O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee; And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit from above. Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy: Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches, For now he firmly takes me for Revenge; And, being credulous in this mad thought, I'll make him send for Lucius his son; And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure, I'll find some cunning practice out of hand To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths, Or, at the least, make them his enemies. See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter TITUS.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:

Welcome, dread fury, to my woeful house;-Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too:-How like the empress and her sons you are! Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor; Could not all hell afford you such a devil?-For well I wot the empress never wags But in her company there is a Moor; And, would you represent our queen aright, It were convenient you had such a devil: But welcome as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus? [him. Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape, And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong. And I will be revenged on them all. [Rome, Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Goths, And bid him come and banquet at thy house; When he is here, even at thy solemn feast, I will bring in the empress and her sons, The emperor himself, and all thy foes; And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel, And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart. What says Andronicus to this device? [calls.

Tit. Marcus, my brother!-'tis sad Titus

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius; Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths: Bid him repair to me, and bring with him Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths: Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are: Tell him the emperor and the empress too Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them. This do thou for my love; and so let him As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business, And take my ministers along with me. Tit. Hay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,

Or else I'll call my brother back again,

And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to them.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor How I have govern'd our determin'd jest? Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him

And tarry with him till I come again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they. suppose me mad, vices, And will o'er-reach them in their own de-A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam.

Scene II.—Pentapolis. A public Way or Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

I Lord. They are, my liege;

And stay your coming to present themselves. Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

Exit a Lord. Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express

My commendations great, whose merit's less. Sim. It's fit it should be so; for princes are A model which heaven makes like to itself: As jewels lose their glory if neglected, So princes their renown if not respected. 'Tis now your labour, daughter, to explain The honour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passeth over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself? Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;

And the device he bears upon his shield Is a black Æthiop reaching at the sun; The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of [The Second Knight passes.

Who is the second that presents himself? Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father; And the device he bears upon his shield Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady; The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.

[The Third Knight passes. Sim. And what's the third?

The third of Antioch; Thai. And his device a wreath of chivalry;

The word, Me pompæ provexit apex. The Fourth Knight passes.

Sim. What is the fourth? Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside

The word, Quod me alit, me extinguit. Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame as it can kill. [The Fifth Knight passes.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with [tried; clouds, Holding out gold that's by the touchstone The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The Sixth Knight (Pericles) passes. Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself

With such graceful courtesy deliver'd? Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top; The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral: From the dejected state wherein he is,

He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish. r Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend: For, by his rusty outside, he appears To have practis'd more the whipstock than the 2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust. Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan The outward habit by the inward man. But stay, the knights are coming: we will withdraw

Into the gallery. Exeunt. [Great shouts within, all crying, "The mean knight!"

Scene III.—Pentapolis. A Hall of State: A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, Knights and Attendants.

Sim. Knights. To say you are welcome were superfluous. To place upon the volume of your deeds, As in a title-page, your worth in arms Were more than you expect, or more than's fit, Since every worth in show commends itself. Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast: You are princes and my guests.

But you my knight and guest; Thai. To whom this wreath of victory I give,

And crown you king of this day's happiness. Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by yours; merit. Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is

And here I hope is none that envies it. In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed, To make some good, but others to exceed, And you're her labour'd scholar,—Come, queen o' the feast,— [place:

For, daughter, so you are,—here take your Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace. Knights. We are honour'd much by good [we love;

Simonides. Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place. Some other is more fit. Рет. I Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes

Envy the great, nor do the low despise. Per. You are right courteous knights. Sit, sir, sit. Sim.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts, These cates resist me, she but thought upon

Was it well done of rash Virginius To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord. [shame, Sat. Because the girl should not survive her And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong and effectual; A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant For me, most wretched, to perform the like:-Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee: Kills LAVINIA.

And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die! Sot. What hast thou done, unnatural and l unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginius was,

And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage; -and it is now done. Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrins: They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;

And they, 'twas they that did her all this wrong. Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently. Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that of Rome.

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts. O, let me teach you how to knit again This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf, These broken limbs again into one body; Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself And she whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to, Like a foriorn and desperate castaway, Do shameful execution on herself. But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Cannot induce you to attend my words, Speak, Rome's dear friend [to Lucius]: as erst our ancestor, When with his solemn tongue he did discourse To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear

Grave witnesses of true experience,

The story of that baleful burning night When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's

Troy,-Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears, Or who hath brought the fatal engine in

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound. My heart is not compact of fliut nor steel; Nor can I utter all our bitter grief, But floods of tears will drown my oratory And break my very utterance, even in the time When it should move you to attend me most, Lending your kind commiseration. Here is a captain, let him tell the tale; Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdered our emperor's brother; And they it were that ravished our sister: For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded;

Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel ont

And sent her enemies unto the grave. Lestly, myself unkindly banished. The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping ont. To beg relief among Rome's enemies; Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears, And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend: And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you, That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood; And from her bosom took the enemy's point. Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body. Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I; My scars can witness, dumb although they are, That my report is just and full of truth. But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me; For when no friends are by, men praise themchild. selves.

Merc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this [Pointing to the Child in an Attendant's arms. Of this was Tamora delivered; The issue of an irreligious Moor, Chief architect and plotter of these woes: The villain is alive in Titus' house, Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true. Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge These wrongs unspeakable, past patience, Or more than any living man could bear. Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans?

Have we done aught amiss,-show us wherein, And, from the place where you behold us now, The poor remainder of Andronici Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down. And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains, And make a mutual closure of our house. Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall, Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand, Lucius our emperor; for well I know The common voice do cry it shall be so.

Romans. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal emperor!

Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house, [To Attendents, who go into the house. And hither hale that misbelieving Moor, To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death, As punishment for his most wicked life. [Lucius, Marcus, &c., descend. Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not your prince you love. [Helicane; r Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, nohle But if the prince do live, let us salute him, Or know what ground's made happy by his hreath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out; If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there; And be resolv'd he lives to govern us, Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral, And leaves us to our free election.

And leaves us to our free election.

2 Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure:

And knowing this kingdom, if without a head, Like goodly buildings, left without a roof, Will soon to ruins fall,—your noble self, That best know'st how to rule and how to reign, We thus suhmit unto,—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane! [frages: Hel. For honour's cause, forhear your suffit that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.

Take I your wish, I leap into the seas, Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease. A twelvementh longer, let me entreat you To forbear the absence of your king; If in which time expir'd, he not return, I shall with aged patience bear your yoke. But if I cannot win you to this love, Go search like nobles, like nohle subjects, And in your search spend your adventurous worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return, You shall like diamonds sit about his crown. I Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield; And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us, We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

Exeunt.

Scene V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden to you

For your sweet music this last night: I do Protest my ears were never better fed With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend; Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch,

To sing a song that old was sung. From ashes ancient Gower is come; Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes. It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves and holy ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et'bonum quo antiquius, co melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might

Waste it for you, like taper-light.— This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat; The fairest in all Syria,— I tell you what mine authors say: This king unto him took a fere, Who died and left a female heir, So buxom, blithe, and full of face, As heaven had lent her all his grace; With whom the father liking took, And her to incest did provoke: Bad child; worse father! to entice his own To evil should be done by none: But custom what they did begin Was with long use account no sin. The beauty of this sinful dame Made many princes thither frame To seek her as a bed-fellow, In marriage-pleasures play-fellow: Which to prevent he made a law,- Recall not what we give, and therein may Vie in honour with you.

I Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

SCENE IL.—TYRE. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. [To those without.] Let none disturb us.—
Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest as not an bour
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,—
The tomb where grief should sleep,—can breed me quiet?

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes

shun them,
And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose aim seems far too short to hit me bere:
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done.
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me:—the great Antiochus,—
'Gainst wbom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,—
Will think me spesking, though I swear to silence;

Nor boots it me to say I honour him, If be suspect I may dishonour him: And what may make him blush in being known, He'll stop the course by which it might be known;

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the Isnd,
And with the ostent of war will look so hnge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:

Which care of them, not pity of myself,—
Who once no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,—

ACT IV.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcom'd and settled to his own desire. His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus, Unto Diana there a votaress. Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast growing scene must find At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place Of general wonder. But, alack, That monster envy, oft the wrack Of earned praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench full grown, Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid Hight Philoten: and it is said For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be: Be't when she wear'd the sleided silk

With fingers long, small, white as milk: Or when she would with sharp needle wound The cambric, which she made more sound. By hurting it; or when to the lute She sung, and made the night-bird mute, That still records with moan; or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dian; still This Philoten contends in skill With absolute Marina: so With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts, And not as given. This so darks In Philoten all graceful marks That Cleon's wife, with envy rare, A present murderer does prepare For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter. The sooner her vile thoughts to stead, Lychorida, our nurse, is dead: And cursed Dionyza hath The pregnant instrument of wrath Prest for this blow. Scene IV.—Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyzs, shall we rest us here, And by relating tales of others' griefs See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;

For who digs hills because they do aspire Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher. O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are; Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; [want, That, if heaven slumber while their creatures They may awake their helps to comfort them. I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years, And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears. Dio. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom plenty held full hand, For riches strew'd herself even in the streets; Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clonds,

And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at; Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd, Like one another's glass to trim them by: Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight, And not so much to feed on as delight; All poverty was scom'd, and pride so great, The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O'tis too true.
Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change, [air

These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and Were all too little to content and please.

Although they gave their creatures in abundance,

As honses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now stary'd for want of exercise:
Those palates who, not us'd to savour hunger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste.
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nousle up their babes,
Thought naught too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loy'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife.
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness

Cle. O, let those cities that of Plenty's cup And her prosperities so largely taste, With her superfluous riots, hear these tears! The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enfer a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thon bring'st in For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, npon one neighbouring shore,

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery, [power,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their

And make a conquest of unhappy we,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

repear:
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can.

What need we fear? [there.
The ground's the lowest, and we are half way
Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;

If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are, Let not our ships and number of our men Be, like a beacon fir'd, to ameze your eyes. We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre, And seen the desolation of your streets: Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, Bnt to relieve them of their heavy load; And these our ships, you happily may think Are like the Trojan horse war-stuff'd within With bloody veins, expecting overthrow, Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we. Pand. As well as wel ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling.—But here comes Boult.

Boult. [To MARINA.] Come your ways .-My masters, you say she's a virgin?

I Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not. Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?
Boult. It cannot be bated one doit of a

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

Exeunt Pander and Pirates. Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her,the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age with warrant of her virginity; and cry, He that will give most shall have her first. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.

Mar. I accuse them not.
Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit:

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant. Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I had bargained for the joint,- Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so. Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report. Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

2 Fish. Honestl good fellow, what's that? if it be not a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it.

Per. Nay, see the sea hath cast upon your

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practised it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know; But what I am want teaches me to think on: A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill.

And have no more life than may suffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,

For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

x Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flapjacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave. 2 Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

Exeunt with Third Fisherman. Per. [Aside.] How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

I Fish. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

r Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides. Per. The good King Simonides, do you call

I Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore? I Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey: and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and tomorrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were but my fortunes equal my desires

I could wish to make one there.

I Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get he may lawfully deal for-his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing ub a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, helpl here's a fish hangs in the net like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Hal bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.-

Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; And though it was mine own, part of my heri-

Since I have here my father's gift in's will. 1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court, Where with it I may appear a gentleman; And if that ever my low fortunes better,

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rupture of the sea This jewel holds his building on my arm: Unto thy value I will mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.-Only, my friends, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will; This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt. No visard does become black villainy So well as soft and tender flattery. Enter, from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

I Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

r Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more hawdy-houses: shall's go hear the vestals sing?

I Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous; hnt I am out of the road of rutting for ever. Exeunt.

Scene V.—MITYLENE. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon herl she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of cour profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness Bawd. Faith there's no way to he rid on't Here comes the hut hy the way to the pox. Lord Lysimachus disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggage would hut give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities? Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!
Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good

Lys. You may so; 'tis the hetter for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity? Have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would -but there never came her like in Mitylene. Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst stay. [well enough.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but,--- :...

Lys. What, pr'ythee?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a hawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. Exit BOULT.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk,-never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long. voyage at sea. Well, there's for you:-leave Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bowd. First, I would have you note this is an honourable man.

[To MAR., whom she takes aside. Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bowd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am hound to.

Mar. If he govern the country you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together .- Go thy ways.

Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and BOULT. Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir? Lys. What I cannot name but I shall offend. Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it. | sion?

Lys. How long have you been of this profes-

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one. Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to he a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my anthority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, now;

Mar. If you were horn to honour, show it If put upon you, make the judgment good

That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?-Some more;

be sage

Sim. He's but a country gentleman; Has done no more than other knights have done; Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass. Per. You king's to me like to my father's picture, Which tells me in that glory once he was; Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne, And he the sun, for them to reverence: None that beheld him but, like lesser lights, Did vail their crowns to his supremacy: Where now his son's like a glowworm in the night The which hath fire in darkness, none in light: Whereby I see that Time's the king of men, For he's their parent, and he is their grave And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?

1 Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim.

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,-We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile: You knight, methinks, doth sit too melancholy, As if the entertainment in our court Had not a show might countervail his worth. Note it not you, Thaisal

Thai. What is it

To me, my father? Sim. O, attend, my daughter: Princes, in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that comes To honour them:

And princes not doing so are like to gnats, [at. Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd Therefore to make his entrance more sweet, Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me Unto a stranger knight to be so bold: He may my proffer take for an offence, Since men take women's gifts for impudence. Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

That. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him

Of whence he is, his name and parentage. Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your Thim freely.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge Thai. And further he desires to know of you Of whence you are, your name and parentage. Per. A gentlemen of Tyre,—my name,

Pericles; My education been in arts and arms;-Who, looking for adventures in the world, Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,

And after shipwreck driven upon this shore. Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself

Pericles. A gentleman of Tyre,

Who only by misfortune of the seas. Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy. Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles, And waste the time which looks for other revels. Even in your armours, as you are address'd, Will very well become a soldier's dance. I will not have excuse, with saying this Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads. Since they love men in arms as well as beds.

The Knights dance. So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd,-Come, sir;

Here is a lady that wants breathing too: And I have often heard you knights of Tyre Are excellent in making ladies trip; And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord. Idenied

Sim. O, that's as much as you would be [The Knights and Of your fair courtesy. Ladies dance.]-Unclasp, unclasp: Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well, But you the best. [To Pericles.]—Pages and lights, to conduct frours, sir, These knights unto their several lodgingsl-We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure. Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love, And that's the mark I know you level at: Therefore each one betake him to his rest; To-morrow all for speeding do their best. Excunt.

Scene IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes, no; know this of me,-Antiochus from incest liv'd not free: For which, the most high gods not minding longer Istore, To withhold the vengeance that they had in

Due to this heinous capital offence, Even in the height and pride of all his glory, When he was seated in a chariot him Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall Scorn now their hand should give them buriel. Esca. 'Twas very strange.

And yet but justice; for though Hel.This king were great, his greatness was no guard To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter three Lords.

I Lord. See, not a man in private conference Or council has respect with him but he. 2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without (second it. reproof.

3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not I Lord. Follow me, then.-Lord Helicane, my lords. a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome: happy day, I Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,

And now at length they overflow their banks.

That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry: That pupils lacks she none of noble race, Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place; And to her father turn our thoughts again, Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost; Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd Here where his daughter dwells; and on this

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense; And to him in his barge with fervour hies. In your supposing once more put your sight Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark: Where what is done in action, more, if might, Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark. Exil.

Scene I .- On board Pericles' ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck with a curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclining on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELI-CANUS.

Tyr. Sail. Where is Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

[To the Sailor of Mitylene.

O, here he is.-Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene, And in it is Lysimachus the governor, [will? What is your Who craves to come aboard. Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

r Gent. Doth your lordship call? pray, Hel. Gentlemen, There is some of worth would come aboard; I Greet them fairly.

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords, with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir, This is the man that can, in aught you would, Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sirl The gods preserve Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am, And die as I would do.

You wish me well. Lys. Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs, Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place? I am the governor Lys. Of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king; Ispoken | That none but I and my companion maid A man who for this three months hath not Be suffer'd to come near him.

To any one, nor taken sustenance, But to prorogue his grief. ture?

Lys. Upon what ground is his distempera-Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat; But the main grief springs from the loss Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him? Hel. You may;

But bootless is your sight; -he will not speak To any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish. Hel. Behold him [PERICLES discovered]. This was a goodly person

Till the disaster that one mortal night . Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all haill the gods preserve youl

Hail, royal sirl Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you. I Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene. I durst wager,

Would win some words of him.

'Tis well bethought. Lys. She, questionless, with her sweet harmony And other choice attractions, would allure, And make a battery through his deafen'd parts. Which now are midway stopp'd: She is all happy as the fairest of all, And, with her fellow maids, is now upon The leafy shelter that abuts against The island's side

[He whispers first Lord, who goes off in the barge of LYSIMACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit kindness That bears recovery's name. But, since your We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you That for our gold we may provision have, Wherein we are not destitute for want, But weary for the staleness.

O, sir, a courtesy Which if we should deny, the most just gods For every graff would send a caterpillar, And so afflict our province.—Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause Of your king's sorrow.

Sit, sir, I will recount it to you:-Hel. But, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, First Lord, with MARINA and a young Lady.

O, here is Lys.The lady that I sent for .- Welcome, fair onel-Is't not a goodly presence?

She's a gallant lady. Hel. Lys. She's such a one that, were I well assur'd Came of gentle kind and noble stock, [wed.-I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty Expect even here, where is a kingly patient: If that thy prosperous and artificial feat Can draw him but to answer thee in aught, Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay As thy desires can wish.

Sir, I will use Mar. My utmost skill in his recovery,

Provided

Bestow your love and your affections Upon a stranger?-[aside] who, for aught I know,

May he,—nor can I think the contrary,— As great in blood as I myself.— Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame Your will to mine, - and you, sir, hear you, Either he rul'd hy me, or I will make yon-Man and wife.

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too: istroy; And heing join'd, I'll thus your hopes de-And for further grief,-God give you joyl-

What, are you hoth pleas'd? That. Yes, if you love me, sir. Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it. Sim. What, are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, if't please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well that I will see you wed;

And then, with what haste you can, get you to bed. Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the ront; No din but snores the house ahout, Made louder by the o'er-fed breast Of this most pompons marriage feast. The cat, with eyne of hurning coal, Now couches fore the mouse's hole; And crickets sing at the oven's mouth, Aye the blither for their drouth. Hymen hath brought the bride to bed, Where, by the loss of maidenhead, A bahe is moulded.—Be attent, And time that is so briefly spent With your fine fancies quaintly eche: What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

Dumb show.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one side with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter: he shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to PERI-CLES. Then enter THAISA, with child, and LYCHORIDA. SIMONIDES shows his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and depart with LYCHORIDA and their Attendants. Then exeunt SIMONIDES, &c.

By many a dern and painful perch Of Pericles the careful search. By the four opposing coigns Which the world together joins, Is made with all due diligence That horse and sail and high expense Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,-Fame answering the most strange inquire,— To the court of King Simonides Are letters brought, the tenor these:-Antiochns and his daughter's dead; The men of Tyrus on the head Of Helicanus would set on The crown of Tyre, but he will none: The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress; Says to 'em, if King Pericles Come not home in twice six moons, He, obedient to their dooms, Will take the crown. The sum of this, Brought hither to Pentapolis, Y-ravished the regions round And every one with claps can sound, Our heir-opparent is a king! Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing? Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre: His queen with child makes her desire,-Which who shall cross?-along to go:-Omit we all their dole and woe:-Lychorida, her nurse, she takes, And so to sea. Their vessel shakes On Neptune's billow; half the flood Hath their keel cnt: hat fortune's mood Varies again; the grizzly north Disgorges such a tempest forth That, as a duck for life that dives, So up and down the poor ship drives: The lady shricks, and, well-a-near, Does fall in travail with her fear: And what ensues in this fell storm Shall for itself itself perform. I nill relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey; Which might not what by me is told. In your imagination hold This stage the ship, upon whose deck The sea-toss'd Pericles appears to speak. (Exit.

Scene I.—Enter Pericles, on a ship at sea.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke Ithat hast these surges, Which wash hoth heaven and hell; and thon Upon the winds command, bind them in brass, Having call'd them from the deep! O, still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently

quench
Thy nimble, sulphurons flashes!—O, how, [ously; How does my queen?—Thon stormest venom-Wilt thou spit all thyself?-The seaman's whistle Is as a whisper in the ears of death, Unheard .- Lychoridal-Lucina, O Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle To those that cry by night, convey thy deity Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs Of my queen's travail1

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychoridal Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place, Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do: take in your arms this piece

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.

Here's all that is left living of your queen,-A little daughter: for the sake of it, Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods1 Why do you make us love your goodly gifts, And snatch them straight away? We here helow

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor, Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst, What this maid is, or what is like to be, That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene

Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell Her parentage; being demanded that,

She would sit still and weep.

Pcr. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality, hither,
And drown me with their sweetness.—O, come
Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that was born at sea, buried at Tharsus,
And found at sea again!—O Helicanus,
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina.—
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar.

First, sir, I pray,

What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now My drown'd queen's name,—as in the rest you said [of kingdoms, Thou'st been godlike perfect,—thou'st the heir And another life to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than To say my mother's name was Thaisa?

Thaisa was my mother, who did end The minute I began. [my child.— Per. Now, blessing on theel rise; thou art Give me fresh garments.—Mine own Heli-

She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all; ledge When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowl-

She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,

Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you.—
Give me my robes.—I am wild in my beholding.— (music?—
O heavens bless my girl!—But, hark, what
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But, what music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None!
The music of the spheres!—List, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. My lord, I hear. [Music.

Per. Most heavenly musici

Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [Sleeps.

Lys. A pillow for his head:— [friends,
So, leave him all.—Well, my companionIf this but answer to my just belief,

I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt all but PERICLES.

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice. [gether, There, when my maiden priests are met to Before the people all, Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife: To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, cell, And give them repetition to the life. Or perform my bidding or thou liv'st in woe; Do it, and happy; by my silver bow! Awake and tell thy dream. [Disappears. Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Re-enter Helicanus, Lysimachus, Marina, &c.

Hel. Sir? Istrike
Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to
The inhospitable Cleon; but I am
For other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails: eftsoons I'll tell thee
why.— [To HELICABUS.
Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

[To LYSIM ACHUS
And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir, With all my heart; and when you come ashore I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail, Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your am.
Per. Come, my Marina. | Exeunt.

Enter GOWER, before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run; More a little, and then done. This, my last boon, give me, For such kindness must relieve me,— That you aptly will suppose What pageantry, what feats, what shows,. What minstrelsy, and pretty din, The regent made in Mitylin, To greet the king. So he thriv'd, That he is promis'd to be wiv'd To fair Marina; but in no wise Till he had done his sacrifice, As Dian bade: whereto being bound The interim, pray you, all confound. In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd, And wishes fall out as they're will'd. At Ephesus the temple see, Our king, and all his company. That he can hither come so soon, Exit. Is by your fancy's thankful boon.

Scene II.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the altar as high priestess; a number of Virgin; on each side; Cerimon and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter Pericles, with his Train; Lysima-CHUS, Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just com-

I here confess myself the King of Tyre; Who, frighted from my country, did wed At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa. At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth Enter two Servants with a chest.

I Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

I Serv. Sir, even now Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest: 'Tis of some wreck.

Set't down, let's look upon't. Cer.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir. Cer. Whate'er it be, 'Tis wondrous beavy. Wrench it open straight: If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold, It is a good constraint of fortune that It belches upon us.

Tis so, my lord. 2 Gent. Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd!-

Did the sea cast it up? I Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Wrench it open; Soft!-it smells most sweetly in my sense. 2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril.-So, up with

O you most potent gods! what's here? a corse! I Gent. Most strangel [entreasur'd Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and With bags of spices full! A passport too!-

Apollo, perfect me in the characters! Recds from a scroll.

> Here I give to understand,—
> If e'er this coffin drives a-land,— This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
> Who finds her, give her burying;
> She was the daughter of a king;
> Besides this treasure for a fee, The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart That even cracks for woe!-This chanc'd tonight.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night; For look how fresh she looks!-They were too rough

That threw her in the sea .- Make a fire within: Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.

Exit a Servant. Death may usurp on nature many bours, And yet the fire of life kindle again The o'erpress'd spirits. I beard of an Egyptian That had nine bours lien dead, Who was by good appliances recover'd.

Re-enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths .-The rough and woeful music that we have, [block! Cause it to sound, beseech you. The viol once more:-bow thou stirr'st, thou The music there!—I pray you, give her air. Gentlemen.

This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth Breathes out of her: she hath not been entranc'd

Above five bours: see how she 'gins to blow Into life's flower again!

I Gent. The beavens, Through you, increase our wonder, and set up Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive; behold, Her eyelids, cases to those beavenly jewels Which Pericles hath lost, Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;

The diamonds of a most praised water Do appear, to make the world twice rich .- Live. And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature, Rare as you seem to be. She moves. Thai. O dear Diana,

Where I? Where's my lord? What 8m world is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

7 Gent. Most rare. Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours! Lend me your bands; to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to. For ber relapse is mortal. Come, come; And Æsculapius guide us!

Exeunt, corrying out THAISA.

Scene III .- Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter PERICLES. CLEON, DIONYZA, and LY-CHORIDA with MARINA in her crms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon. I must needs be gone; My twelve months are expired, and Tyrus stands

In a litigious peace. You and your lady Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods

Make up the rest upon you! Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally.

Yet glance full wanderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen! That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought ber hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes!

We cannot but obey Per. Could I rage and roar The powers above us. As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina,- wbom, For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so,bere

I charge your charity withal, leaving her The infant of your care; beseeching you To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Fear not, my lord, but think Cle. Your grace, that fed my country with your com,

For which the people's prayers still fall upon you, Mustin your child be thought on. If neglection Should therein make me vile, the common body, By you reliev'd, would force me to my dnty: But if to that my nature need a spur,

The gods revenge it upon me and mine .

To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you; Your bonour and your goodness teach me to't Without your vows. Till she be married, madam.

By bright Diana, whom we honour, all

ACT I.

Scene I.—A Room of State in King Lear's Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no desirer in my account: though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentle man, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.
Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him here after as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's chang'd

With this unprofitable woel Come, Give me your flowers ere the sea mar them. Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.-Come.

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;

I'll not hereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come; I love the king your father, and yourself, With more than foreign heart. We every day Expect him here; when he shall come, and find Our paragon to all reports thus hlasted, He will repent the breadth of this great voyage;

Blame both my lord and me that we have taken No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you, Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve That excellent complexion, which did steal

The eyes of young and old. Care not for me The eyes of your alone.
I can go home alone.
Well, I will go;

Bnt yet I have no desire to it. frou. Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least:

Remember what I have said. Leon. I warrant you, madam. Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for awhile: Pray, walk softly, do not heat your blood: What! I must have a care of yon.

My thanks, sweet madam. Мат. [Exit DIONYZA.

Is this wind westerly that blows?

South-west. Mar. When I was born the wind was north. Leon. Was't so? Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,

But cried, Good seamen! to the sailors, galling His kingly hands with hauling of the ropes; And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea

That almost hurst the deck. Leon. When was this? Mar. When I was born:

Never was waves nor wind more violent; And from the ladder-tackle washes off A canvas-climher: Ha! says one, wilt out? And with a dropping industry they skip From stem to stern: the hoatswain whistles, and

The master calls, and trehles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

What mean you? Мат. Leon. If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it: pray; but he not tedious,

For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn To do my work with haste.

Why will you kill me? Mar.

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd? Now, as I can remember, hy my troth, I never did her hurt in all my life: I never spake had word, nor did ill turn To any living creature: helieve me, la, I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly: I trod upon a worm against my will, But I wept for it. How have I offended, Wherein my death might yield her profit, Or my life imply her danger?

Leon. My commission Is not to reason of the deed, but do it. Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I You are well-favour'd, and your looks foreshow You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately When you caught hurt in parting two that fought: Good sooth, it show'd well in you: do so now: Your lady seeks my life; come von between.

And save poor me, the weaker. Leon. I am sworn,

And will despatch.

Enter Pirates whilst MARINA is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain!

LEONINE runs awov. 2 Pirote. A prize! a prize!
3 Pirote. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come.

let's have her aboard suddenly. Excunt Pirates with MARINA.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes.

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go: There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead

And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see further: Perhaps they will hut please themselves upon her,

Not carry her aboard. If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. Exit.

SCENE II.-MITYLENE. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boult,-Boult. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money in this mart hy being too wenchless.

Baud. We were never so much out of We have but poor three, and they creatures. can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten. Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there he not a conscience to he used in every trade we shall never prosper. Bourd. Thou sayest true; 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have brought up some eleven,-

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again.—But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden. Pand. Then sayest true; they are too un-wholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little haggage.

Boull. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms.—But I'll go search the market. Exi!.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

With reservation of an hundred knights, By you to he sustain'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain

The name, and all the additions to a king; The sway, Revenue, execution of the rest,

Beloved sons, he yours: which to confirm,

This coronet part hetween you.

[Giving the crown. Royal Lear.

Whom I have ever honour'd as my king, Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd, As my great patron thought on in my prayers. Lear. The how is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork in-

The region of my heart: he Kent unmannerly When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man?

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to When power to flattery hows? To plainness honour's hound

When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy state; And in thy best consideration check

This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment.

Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least; Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound Reverhs no hollowness.

Kent, on thy life, no more. Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,

Thy safety being the motive.

Leat. Ont of my sight! Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain

The true hlank of thine eye. Lear. Now, by Apollo,

Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,

Thou swear'st thy gods in yain. O, vassall miscreant! Lear. [Laying his hand on his sword.

Alb. and Corn. Dear sir, forhear. Kent. Do;

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift; Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat, I'll tell thee thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreantl On thine allegiance, hear me!-Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,-

Which we durst never yet,—and with strain'd pride

To come hetwixt our sentence and our power,-Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,-Our potency made good, take thy reward. Five days we do allot thee for provision To shield thee from disasters of the world; And on the sixth to turn thy hated hack Upon our kingdom: if, on the tenth day following Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions, The moment is thy death. Awayl by Jupiter, This shall not he revok'd.

Kent. Fare thee well, king: sith thus thou wilt appear.

Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.-The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid, [To CORDELIA.

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said; And your large speeches may your deeds [To REGAN and GONERIL. approve, That good effects may spring from words of love.

Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu; He'll shape his old course in a country new.

[Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter GLOSTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy, We first address toward you, who with this king Hath rivall'd for our daughter: what in the least Will you require in present dower with her, Or cease your quest of love?

Вит. Most royal majesty, I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd

Nor will you tender less.

Leat. Right noble Burgundy, When she was dear to us we did hold her so; But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands:

If aught within that little seeming substance, Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd, And nothing more, may fitly like your grace, She's there, and she is yours.

I know no answer. Bur. Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate, [oath, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our Take her or leave her?

Pardon me, royal sir; Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, hy the power that made me,

I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king, TO FRANCE. I would not from your love make such a stray,

To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you

To avert your liking a more worthier way Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd Almost to acknowledge hers.

This is most strange, France. That she, who even but now was your best object.

The argument of your praise, balm of your age, Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time

Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle So many folds of favour. Sure her offence Must he of such unnatural degree That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection Fall into taint: which to believe of her Must he a faith that reason without miracle Could never plant in me.

I yet beseech your majesty, Cor. If for I want that glib and oily art To speak and purpose not; since what I well I'll do't hefore I speak,—that you make known It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness, No unchaste action or dishonour'd step,

Exeunt.

Mar. If fires he hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana, aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion.

You'll turn a child again.

You'll turn a child again.

Gle. Were I chief lord of all the spacious Pd give it to undo the deed. O lady,
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare!—O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too:
Iness
If thou hadst drunk to him, 't had heen a kindBecoming well thy fact: what canst thou say
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve. [it? She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross Unless you play the pious innocent. And for an honest attribute cry out, She died by foul play.

Cle. O, go to. Well, well.

Of all the faults beneath the heavens the gods

Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think
The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding Who ever but his approhation added, Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.

She did distain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was hlurted at, and held a malkin,
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural, You not your child well loving, yet I find It greets me as an enterprise of kindness Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it1
Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her
And yet we monrn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'its done.
Cle. Thou art like the harpy.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy, Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face, Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Enter Gower, before the Monument of Marina of Thursus.

Gow. Thus, time, we waste, and longer

But yet I know you'll do as I advise.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies:

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short; Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't: Making,-to take your imagination,-From hourn to hourn, region to region. By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime To use one language in each several clime. Where our scenes seem to live. I do heseech To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach The stages of our story. Pericles Is now again thwarting the wayward seas. Attended on hy many a lord and knight, To see his danghter, all his life's delight. Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late Advanc'd in time to greet and high estate, Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind. Old Helicanus goes along behind. brought Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have This king to Tharsus,—think his pilot thought; So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on.

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone. Like motes and shadows see them move awhile; Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

Enter, of one side, Pericles with his Train; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows Pericles the Tomb of MARINA, whereot Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA.

See how helief may suffer hy foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through and higgest tears o'ershower'd,

Leaves Thersus, and again embarks. He swears swears

Never to wash his face nor cut his hairs;

He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He hears
A tempest which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyra.

[Reads the inscription on MARINA'S Monument.

The fairest, sweet'st, and best lies here, Who wither'd in her spring of year. She was of Tyrus the king's daughter, On whom foul death hath made this slaughter; Marina was she cell'd; and at her birth, Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the earth:

Therefore the earth, fearing to be ov'erflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:
Wherefore she does,—and swears she'll never stint,—

Make raging battery upon shores of flint.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord. Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord. Glo. No? What needed What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'erread; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend either to detain or give it. .. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification. he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our old-ness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, EDGAR.

Hum-Conspiracy!-Sleep till I waked him,you should enjoy half his revenue.-My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and a brain to breed it in? When came this to you? who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet. [hrother's?

Glo. You know the character to be your Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents. [this business?

Glo. Hath he never before sounded you in Edm. Never, my lord: but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit that sons at perfect age and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! -Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him.

Abominable villain!-Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and tirely loves him.—Heaven and earth! entirely Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate my self to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt This villain of mine comes son and father. under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves.-Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully .- And the noble and truehearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! -'Tis strange. Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,often the surfeit of our own behaviour,-we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.

Enter EDGAR.

Pat!-he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam .- O, these eclipses do protend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! what serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that? Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily, as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state,

Mor. For me. That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty,

Where, since I came,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,-O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place,

Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i' the purer air! Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst. Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee: Persever in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you! Lys. For me, be you thoughten That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I donbt not but thy training hath been noble .-Hold, here's more gold for thee.

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear from me

It shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT as LYSIMACHUS is putting up his purse.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for Shouse, Lys. Avaunt, thou damned doorkeeper! Your But for this virgin that doth prop it,

Would sink and overwhelm you. Away!

Exit. Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bourd. How now! What's the matter? Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bowd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bowd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bowd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mor. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bourd. She conjures: away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you!-She's born to undo us.-Will you! Nature's own shape, of bad, bird, branch, or not go the way of womenkind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and baysi Exit.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thon have me? [so dear. Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold Mar. Pr'ythee, tell me one thing first. Boult. Come now, your one thing. |be? Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or, rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art. Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place for which the pained'st fiend Of hell would not in reputation change: Thou'rt the damn'd doorkeeper to every Coistrel that comes inquiring for his tib; To the choleric fisting of every rogue Thy ear is liable; thy very food is such As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to bny him a wooden one? [Empty

Mar. Do anything but this thon Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman: Any of these ways are yet better than this: For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak. Would own a name too dear.—O that the gods Would safely deliver me from this place!-Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me, Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and With other virtues which I'll keep from boast; And I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again. And prostitute me to the basest groom

That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will. Mar. But amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mis-tress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes, and chances

Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances As goddess-like to her admired lays; Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needle

composes

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,— [Exit. Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll hack. [Exit a Knight.]—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave hack to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

anner, ne would not!

Lear. He would not!

The would not!

The would not what the would highness Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great ahatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependents as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot he silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pre-tence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant.]-Go you, call hither my fool.

Exit another Attendant.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: who am I.sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you curl

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you handy looks with me, you Striking him,

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord. Kent. Nor tripped neither, you have football (Tripping up his heels. player. Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, awayl I'll teach you differences: away, awayl If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but awayl go to; have you wisdom? so.

[Pushes OSWALD out. Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

Giving KENT money.

Enter FOOL.

Fool. Let me hire him too; here's my coxcomh.

Lear. How now, my pretty knavel how dost

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?
Fool. Why, for taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb: why, this fellow has banish'd two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomh .- How now, nuncle! 'Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?
Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcomhs myself. There's mine; heg another of thy daughters, Lear. Take heed, sirrah,—the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must he whipped out, when the lady hrach may stand hy the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me! Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do. Fool. Mark it, nuncle:-

Have more than thou showest, Speak less than thou knowest, Lend less than thou owest, Ride more than thou goest, Learn more than thou trowest, Set less than thou throwest; Leave thy drink and thy whore,. And keep in-a-door, And thou shalt have more Than two tens to a score. Kent. This is nothing, fool. Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer,—you gave me nothing for't.—Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool. [To KENT.

Lear. A hitter fool!
Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my hoy, between a hitter fool and a sweet one? Leor. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee To give away thy land, · Come place him here hy me,-Do thou for him stand: The sweet and hitter fool Will presently appear; The one in motley here,

The other found out there. Lear. Dost thou call me fool, hoy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast horn with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord. Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France: Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me. Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind: Thou losest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we

Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see That face of hers again. - Therefore be gone Without our grace, our love, our benison .-Come, noble Burgundy.

Exeunt LEAR, BURGUNDY, CORN-[Flourish. WALL, ALBANY, GLOSTER, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters. Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are; And, like a sister, am most loth to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our father:

To your professed hosoms I commit him: But yet, alas, stood I within his grace, I would prefer him to a better place. So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duty.

 G_{OD} . Let your study Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you At fortune's alms. You have ohedience scanted And well are worth the want that you have [hides: wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.

Well may you prosper!

Come, my fair Cordelia. I France.

Exeunt France and Cordelia. Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you;

next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath heen but rash; then must we look to receive from his age not alone the imperfections of long engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leavetaking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it. Con. We must do something, and i'the heat. [Exeunt.

'Tis not in thee To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train, To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes, And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt Against my coming in: thou better know'st The offices of nature, bond of childhood, Effects of courtesy, dues of gratutude: Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot, Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.
Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?
[Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't,—my sister's: this approves her letter,

That she would soon he here.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow'd

Gon.
At your choice, sir.

Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad:

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell: We'll no more meet, no more see one another:— But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;

Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:

SCENE III.—A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle. Enter GLOSTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this matural dealing. When I desired their leave unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

m, entreat for him, not any mornatural!

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

There is Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night; tis dangerous to be spoken; I bave locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed; we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. Look, here comes a walking fire. Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old;

He met the nightmare and her nine-fold; I will keep still with my philosopher. Bid her alight,

And her troth plight,

And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee! Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER with a torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tad-pole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who bath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear;

But mice and rats, and such small deer, Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us. Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words: Hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came, His word was still, -Fie, fob, and fum, I smell the blood of a British man.

Scene V .- A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enfer CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself. Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the de-

Corn. Go with me to the duchess. Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.--I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. IExeunt.

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?
Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take't again perforce!-Monster ingratitude! Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee heaten for heing old hefore thy time.

Lear. How's that?
Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till

How now! are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, hoy. [my departure, Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at Shall not he a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I .- A Court within the Castle of the EARL OF GLOSTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will he here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that? Cur. Nay, I know not.—You have heard of the news abroad; I mean, the whispered ones, Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.
-Cur. You may, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my hrother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act:-hriefness and fortune work!-

Brother, a word; -descend: -brother, I sayl

Enter EDGAR.

Corn. See't shalt thou never.—Fellows, hold the chair.— Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

[GLOSTER is held down in his chair, while CORNWALL plucks out one of his eyes and sets his foot on it.

Glo. He that will think to live till he be old Give me some help!—O crue!!—O you gods! Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

1 Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:
I have serv'd you ever since I was a child;
But better service have I never done you

Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

I Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin, [mean?

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you Corn. My villain! [Draws, and runs at him. I Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Draws: They fight. CORN. is wounded Reg. Give me thy sword [to another Servant.]

—A peasant stand up thus!

[Snatches a sword, comes behind, and stabs him. I Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on them.—O! [Dies. Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it.—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

[Tears out GLOSTER's other eye, and throws it on the ground.

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature. To guit this horrid act.

Corn. What is your difference? speak. Osw. I am scarce in hreath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirr'd your You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims valour. in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel? Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of his gray beard,

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.-Spare my gray beard, you wagtail? Corn. Peace, sirrahl

You beastly knave, know you no reverence? Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege. Corn. Why art thou angry? Kent. That such a slave as this should wear las these, a sword. Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain

Which are too intrinset' unloose: smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel; Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods; Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks With every gale and vary of their masters, Knowing naught, like dogs, but following.-A plague upon your epileptic visage! Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool? Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.
Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

How fell you out? Glo.

Say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy lis his fault? Than I and such a knave. Com. Why dost thou call him knave? Kent. His countenance likes me not. What

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers. Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain: I have seen better faces in my time Than stands on any shoulder that I see Before me at this instant.

This is some fellow Corn. Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he, An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truthI

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain. These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends

Than twenty silly ducking observants That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity, Under the allowance of your great aspect, Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire On flickering Phœbus' front,-

What mean'st by this? Corn.Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him? Osw. I never gave him any: It pleas'd the king his master very late To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;

When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure, Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted,

And put upon him such a deal of man, That worthied him, got praises of the king For him attempting who was self-subdu'd And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit.

Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards

But Aiax is their fool.

Fetch forth the stocks!-Corn. You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you,

Sir, I am too old to learn: Kent. Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king: On whose employment I was sent to you: You shall do small respect, show too bold malice Against the grace and person of my master, Stocking his messenger.

Fetch forth the stocks!-Corn. As I have life and honour, there shall he sit [night too. -

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:—
Conceive, and fare thee well.
Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster.

[Exit Edmund.

O, the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman's services are due:
My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exil.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind Blows in your face. I fear your disposition: That nature which contemns its origin Cannot be border'd certain in itself; She that herself will silver and disbranch From her material sap, perforce must wither And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
[done?
Filths savour but themselves. What have you
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?

A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you Could my good brother suffer you to do it? A man, a prince, by him so benefited! If that the heavens do not their visible spirits Send quickly down to tame these vile offences, It will come, Humanity must perforce prey on itself, Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st

Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless land:

With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats; Whiles thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest, Alack, why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil! Proper deformity seems not in the fiend So horrid is in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing,
for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood.
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear

They are apt enough to dislocate and tear Thy flesh and bones:—howe'er thou art a fiend, A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What new's? [wall's dead; Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Com-Slain by his servant, going to put out The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with oppos'd against the act, bending his sword

To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him
dead;
[since

But not without that harmful stroke which Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above, You justicers, that these our nether crimes So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Glosterl Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.— This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;

But being widow, and my Gloster with her, May all the building in my fancy plack Upon my hateful life: another way The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and Exit.

Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb.
He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

ACT III.

Scene I .- A Heath.

A storm, with thunder and lightning. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king? Gent. Contending with the fretful elements; Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, Or swell the curled waters bove the main, That things might change or cease; tears his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage, Catch in their fury, and make nothing of; Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain. This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest

His heart-struck injuries.

Kent.

Sir, I do know yon;

And dare, upon the warrant of my note,

Commend a dear thing to you. There is di-

Who have,—as who have not, that their great Throne and set high?—servants who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen, Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes; Or the hard rein which both of them have borne Against the old kind king; or something deeper, Whereof perchance these are but furnishings;—But true it is, from France there comes a power Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already, Wise in our negligence, have secret feet In some of our best ports, and are at point To show their open banner.—Now to you:

If on my credit you dare build so far To make your speed to Dover, you shall find Some that will thank yon making just report Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow The king hath cause to plain.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding; And from some knowledge and assurance offer This office to you. Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,—
As fear not but you shall,—show her this ring;

I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king, My masters, know you that.

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you. Lear. Then there's life in't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, Exit running; Attendants follow. Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, [daughter,

Past speaking of in a king!-Thou hast one Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Sir, speed you: what's your will? Gent. Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure and vulgar: every one hears Which can distinguish sound.

But, by your favour, Edg. How near's the other army? descry Gent. Near and on speedy foot; the main Stands on the hourly thought.

I thank you, sir: that's all. Edq.Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here, Her army is mov'd on.

I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent. Eđg. Glo. Your ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worser spirit tempt me again To die before you please:

Well pray you, father. Edg. Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame by fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand, I'll lead you to some biding.

Hearty thanks: The bounty and the benison of heaven To boot, and boot!

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.
Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:

Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love,
Reg. But have you never found my brother's way

To the forfended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:— She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY
GONERIL and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside.] I had rather lose the battle than that sister

Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.— Sir this I heard,—the king is come to his daughter,

W th others whom the rigour of our state Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land, Not bolds the king, with others whom, I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg.

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;

For these domestic and particular broils

Are not the question here.

Alb.

Let's then, determine

With the ancient of war on our proceeding.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us. [will go.

Alb. Thou art An interlude! arm'd. Gloster:-let the trumpet sound:

If none appear to prove upon thy person The heinous, manifest, and many treasons, There is my pledge [throwing down a glove]; I'll make it on thy heart.

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd thee

Sick, O, sick! Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine. Edm. There's my exchange [throwing down a glove]: what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies: Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach. On him, on you, who not? I will maintain My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

A herald, ho, a herald! Edm.Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers.

All levied in my name, have in my name Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me. Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent. (Exit REGAN led.

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald, - Let the trumpet sound, -And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet! [A trumpet sounds. Herald. [Reads.] If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloster. that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet: he is bold in his defence.

Edm. Soundl 1 Trumpet.

Herald. Again! Herald. Again! (2 Trumpet. 3 Trumpet.

(Trumpet answers within. Enter EDGAR, armed, and preceded by a trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears Upon this call o' the trumpet.

What are you? Herald. Your name, you quality? and why you answer This present summons?

Edg.Know, my name is lost; By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit: Yet am I noble as the adversary I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary? Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself:—what say'st thou to him? Draw thy sword, Edg.That, if my speech offend a noble heart, Thy arm may do the justice: here is mine.

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours, My oath, and my profession: I protest,-Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune, Thy valour and thy heart,—thou art a traitor; False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father; Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince; And, from the extremest upward of thy head To the descent and dust below thy foot, A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou No,

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are beat

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak. Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name: But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike. And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes.

What safe and nicely I might well delay By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn: Back do I toss these treasons to thy head: With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart; Which,—for they yet glance by and scarcely

Kent. It is the stars. The stars above us, govern our conditions; Else one self mate and mate could not beget Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No. Kent. Was this before the king return'd? Gent. No, since. Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's

i' the town; Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers What we are come about, and by no means Will yield to see his daughter.

Why, good sir? Gent. Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness, [her That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his dog-hearted daughters, -these things sting

His mind so venomously that burning shame Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman! Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so they are a-foot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,

And leave you to attend him: some dear cause Will in concealment wrap me up awhile; When I am known aright, you shall not grieve Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you,

Along with me. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- The French Camp. A Tent. Enter Cordelia, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why, he was met even now

As mad as the ver'd sea; singing aloud; Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow weeds, With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckooflowers

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow In our sustaining corn. - A century send forth; Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]— What can man's wisdom

In the restoring his bereaved sense? He that helps him take all my outward worth.

Phys. There is means, madam: Our foster-nurse of nature is repose, The which he lacks; that to provoke in him Are many simples operative, whose power Will close the eye of anguish.

All bless'd secrets, All yon unpublish'd virtues of the earth, Spring with my tears! be aidant and remediate In the good man's distress!-Seek, seek for him; Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

News, madam; Mess. The British powers are marching hitherward, Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands In expectation of them .- O dear father, It is thy business that I go about; Therefore great France My mourning and important tears hath pitied. No blown ambition doth our arms incite, But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right: Soon may I hear and see him! Exeunt.

Scene V .- A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD. Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?

Ay, madam. Osw. Reg. Himself in person there?

Medam, with much ado: Osw. Your sister is the better soldier. [at home? Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike. Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves

Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou runn'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men I will he cruel with the maids, and cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it. Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor-John.—Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run? Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them if they bear it.

Enter Abraham and Balthasar.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? Sam. Is the law of our side if I say ay? Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

.. Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sirl no, sir. Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you. Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. Say better: here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir. Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men .- Gregory, re-They fight. member thy swashing blow.

Enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. Part, fools! put up your swords; you mow not what you do.

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death. Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me. Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee: Have at thee, coward! [They fight.

Enter several of both Houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens with clubs.

I Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strikel beat them down! [tagues]

Down with the Capulets! Down with the Mon-Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!

Lady C. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say!-Old Montague is come,

And flourishes his blade in spite of me. Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE. Mon. Thou villain Capuletl-Hold me not. let me go.

Lady M. Thou shalt not stir a foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel .-Will they not hear?—What, ho! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious race With purple fountains issuing from your veins. On pain of torture, from those bloody hands, Thorw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground, And hear the sentence of your moved prince. Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets; And made Verona's ancient citizens Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments. To wield old partisans in hands as old, Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate: If ever you disturb our streets again, Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away: You, Capulet, shall go along with me;—And, Montague, come you this afternoon, To know our further pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.-Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. [Exeunt PRIN. and Attendants; CAP., LADY

C., TYB., Citizens, and Servants.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?-Speak, nephew, were you by when it began? Ben. Here were the servants of your adver-

And yours close fighting ere I did approach: O. I drew to part them: in the instant came [Beats down their swords. The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Edg. Give me your arm: Up:-so,-How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness. Upon the crown o' the cliff what thing was that Which parted from you?

A poor unfortunate beggar. Edg. As I stood here below, methought his

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses, Horns whelk'd and wav'd like the enridged sea: It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father, Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee. Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear Affliction till it do cry out itself, [speak of, Enough, enough, and die. That thing you I took it for a man; often 'twould say,

The fiend, the fiend: he led me to that place. Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts .- But who comes here?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed up with flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight! Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.— There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard.—Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; -this piece of toasted cheese will do't. -There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills.—O, well flown, bird!—i' the clout, i' the clout: hewghl -Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass. Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Hal Goneril, with a white beardl-They flattered me like a dog; and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say ay and no to everything I said!-Ay and no, too, was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was everything; 'tis a lie, —I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember: Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes. I pardon that man's life.—What was thy cause?-

Adultery?-

Thou shalt not die: die for adulteryl The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloster's bastard son Was kinder to his father than my daughters Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.-

Behold yond simpering dame, Whose face between her forks presages snow; That minces virtue, and does shake the head To hear of pleasure's name:-

The fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs, Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit, Beneath is all the fiends'; there's hell, there's darkness. There is the sulphurons pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—fie, fie, fiel pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civit, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination; there's money for thee. Glo. O, let me kiss that hand! Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mor-Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world me?

Shall so wear out to naught.-Dost thou know Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squint at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; Pli not love.-Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it. [one. Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see Edg. I would not take this from report:-

it is,

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read. Glo. What, with the case of eyes? Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? eyes in your head nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly. Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how youd justice rails upon youd simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightest behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office. Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!

Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back:

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind For which thou whipp'st her. The userer hangs the cozener.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks; Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it. None does offend, none, -I say, none; Pll able 'em: Take that of me, my friend, who have the power To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes; And, like a scurvy politician, seem Inow, now: To see the things thou dost not .- Now, now, Pull off my boots:-harder, harder:-so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'dl

Reason in madness! Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster: Thou must be patient; we came crying hither;

Exeunt.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her. Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes; Examine other beauties.

'Tis the way Rom. To call hers, exquisite, in question more: These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows, Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair; He that is strucken blind cannot forget The precious treasure of his eyesight lost: Show me a mistress that is passing fair, What doth her beauty serve but as a note Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair? Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget. Ben. I'll pay that doctrine or else die in debt.

Scene II .- A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I. In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think, For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both; And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before: My child is yet a stranger in the world, She hath not seen the change of fourteen years; Let two more summers wither in their pride Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made. [made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she, She is the hopeful lady of my earth: But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart, My will to her consent is but a part; An she agree, within her scope of choice Lies my consent and fair according voice. This night I hold an old accustom'd feast, Whereto I have invited many a guest, Such as I love; and you, among the store, One more, most welcome, makes my number more.

At my poor house look to behold this night Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light:

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel . When well-apparell'd April on the heel Of limping winter treads, even such delight Among fresh female buds shall you this night Inherit at my house; hear all, all see, And like her most whose merit most shall be: Such, amongst view of many, mine being one, May stand in number, though in reckoning

Come, go with me. Go, sirrah, trudge about Through fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there [gives a paper], and to them say,

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay. Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and Your lady's love against some other maid can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned;-in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish; Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning: One desperate grief cures with another's languish:

Take thou some new infection to thy eye, And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain-leaf is excellent for that. Ben. For what, I pray thee? Rom.For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad? Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is; Shut up in prison, kept without my food, Whipp'd and tormented, and-God-den, good fellow. Serv. God gi' god-den .- I pray, sir, can you Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery, Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book: but, I pray, can you read anything you see? language.

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the Serv. Ye say honestly: rest you merry! Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. [Reads. Signior Martino and his wife and daughlers; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.

A fair assembly [gives back the poper]: whither should they come?

Serv. Up. Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house. Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's. before. Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: my master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you metry!

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's Sups the fair Rosaline whom thou so lov'st; With all the admired beauties of Verona: Go thither; and, with unattainted eye, Compare her face with some that I shall show, And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires;

And these, -who, often drown'd, could never Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars! One fairer than my lovel the all-seeing sun Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut, you saw her fair, none else being Herself pois'd with herself in either eye: But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd

That It stand up, and bave ingenious feeling Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract: So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,

And woes by wrong imaginations lose The knowledge of themselves.

Edg.

Give me your band: Drum afar off.

Far off, methinks, I bear the beaten drum: Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend. Exeunt.

Re-enter EDGAR.

Scene VII .- A Tent in the French Camb. LEAR on a bed asleep, soft music playing; Physician, Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter CORDELIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work Itoo sbort. To match thy goodness? My life will be

And every measure fail me. [paid. Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-All my reports go with the modest trutb;

Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Be better suited: Cor. These weeds are memories of those worser bours:

I pr'ythee, put them off.

Kent: Pardon, dear madam; Yet to be known shortens my made intent: My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the Physician. Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,

Cure this great breach in his abused nature! The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up .Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty That we may wake the king: he hath slept long. proceed

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and I' the sway of your own will. Is be array'd? Gent. Ay, madam; in the beaviness of sleep We put fresb garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near.-Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration bang Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss Repair those violent barms that my two sisters Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face To be oppos'd against the warring winds? To stand against the deep dread boilted thunder? .In the most terrible and nimble stroke Of quick, cross lightning? to watch,-poor perdu!-

With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog, Though be had bit me, should have stood that night [father, As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloster. Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

To bovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn, In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once [him. Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to

Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest. Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? [the grave:— Lear. You do me wrong to take me ont o' Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears Do scald like molten lead Cor. Sir, do you know me? Lear. You are a spirit, I know: wben did you die?

Cor. Still, still far wide! [awhile. Phys. He's scarce awake: let him alone Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?— Fair daylight?-[pit v

I am mightily abus'd .- I should e'en die with To see another thus .- I know not what to Say.-

I will not swear these are my hands:-let's see; I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd Of my condition!

Cor. O, look upon me, sir, And bold your hands in benediction o'er me .-No. sir, you must not kneel. Lear. Pray.

Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, [less; Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor And, to deal plainly,

I fear I am not in my perfect mind. [man; Methinks I should know you, and know this Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady

To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am. Lear. Be your tears wet? yes, faith. I pray, weep not:

If you have poison for me I will drink it. I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: You have some cause, they have not.

No cause, no cause. Cor. Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir. Lear. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage.

You see, is kill'd in him: and yet it is danger To make him even o'er the time be has lost. Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk? You must bear with me: Lear. Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

[Excunt Lear., Cor., Phys., and Attendants. Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir. Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I heseech you, follow straight.

We follow thee. Lady C [Exit Servant.] Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity: We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf, Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper; Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance: But, let them measure us by what they will, We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch,—I am not for this ambling; Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes, With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead

So stakes me to the ground I cannot move. Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings, And soar with them above a common bound. Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft

To soar with his light feathers; and so bound, I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe: Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And to sink in it should you burden Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough, Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love:

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.-

Give me a case to put my visage in: Putting on a mask.

A visard for a visard!—what care I What curious eye doth quote deformities? Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner

But every man betake him to his legs. Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light of heart, Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels; For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase, I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,-

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done. Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire Of this—sir-reverence—love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.--Come, we burn daylight, ho. Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day. And more inconstant than the wind, who wooes

Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits Five times in that ere once in our five wits. Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask? Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night. Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie. Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes In shape no bigger than an agate-stone, On the fore-finger of an alderman, Drawn with a team of little atomies Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep: Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs; The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; The traces, of the smallest spider's web; The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams: Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film; Her waggoner, a small gray-coated gnat, Not half so big as a round little worm Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid: Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub, Time out o' mind the fairies' coachmakers. And in this state she gallops night by night Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love;

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies straight;

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,-Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, Because their breaths with sweatmeats tainted

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose, And then dreams he of smelling out a suit; And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail, Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep, Then dreams he of another benefice: Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck, And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats, Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades, Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes; And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two, And sleeps again. This is that very Mab That plats the manes of horses in the night; And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, once untangled, much misfortune Which.

bodes: This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs, That presses them, and learns them first to bear, Making them women of good carriage:

This is she, Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace, Rom.

Thou talk'st of nothing.

True, I talk of dreams, Which are the children of an idle brain, Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;

Which is as thin of substance as the air,

friend:

Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here. lendure

Edo. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must Their going hence, even as their coming hither: Ripeness is all; -come on.

And that's true too. Excunt.

SCENE IIL—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours. EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA prisoners: Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard.

Until their greater pleasures first be known That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first, Who, with best meaning, bave incurr'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down; Myself could else out-frown false fortune's [sisters?

Shall we not see these daughters and these Lear. No, no, no, nol Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage: When thon dost ask me blessing Pil kneel down And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live, And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them [out;

too, Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's And take upon's the mystery of things As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out In a wall'd prison packs and sects of great ones That ebb and flow by the moon.

Take them away. Eđm. Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee? fheaven. He that parts us shall bring a brand from And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; The good years shall devour them, flesb and fell,

Ere they shall make us weep; we'll see 'em starve first.

[Exeunt LEAR and COR., guarded. Come.

Edm. Come hither, captain: hark. Take thou this note [giving a paper]; go follow them to prison: One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way To noble fortunes: know thon this, -that men Are as the time is: to be tender-minded

Does not become a sword:—thy great employment

Will not bear question; either say thou'lt do't, Or thrive by other means

Off. I'll do't, my lord. Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done.

Mark,-I say, instantly: and carry it so

As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats; If it be men's work I will do't.

Flourish Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN. Officers and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain.

And fortune led you well: you have the captives Who were the opposites of this day's strife: We do require them of you, so to use them As we shall find their ments and our safety May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit To send the old and miserable king To some retention and appointed guard: Whose age has charms in it, whose title more, To pluck the common hosom on his side, And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes Which do command them. With him I sent the queen:

My reason all the same; and they are ready To-morrow, or at further space, to appear Where you shall hold your session. At this

We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd By those that feel their sharpness: The question of Cordelia and her father Requires a fitter place.

Sir, by your patience I hold you but a subject of this war,

Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him. Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded

Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers: Bore the commission of my place and person; The which immediacy may well stand up And call itself your brother.

Not so hot: Gon. In his own grace he doth exalt himself, More than in your addition.

In my rights, Reg.By me invested, he compeers the best. Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you. Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Gon. Holls, bolls! That eye that told you so look'd but asquirt. Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should Enswer

From a full-flowing stomach.—General, Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;. Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine: Witness the world that I create thee here My lord and master.

GonMean you to enjoy him? Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good-will. Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. [To EDMUND.

Alb. Stay yet: hear reason. - Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest, This gilded serpent [pointing to GONERIL] .-For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife; 'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord, And I, her husband, contradict your bans. If you will marry, make your loves to me,-Exit. My lady is bespoke.

Rom. If I profane ith my unworthiest hand [To JULIET. This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this,-My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this; For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers [prayer. Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do: despair.

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake. iI take.

Rom. Then move not while my prayer's effect Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd. Kissing her.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took. [urg'd! Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly

Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book. Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor, Her mother is the lady of the house, And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous: I nurs'd her daughter that you talk'd withal; I tell you, he that can lay hold of her Shall have the chinks.

Is she a Capulet? Rom.O dear account! my life is my foe's debt. Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest. Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone; We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.-Is it e'en so? why, then I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good-night. More torches here!-Come on, then let's to [late: hed.

Ah, sirrah [to 2 Cap.], by my fay, it waxes I'll to my rest.

(Exeunt all but JULIET and Nurse. Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is you gentleman?

The son and heir of old Tiberio. Nurse. Jul. What's he that now is going out of truchio.

Nurse. Marry, that I think be young Pe-Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go ask his name: if he be married,

My grave is like to be my wedding-bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;

The only son of your great enemy. Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate! Too early seen unknown, and known too late! Prodigious birth of love it is to me,

That I must love a loathed enemy. Nurse. What's this? What's this?

Júl. A rhyme I learn'd even now Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within, "Juliet." Nurse. Anon, anon! Come, let's away; the strangers are all gone. {Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie, And young affection gapes to be his heir; That fair for which love groan'd for, and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair. Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again, Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;

But to his foe suppos'd he must complain, And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access To breathe such vows as lovers us'd to swear; And she as much in love, her means much less: To meet her new-beloved anywhere: [meet,

But passion lends them power, time means to Tempering extremities with extreme sweet. Exit.

ACT II.

Scene I .- An open place adjoining Capulet's Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here? Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out. He climbs the wall and leaps down within it.

Enter Benvolio and Mercurio.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Мет. He is wise; And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed. Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:

Call, good Mercutio. Nay, I'll conjure too .-Mer. Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover! Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh: Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfied; Cry but, Ah me! pronounce but Love and dove:

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word, One nickname for her purblind son and heir, Young auburn Cupid, he that shot so trim When King Cophetus lov'd the beggarmaid! He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;

The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.-I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes, By her high forehead and her scarlet lip, By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie, That in thy likeness thou appear to us!

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him. Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle, Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

Alb.

Burst smilingly. Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me. And shall perchance do good: but speak you on; You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there he more, more woeful, hold it in:

For I am almost ready to dissolve, Hearing of this.

This would have seem'd a period Edg.To such as love not sorrow; but another, To amplify too much, would make much more, And top extremity. man Whilst I was hig in clamour, came there a Who, having seen me in my worst estate, Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father; Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so Began to crack: twice then the trumpet sounded, And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this? Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent, who in disguise Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service

Improper for a slave.

 Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife. Gent. Help, help, O, help! What kind of help? Edg.

Alb. 'Speak, man. Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes; .It came even from the heart of-O, she's dead! Alb. Who dead? speak, man. Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister

By her is poison'd; she hath confess'd it. Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three

Now marry in an instant.

. Edg. Here comes Kent. Alb. Produce the bodies, he they alive or [tremble, dead:-This judgment of the heavens, that makes us Touches us not with pity. (Exit Gentleman.

Enter KENT.

O, is this he? The time will not allow the compliment Which very manners urges. Kent. I am come

To bid my king and master are good-night:

Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgoti-Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

[The bodies of Gon. and REG. are brought in. See'st thou this object, Kent?

Kent. Alack, why thus? Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd: The one the other poison'd for my sake, And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so .- Cover their faces. Edm. I pant for life:-some good I mean to Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send, Be brief in it,-to the castle; for my writ Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia:-Nay, send in time.

Ălb. Run, run, O, run! [send Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the office? Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword, Give it the captain.

Haste thee, for thy life. Exit EDGAR. Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me

To hand Cordelia in the prison, and To lay the blame upon her own despair, That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her!-Bear him hence awhile. [EDMUND is borne off.

Re-enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Officer, and others following.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!-O, you are men of stones:

That heaven's vault should crack .- She's gone for ever!-I know when one is dead and when one lives; She's dead as earth .- Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone, Why, then she lives. Is this the promis'd end? Kent.

Edg. Or image of that horror: Fall, and cesse 1 Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it he so, It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows

That ever I have felt. O my good master! [Kneeling. Kent.

Lear. Prythee, away.

Fda. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend. Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors [ever]all!

I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha! What is't thou say'st?-Her voice was ever [woman.soft,

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that bave more cunning to be

I should have heen more strange, I must confess,

But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was 'ware, My true love's passion: therefore pardon me; And not impute this yielding to light love, Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear.

That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops, Jul. O, swear not hy the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,

Lest that thy love prove likewise variable. Rom. What shall I swear by?

Do not swear at all; Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, Which is the god of my idolatry, And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear tove, Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in thee, I have no joy of this contract to-night: It is too ash, too unadvis'd, too sudden; Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be say, It lightens. . Sweet, goodnightl

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and Come to thy heart as that within ray breast! Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful yow for mine. [quest it:

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst re-And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst-thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love? Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again. And yet I wish but for the thing I have: My hounty is as houndless as the sea, My love as deep; the more I give to thee

The more I have, for both are infinite. [Nurse calls within. I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu!-Anon, good nurse!-Sweet Montague, be true. Stay but a little, I will come again.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard, Being in night, all this is but a dream, Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo. and goodnight indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable, Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-mor-By one that I'll procure to come to thee, Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite; And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

By and by, I come:-To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief: To-morrow will I send. Rom. So thrive my soul,

Jul. A thousand times good-night! Exit. Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light .-

Love goes toward love as school-boys from their books; But love from love, toward school with heavy [Retiring slowly.

Re-enter Julier above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O for a falconer's voice, To lure this tassel-gentle hack again! Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud; Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,

And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name: How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,

Like softest music to attending ears! Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear?

At what o'clock to-morrow Jul. Shall I send to thee?

 Rom_* At the hour of nine. Jul. I will not fail: 'tis twenty years till then. I have forgot why I did call thee back. lit. Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there, Remembering how I love thy company. Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget, Forgetting any other home but this. Jul. 'Tis almost morning: I would have thee gone: And yet no further than a wanton's bird; Who lets it hop a little from her hand, Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, And with a silk thread plucks it back again, So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Sweet, so would I: Jul. Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing. Good-night, good-night! parting is such sweet

That I shall say good-night till it be morrow. Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy hreast!-Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest! Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell, His help to crave and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

SCENE L-A public Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, ermed with swords and bucklers.

Som. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers. Sam. I mean, an we be in choler we'll draw. Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the coller.

Som. I strike quickly, being moved.

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents!-By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man! a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo. Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring. O, flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!-Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench,marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her; Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose,-

Enter Romeo.

Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

you both. Rom. Good-morrow to counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, six, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to court'sy

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it. Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered. Mer. Well said: follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump; that when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits faint.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs;

or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done; for thon hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest. Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not. Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broadl

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad: which added to the goose, proves thee far and

Mer. Why, is not this better now than grouning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; not art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there. Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale

Mer. O, thou art deceived; I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale; and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail! Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock Nurse. Peterl

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face.

Nurse. God ye good-morrow, gentlemen. Mer. God ye good-den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good-den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you! Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar. Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;-for himself to mar, quoth 'a?-Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you: but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawdl So hol Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere [Sings. it be spent.

> An old hare hoar, And an old hare hoar, Is very good meat in Lent: But a hare that is hoar Is too much for a score, When it boars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell,—

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before. What says he of our marriage? what of that? Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o' t' other side,—O, my back, my back!—

Beshrew your heart for sending me about To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.

Sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love? [man,

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentle-And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, And, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother!—why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest!

Your love soys, like an honest gentleman,— Where is your mother?

Nurse. O God's lady dear! Are you so hot! marry, come up, I trow; Is this the poultice for my aching bones? Henceforward, do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil!—come, what says
Romeo? [day?
Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-Jul. I have. [cell; Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Lawrence'

SCENE VI.—FRIAR LAWRENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and ROMEO. Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!
Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,—

It is enough I may but call her mine. [ends, Fri. L. These violent dol ghts have violent And in their triumph die; like fire and powder, Which, as they kiss, consume: the sweetest

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness, And in the taste confounds the appetite: Therefore love moderately; long love doth so; Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow. Here comes the lady.—O, so light a foot Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint: A lover may bestride the gossamer That idles in the wanton summer air And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Good-even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks too Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,

Brags of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess, I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone Till holy church incorporate two in one.

ACT III.

Scene I .- A public Ploce.

Enter Mercurio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, God send me no one of thee! and by the operation of the second cup draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less Thou wilt quarin his beard than thou hast. rel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; -what eye but such an eye would spy out such Thy head is as full of quarrels as a quarrel? an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown, But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. Excunt.

Scene III .- A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, hy my maidenhead,-at twelve hird!year old,-I bade her come.-What lamh! what, lady-God forhid!-where's this girl?-what, Juliet!

Enter Julier.

Jul. How now, who calls? Nurse.

Your mother. Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

Lady C. This is the matter,-Nurse, give leave awhile, lagain;

We must talk in secret:-nurse, come back I have remember'd me, thou's hear our counsel. Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Ladu C. She's not fourteen.

Nurs. · I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,-And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,

She is not fourteen. How long is it now To Lammas-tide?

Ledy C. A fortnight and odd days. Vurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen. Susan and she, - God rest all Christian souls! -Were of an age: well, Susan is with God; She was too good for me: - but, as I said, On Lammas-eve at night shall she he fourteen; That shall she, marry; I remember it well. 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years; And she was wean'd .- I never shall forget it,-Of all the days of the year, upon that day: For I had then laid wormwood to my dug, Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall; My lord and you were then at Mantua: Nay, I do bear a brain:-hut, as I said, When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool, To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dugl Shake, quoth the dovehouse: 'twas no need, I trow.

To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years; For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood

She could have run and waddled all about; For even the day before, she broke her brow: And then my husband,—God he with his soull 'A was a merry man,-took up the child: Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backword when thou hast more wit:

Wilt thou not, Jule? and, by my holidame, The pretty wretch left crying, and said Ay:

To see, now, how a jest shall come about! I warrant, an I should live a thousand years, I never should forget it: Wilt thou not, Jule? quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said Ay.

Lady C. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace. llaugh. Nurse. Yes, madam;—yet I cannot choose but To think it should leave crying, and say Ay: And yet, I warrant, it had upon its hrow A hump as hig as a young cockerel's stone; A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly.

Yea, quoth my hushand, fall'st upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward when thou com'st to age; Wilt thou not, Jule? It stinted, and said Ay. Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I. Ito his grace!

God mark thee Nurse. Peace, I have done. Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd: An I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

Lady C. Marry, that marry is the very came to talk of.—Tell me, daughter Juliet, How stands your disposition to he married?

Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

Lady C. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!-

O princel—O husband!—O, the blood is spill'd Of my dear kinsman!-Prince, as thou art true, For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.-O cousin, cousin1

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray? Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay: Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal Your high displeasure.—All this,—uttered With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,-Could not take truce with the unruly spleen Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast; Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point, And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, Hold, friends! friends, part! and, swifter than his tongue, His agile arm beats down their fatal points, And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled: But by and by comes back to Romeo, Who had but newly entertain'd revenge, And to't they go like lightning; for ere I Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide. Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world, And world's exile is death,—then banished Is death mis-term'd: calling death banishment, Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden are, And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

SCENE II .- CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound .-

But, soft! what light through youder window. breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!-Arise, fair sun, and kill the euvious moon, Who is already sick and pale with grief, That thou her maid art far more fair than she: Be not her maid, since she is envious; Her vestal livery is but sick and green And none but fools do wear it; cast it off .-It is my lady; O, it is my love! O, that she knew she were!-She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that? Her eye discourses, I will answer it. I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks: Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, Having some business do entreat her eyes To twinkle in their spheres till they return. What if her eyes were there, they in her head? The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven Would through the airy region stream so bright That birds would sing, and think it were not night.~

See how she leans her cheek upon her handl O, that I were a glove upou that hand, That I might touch that cheek! Ah mel Jul.

Rom. She speaks:-O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art As glorious to this night, being o'er my head, As is a winged messenger of heaven Unto the white-upturned woudering eyes Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeol wherefore art thon

Romeo? Deuy thy father and refuse thy name; Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love, And I'll no longer be a Capulet. Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy; Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.

What's Moutague? It is nor hand, nor foot, Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belouging to a man. O, be some other name! What's in a name? that which we call a rose, By any other name would smell as sweet; So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd Retain the dear perfection which he owes Without that title:-Romeo, doff thy name; And for that uame, which is no part of thee. Rom. I take thee at thy word: Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd; Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thon, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest ou my counsel?

Rom. Ву а пате I know not how to tell thee who I am: My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself. Because it is an enemy to thee; Had I it written, I would tear the word.

O gentle Romeo, If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully: Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won, I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,

And light thee on thy way to Mantua: Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone. Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death: I am content, so thou wilt have it so. I'll say you gray is not the morning's eye, 'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow; Nor that is not the lark whose notes do beat The vaulty heaven so high above our heads: I have more care to stay than will to go. Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so. How is't, my soul? let's talk,—it is not day. Jul. It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away!

It is the lark that sings so out of tune, Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps. Some say the lark makes sweet division; This doth not so, for she divideth us: Some say the lark and loathed toad change eyes O, now I would they had chang'd voices too! Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray, Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the day.

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss, I cannot choose but ever weep the friend. Lady C. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him. Jul. What villain, madam?

Lady C. That same villain, Romeo. Jul. Villain and he be many miles asunder.

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart; And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart. Lady C. That is because the traitor mur-derer lives. Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my Would none but I might venge my cousin's death!

Lady C. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not:

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,-

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,— Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram... That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:

And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied With Romeo till I behold him-dead, Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd: Madam, if you could find out but a man To bear a poison, I would temper it, That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof, Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,-

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him! Lady C. Find thou the means, and I'll find

I must up-fill this osier cage of ours With haleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers. The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomh, What is her hurying grave, that is her womh: And from her womb children of divers kind We sucking on her natural hosom find: Many for many virtues excellent, None but for some, and yet all different. O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies In herhs, plants, stones, and their true qualities: For naught so vile that on the earth doth live But to the earth some special good doth give; Nor aught so good hut, strain'd from that fair use,

Revolts from true hirth, stumbling on ahuse: Virtue itself turns vice, heing misapplied; And vice sometimes by action dignified. Within the infant rind of this small flower Poison hath residence, and medicine power: For this, heing smelt, with that part cheers each part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart. Two such opposed kings encamp them still In man as well as herhs,—grace and rude will; And where the worser is predominant, Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good-morrow, father! Fri. L. Benedicite! What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?-Young son, it argues a distemper'd head So soon to hid good-morrow to thy hed: Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye, And where care lodges sleep will never lie; But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd hrain Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure Thou art uprous'd hy some distemperature; Or if not so, then here I hit it right, Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeterrest was mine. [Rosaline?

Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no; I have forgot that name, and that name's woe. That's my good son: hut where hast thou heen, then? Fri. L.

Rom. I'll tell thee ere thou ask it me again. I have been feasting with mine enemy; Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me That's hy me wounded; hoth our remedies Within thy help and holy physic lies: I hear no hatred, hiessed man; for, ic,

My intercession likewise steads my foe-Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy Riddling confession finds hat riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set On the fair daughter of rich Capulet: As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine; And all comhin'd, save what thou must comhine By holy marriage: when, and where, and how of the first and second cause: ah, the in We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow, passadol the punto reverso! the hay!—

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day. [herel Fri. L. Holy St. Francis! what a change is Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear, So soon forsaken? young men's love, then, lies Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes. Jesu Maria, what a deal of hrine Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosalinel How much salt water thrown away in waste, To season love, that of it doth not taste! The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears, Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears; Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit

Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet: If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine, Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline: And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence, then, Women may fall, when there's no strength in

Rom. Thouchidd'stme oftforloving Rosaline. Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine. Rom. And had'st me hury love. Fri. L. Not in a grave, To lay one in, another out to have. Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she whom I love Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;

The other did not so. Fri. L. O, she knew well Thy love did read hy rote, and could not spell. But come, young waverer, come, go with me, In one respect I'll thy assistant he: For this alliance may so happy prove, To turn your honseholds' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste. Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. Excunt.

Scene IV .- A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romco he?

Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, Torments him so that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tyhalt, the kinsman of old Capulet, Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life. Ben. Romeo will answer it. Mer. Any man that can write may answer a Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, heing dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead! stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the hlind bow-boy's butt-shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tyhalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom; the very butcher of a silk hutton, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause: ah, the immortal Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone, Having displeas'd my father, tó Lawrence' cell To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. |Exit.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn, Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue Which she hath prais'd him with above compare So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor; Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy; If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE L.-FRIAR LAWRENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind:

Uneven is the course, I like it not. [death, Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's And therefore have I little talk'd of love; For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous That she doth give her sorrow so much sway; And, in his wisdom, hastes our marriage, To stop the inundation of her tears; Which, too much minded by herself alone, May be put from her by society:

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.—

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife!

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. L. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price

Being spoke behind your back than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that:

For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it more than tears with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;

And what I spake I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—Are you at leisure, holy father, now; Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.—

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield I should disturb devotion!

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:

Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss.

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so, [help!

Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past Fri. L. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief; It strains me past the compass of my wits: I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it, On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,

Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd, Shall be the label to another deed, Or my true heart with treacherous revolt Turn to another, this shall slay them both: Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, Give me some present counsel; or, behold, 'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that Which the commission of thy years and art Could to no issue of true honour bring. Be not so long to speak; I long to die, If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. L. Hold, daughter: I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris, From off the battlements of yonder tower; Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears; Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattlin

O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones, With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;

Or bid me go into a new-made grave, And hide me with a dead man in his shroud; Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris; Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed,

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute letter?

than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knavel I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skainsmates .-And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!-Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,— Nurse. Good heart, and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift

This afternoon:

And there she shall at Friar Lawrence' cell Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains. Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall. Ithere. Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee, And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair; Which to the high top-gallant of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains: Farewell; commend me to thy mistress. Nurse. Now God in heaven bless theel—

Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse? Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear sav

Two may keep counsel, putting one away? Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true as Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady,-Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing,-O, there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, Nurse. Well, you have made me a simple I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as choice; you know not how to choose a man: pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth Romeol no, not he; though his face be better not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a an R.

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with-Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the dog: no; I know it begins with some other letter:-and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit ROMEO. -Peterl

Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, take my fan and go before. Exeunt.

SCENE V .- CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter TULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return. 150.-Perchance she cannot meet him: -- that's not O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts, [beams, Which ten times faster glide than the sun's Driving back shadows over lowering hills: Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love. And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings. Now is the sun upon the highmost hill

Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours,—yet she is not come. Had she affections and warm youthful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;

My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead; Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead .-O God, she comes!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O honey nurse, what news? Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away. Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate.

Exit PETER. Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord, why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am a-weary, give me leave awhile; Fie, how my bones achel what a jount have I

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones and I thy inurse, speak.

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; -good, good Nurse. Jesu, what haste? can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath? Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath To say to me that thou art out of breath?

The excuse that thon dost make in this delay Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse. Is thy news good or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance: Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad? Nurse. Well, you have made me a simple

Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead, Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd, Because he married me before to Romeo? I fear it is: and yet methinks it should not, For he hath still been tried a holy man: I will not entertain so bad a thought .-How if, when I am laid into the tomb. I wake before the time that Romeo Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point! Shall I not then be stifled in the vault, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes? Or, if I live, is it not very like The horrible conceit of death and night, Together with the terror of the place. As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, [bones Where, for these many hundred years, the Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd; Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth, Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they say, At some hours in the night spirits resort; Alack, alack, is it not like that I, So early waking, -what with loathsome smells, And shricks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—
O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,

[brains?—

As with a club, dash out my desperate O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier's point:—stay, Tybalt, stay!—Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[Throws herself on the bed.

SCENE IV .- Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:-Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica: Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go, Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow for this night's watching. [ere now

Cap. No, not a whit: what! I have watch'd All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady C. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow.

Enter Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

What's there? [not what.]
I Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exil 1 Serv.]
—Sirrah, fetch drier logs:

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs.

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit. Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'lis'
The county will be here with music straight,'
For so he said he would:—I hear him near.

Music within.

Nursel-wife!-what, hol-what, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris:—hie, make haste,
Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already;
Make haste, I say.

[Exeunt.

Scene v.—Julier's Chamber; Julier on the bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!
—fast, I warrant her, she:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!— Why, love, I say!—madam! sweetheart!—why, bride!— [now:

What, not a word?—you take your pennyworths Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant, The County Paris hath set up his rest That you shalt rest but little.—God forgive me, Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep! I must needs wake her.—Madam, madam, madam—

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;
He'll fright you up, i' faith.—Will it not be?
What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down

again!
I must needs wake you:—lady! lady!—
Alas, alas!—Help, help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. What noise is here?
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Lady C. What is the matter?
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
Lady C. O me, O me!—my child, my only life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!-Help, help!-call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead:

alack the day!

Lady C. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead! [cold:

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—out, alas! she's Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff; Life and these lips have long been separated: Death lies on her like an untimely frost

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field. Accursed time! unfortunate old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

donblet before Easter? with another for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets. Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT and others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them .- Gentlemen, good-den; a word with one of you. Mer. And but one word with one of us?

Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that,

sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,— Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? An thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw unto some private place, And reason coldly of your grievances, Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

draw.

I will not budge for no man's pleasure. I. Tyb. Well, peace with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Enter Romeo.

Mer. But I'll be hanged, sir, if he wear your livery.

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; Your worship in that sense may call him man. Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford No better term than this,-Thou art a villain. Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To such a greeting. Villain am I none;

To such a greeting. Villain am I none; Therefore, farewell; I see thou know'st me not. Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn and

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee; But love thee better than thou canst devise Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as my own.—be satisfied. Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

A la stoccata carries it away.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me? Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make hold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-Will you pluck your beat the rest of the eight. sword out of his pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out. Tub. I am for you.

Rom. Geatle Mercutio, put thy rapier up. Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight. Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their Wespons .-

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage!-Tybalt,—Mercutio,—the prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.—Hold, Tybalt!—good Mercutio.— [Exemt Tybalt and his Partizans.

Mer. I am hurt;-A plague o' both your houses!—I am sped.— Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt? Mer. Ay, sy, a scratch, a scratch; marry, tis enough-Where is my page?-go, villain, fetch a surgeon. Exit Page Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world.—A plague o' both your houses!—Zounds, a dog, a rat, a monse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmeticl Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses! They have made worm's ment of me: I have it, and soundly too .- Your houses!

Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, My very friend hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman .- O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;

This but begins the woe others must end. Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back .

eggin. Rom Alive, in triumph! and Mercutio slain! Away to heaven, respective lenity, And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!-

Re-enter TYBALT.

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company:

Either thou or I, or both, must go with him. Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here. Shalt with him hence.

This shall determine that. Rom. They fight; TYBALT falls. My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne; And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead,— Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips, That I reviv'd, and was an emperor. Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd, When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Veronal—How now, Balthasar! Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar? How doth my lady? Is my father well? How fares my Juliet? that I ask again; For nothing can be ill if she be well. [ill:

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be Her body sleeps in Capels' monument, And her immortal part with angels lives. I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, And presently took post to tell it you:

O, pardon me for bringing these ill news, Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!— Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night. Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience: Your looks are pale and wild, and do import Some misadventure.

paper

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd: Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. Hast thou no letters to me from the friar? Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night. Let's see for means:—O mischief, thou art

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men! I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows, Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, Sharp misery had worn him to the bones: And in his needy shop a tortoise hung, An alligator stuff'd, and other skins Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves A beggarly account of empty boxes, Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds, Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,

Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show. Noting this penury, to myself I said, And if a man did need a poison now, Whose sale is present death in Mantua, Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him. O, this same thought did but forerun my need; And this same needy man must sell it me. As I remember, this should be the house: Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?
Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear As will disperse itself through all the veins. That the life-weary taker may fall dead; And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath As violently as hasty powder fir'd Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's Law is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretched-

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks, Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes, Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back, The world is not thy friend, nor the world's

The world affords no law to make thee rich: Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ab. My poverty, but not my will consents. Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. Ab. Put this in any liquid thing you will, And drink it off; and, if you had the strength Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

If twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold: worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell: buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave; for there must I use thee.
[Excunt.

Scene II.—Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar John.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, hol

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo? Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

Fri. J. Going to find a barefoot brother out, One of our order, to associate me, Here in this city visiting the sick, And finding him, the searchers of the town, Suspecting that we both were in a house Where the infectious pestilence did reign, Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth; So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo? Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is ngain,—

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection. [hood,
Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brother-

The letter was not nice, but full of charge Of dear import; and the neglecting it May do much danger. Friar John, go hence; Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,

Jul. Can heaven be so envious? Romeo can, Nurse. Though heaven cannot .-- O Romeo, Romeo!-Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo?

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell. Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I, And that bare vowel I shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice: I am not I if there be such an I; Or those eyes shut that make thee answer I. If he be slain, say I; or if not, no:

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,

God save the mark!—here on his manly breast: A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse; Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood, All in gore-blood;-I swooned at the sight. Jul. O, break, my heart!-poor bankrupt.

break at once! To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty! Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here; And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had! O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman! That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. Whatstormisthisthat blows so contrary? Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead? My dear-lov'd cousin and my dearer lord?-Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living if those two are gone? Nurse. Tybalt is gove, and Romeo banished; Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. OGod!--did Romeo's handshed Tybalt's blood? Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did! Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face 1 Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical! Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravening lamb! Despised substance of divinest show! Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st, A damned saint, an honourable villain!-O nature, what hadst thou to do in hell When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?— Was ever book containing such vile matter So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell In such a gorgeous palace!

There's no trust, 'Nurse. No faith, no honesty in men; all are perjur'd. All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitae.

fold. These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me

Shame come to Romeo!

Blister'd be thy tongue For such a wish! he was not born to shame: Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit; For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd (husband? your cousin? Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,

When I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled

But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my That villain cousin would have kill'd my Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;

Your tributary drops belong to woe. Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy. My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain; busband: And Tybalt's dead that would have slain my All this is comfort; wherefore weep I, then? Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death.

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain: But, O, it presses to my memory
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished.
That banished, that one word banished,

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death Was woe enough, if it had ended there: Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship, And needly will be rank'd with other griefs .-

Why follow'd not, when she said Tybalt's dead, Thy father or thy mother, nay, or both, Which modern lamentation might have mov'd? But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death. Romeo is banished,—to speak that word Is father, mother, Tybelt, Romeo, Juliet, Is father, mother, Tybelt, Romeo, Jul. All slain, all dead: Romeo is banished,-There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,

In that word's death; no words can that woe sound. Where is my father and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,

Both yon and I; for Romeo is exil'd: He made you for a highway to my bed; But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed. Come, cords; come, purse; I'll to my wedding-

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead! Nurse. Hie to your chamber, I'll find Romeo To comfort you: I wot well where he is. Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night: I'll to him; he is hid at Lawrence' cell. [knight, Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true And bid him come to take his last farewell. Exeunt.

SCENE IIL-FRIAR LAWRENCES Cell. Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man: Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts, And thon art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news? what is prince's doom? What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand, That I yet know not?

Thee here in dark to be his paramour? For fear of that I still will stay with thee, And never from this palace of dim night Depart again: here, here will I remain With wo. us that are thy chambermaids; O, Will I set up my everlasting rest; And shake the yoke of inanspicious stars From this world-wearied fiesh.—Eyes, look your last! Arms, take your last embracel and, lips, O you The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss A dateless bargain to engrossing death!-Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide! Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!

to ΠŢ love! [Drinks.]—O apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die. Dies.

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, FRIAR LAWRENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night [there? Have my old feet stumbled at graves!—Who's

Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well. [my friend,

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell.me, good What torch is youd that vainly lends his light To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern, It burneth in the Capels' monument. [master, Bel. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my One that you love.

Who is it? Fri. L. Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there? Full half an hour. ${\it Bal.}$

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault. Bal. I dare not, sir:

My master knows not but I am gone hence; And fearfully did menace me with death If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then; I'll go alone:-fear comes upon me;

O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing. Bal. As I did sleep under this yew tree here. I dreamt my master and another fought, And that my master slew him.

Romeo! [Advances. Fri. L. Aleck, elack, what blood is this which stains The stony entrance of this sepulchre?--What mean these masterless and gory swords To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

Enters the monument. Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too? And steep'd in blood?—Ah, what an unkind hour is guilty of this lamentable chance!-BULIET wakes and stirs. The lady stirs.

Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my lord?-I do remember well where I should be, And there I am:-where is my Romeo?

(Noise within Fri. L. I hear some noise.-Lady, come from that nest Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep: A greater power than we can contradict Hath thwarted our intents:-Come, come away: With open outcry, toward our monument.

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead; And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee Among a sisterhood of holy nuns: Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;

Come, go, good Juliet [noise ogain],-I dare no longer stay. laway.-Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not

Exit FRIAR LAWRENCE. What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's hand? Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:-O churl! drink all, and leave no friendly drop To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips; Haply some poison yet doth hang on them. To make me die with a restorative.

Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm! 1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—which way? Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger! [Snotching Romeo's dagger.

This is thy sheath (stabs herself); there rest, and let me die. [Folls on ROMEO'S body, and dies.

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn. [the churchyard: I Watch. The ground is bloody; search about Go, some of you, whoe'er you find attach.

Exeunt some of the Watch. Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;-And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead, Who here hath lain these two days buried .-Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets, up the Montagues,-some Raise others search: - Exeunt others of the Watch.

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie; But the true ground of all these piteous woes We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch with BALTHASAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found. him in the churchyard.

I Watch. Hold him in safety till the prince come hither.

Re-enter others of the Watch with FRIAR LAWRENCE.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps:

We took this mattock and this spade from him As he was coming from this churchyard side. I Watch. A great suspicion: stay the frier too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enfer CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shrick abroad?

Lady C. The people in the street cry Romeo, Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run,

And slay thy lady, too, that lives in thee, By doing damned hate upon thyself? Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once; which thon at once wouldst lose.

Fie, fiel thon sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed [wit:
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy

Thy noble shape is but a form of war,
Digressing from the valour of a man;
Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both, Like powder in a skilless soldier's flask, Is set a-fire by thine own ignorance, And thou dismember'd with thine own defence. What, ronse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive, For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead; There art thon happy: Tybalt would kill thee, Bnt thou slew'st Tyhalt; there art thou happy too:

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thon happy: A pack of blessings lights upon thy back; Happiness courts thee in her best array But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench. Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love: Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable. Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed, Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her: But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set, For then thou canst not pass to Mantua; Where thou shalt live till we can find a time To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends, Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back With twenty hundred thousand times more joy Than thou went'st forth in lamentation. Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady; And bid her hasten all the house to bed, Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto: Romeo is coming. (the night

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all
To hear good counsel: O, what learning isl—
My lord. I'll tell my lady you will come.

My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Sir:

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

[Exit.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!
Fri. L. Go hence; good-night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or hy the hreak of day disguis'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; goodnight.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out to me, It were a grief so brief to part with thee:
Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene IV .- A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet and Paris

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily That we have had no time to move our daughter:

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tyhalt dearly, And so did I; well, we were horn to die. 'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night: I promise you, but for your company, I would have heen a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.— [daughter. Madam, good-night: commend me to your

Madam, good-night: commend me to your Lody C. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;
To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender Of my child's love: I think she will he rul'd In all respects hy me; nay, more, I doubt it not.—

Wife, go you to her ere you go to hed; Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love; And hid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next.—

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.
Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too.soon,

O' Thursday let it be;—o' Thursday, tell her, She shall be married to this noble earl.— Will you be ready? do yon like this haste? We'll keep no great ado,—a friend or two; For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, It may be thought we held him carelessly, Being our kinsman, if we revel much: Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends, And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? [to-morrow. Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were Cap. Well, get yon gone: o' Thursday be it then.—

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber,

ho!—
Afore me, it is so very very late
That we may call it early by and by.—
Good-night.
[Exeunt.

Scene V.—An open Gallery to JULIET'S Chamber, overlooking the Garden.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thon be gone? it is not yet near day:

It was the nightingale, and not the lark, That piere'd the fearful hollow of thine ear; Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree: Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn, No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks Do lace the severing clonds in yonder east: Night's candles are hurnt out, and jocund day Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops. I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

nt to me,
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
Execut. To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,

Scene,—In the end of the Fourth Act, in Enguand; through the rest of the Play, in Scotland; and chiefly at MACBETH'S Castle.

ACT I.

Scene I .- An open Place. Thunder and Ĺightning.

Enter three Witches.

r Witch. When shall we three meet again In thunder, lightning, or in rain? 2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,

When the battle's lost and won. 3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun. 1 Witch. Where the place?

2 Witch. Upon the heath.

3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

I Witch. I come, Graymalkin!

All. Paddock calls:-anon.-Fair is foul, and foul is fair: Hover through the fog and filthy air. Witches vanish.

Scene II .- A Camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter King Duncan, Mal-COLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,

As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt The newest state.

It shall he Romeo, whom you know I hate, s Rather than Paris:—these are news indeed! Lady C. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew:

But for the sunset of my brother's son It rains downright. How now! a conduit, girl? what, still in tears? Evermore showering? In one little body Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind: For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea, Do ehh and flow with tears; the hark thy hody

Sailing in this salt flood; the winds thy sighs; Who,-raging with thy tears, and they with them, Without a sudden calm, will overset Thy tempest-tossed hody .-- How now, wife! Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

Lady C. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave! Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife. thanks? How! will she none? doth she not give us Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought So worthy a gentleman to he her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud you have; but thankful that you have:

Proud can I never be of what I hate;

But thankful even for hate that is meant love. Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this? Proud,-and, I thank you,-and, I thank you And yet not proud:—mistress minion, you, Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds.

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next, To go with Paris to St. Peter's Church, Or I will drag theo on a hurdle thither. [gage! Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you hag-

You tallow-face! Lady C. Fie, fie! what, are you mad? Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees, Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disohedient wretch! I tell thee what, -get thee to church o' Thurs-Or never after look me in the face:

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; My fingers itch.-Wife, we scarce thought us hless'd

That God had lent us hut this only child; ' But now I see this one is one too much, And that we have a curse in having her: Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven hiess her!-You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go. Nurse. I speak no treason. O, God ye good-den! Nurse. May not one speak?

Cab. Peace, you mumbling fool! Utter your gravity o'er a gossip'a bowl, For here we need it not.

You are too hot. Cap. God's hreadlit makes me mad: Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play, Alone, in company, still my care hath been To have her match'd, and having now provided A gentleman of noble parentage Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd, Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts, Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,-And then to have a wretched puling fool, A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender, To answer, I'll not wed,-I cannot love, I am too young,—I pray you pardon me;— But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you: Graze where you will, you shall not house with

Look to 't, think on't, I do not use to jest. Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise: An you he mine, I'll give you to my friend: An you he not, hang, heg, starve, die i' the streets, For, hy my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee, Nor what is mine shall never do thee good: Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not he forsworn.

Exit. Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds, That sees into the bottom of my grief? O, sweet my mother, cast me not awayl Delay this marriage for a month, a week; Or, if you do not, make the hridal hed In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady C. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word;

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Exit. Jul. O Godl-O nursel how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven; How shall that faith return again to earth, Unless that hushand send it me from heaven By leaving earth?-comfort me, counsel me,-Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself!-What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Faith, here 'tis: Romeo' Nurse. Is banished; and all the world to nothing That he dares ne'er come back to challenge

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth. Then, since the case so stands as now it doth, I think it hest you married with the county. O, he's a lovely gentleman! Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam, Hath not so green, so quiek, so fair an eye As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart, I think you are happy in this second match, For it excels your first: or if it did not, Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,

As living here, and you no use of him. Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart? Nurse. From my soul too,

Or else heshrew them both. Amen! Jul.

Nurse. What? So wither'd, and so wild in their attire. That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth, And yet are on't?—Live you? or are you aught That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her chappy finger laying Upon her skinny lips:-you should be women, And yet your beards forbid me to interpret That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can; -what are you? I Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbethl hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbethl that shalt be king hereafter! Ito fear Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem Things that do sound so fair?-I' the name of truth, Are ye fantastical, or that indeed Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner You greet with present grace and great prediction Of noble having and of royal hope, [not: That he seems rapt withal:-to me you speak If you can look into the seeds of time, And say which grain will grow, and which will Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear Your favours nor your hate.

I Witch. Hail! 2 Witch, Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

I Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier. 3 Witch Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

I Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all haill Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis; But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives, A prosperous gentleman; and to be king Stands not within the prospect of belief, No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence You owe this strange intelligence? or why Upon this blasted heath you stop our way With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge

Witches vanish. you. Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water [ish'd?

And these are of them:-whither are they van-Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind.—Would they had [about? stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak Or have we eaten on the insane root

That takes the reason prisoner? Macb. Your children shall be kings.

You shall be king. Ban. Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it Who's here? not so? Ban. To the self-same tune and words.

Enter Ross and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily received, Macbeth.

The news of thy success: and when he reads Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend Which should be thine or his: silenc'd with that, In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day, He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks, Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make, Strange images of death. As thick as hail Came post with post; and every one did bear Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence, And pour'd them down before him

To give thee, from our royal master, thanks; Only to herald thee into his sight,

Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater hon-

He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:

In which addition, hail, most worthy thane! For it is thine.

What, can the devil speak true? Ban. Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me I have borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet; But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel With hidden help and vantage, or that with both He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not; But treasons capital, confess'd, and prov'd, Have overthrown him.

Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor: Macb. The greatest is behind [aside].—Thanks for your pains .-Do you not hope your children shall be kings, When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me

Promis'd no less to them?

That, trusted home, Might yet enkindle you unto the crown, Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange: And oftentimes to win us to our harm, The instruments of darkness tell us truths; Win us with honest trifles, to betray's In deepest consequence. Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Two truths are told, Macb. As happy prologues to the swelling act Of the imperial theme [aside.]-I thank you, gentlemen.

Aside. This supernatural soliciting Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—if ill, Why hath it given me earnest of success, Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of, Cawdor:

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion. Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair, And make my seated heart knock at my ribs, Against the use of nature? Present fears [cal, Are less than horrible imaginings: My thought, whose murder yet is but fantasti-Shakes so my single state of man, that function Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is But what is not.

Look, how our partner's rapt. Macb. [Aside.] If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me, Without my stir.

And this distilled liquor drink thou off: When, presently, through all thy veins shall A cold and drowsy humour; for no pulse Shall keep his native progress, but surcease: No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st: The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall, Like death, when he shuts up the day of life: Each part, depriv'd of supple government, Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death: And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours. And then awake ns from a pleasant sleep. Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead Then,—as the manner of our country is,-In thy best robes, uncover'd, on the bier, Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. In the meantime, against thou shalt awake, Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift: And hither shall he come; and he and I. Will watch thy waking, and that very night Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua. And this shall free thee from this present shame If no inconstant toy nor womanish fear Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give met O, tell not me of fear! Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father! Exeunt.

SCENE II .- Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cab. So many guests invite as here are writ. Exit first Servant.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks. 2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for Pil try if they can lick their fingers. Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone .- [Exit second Servant. We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. What, is my daughter gone to Friar Lawrence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth. Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is. Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Enter JULIET.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin Of disobedient opposition To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here, And beg your pardon: - pardon, I beseech you! Henceforward I am ever rul'd by yon. [this: Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning. What if it be a poison, which the friar

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence cell:

And gave him what becomed love I might.

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well, stand up

This is as't should be .- Let me see the county; Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither .-Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar, All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet, To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? Lady C. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her.-We'll to church to-morrow.

Exeunt Julier and Nurse. Ladu C. We shall be short in our provision: 'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tosh, I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck her; I'll not to bed to-night; -let me alone; [hol-I'll play the housewife for this once .-They are all forth: well, I will walk myself To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous light Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.-JULIET'S Chamber

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—but, gentle. nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night; For I have need of many orisons To move the heavens to smile upon my state, Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such neces-As are behoveful for our state to-morrow: So please you, let me now be left alone, And let the nurse this night sit up with you; For I am sure you have your hands full all In this so sudden business.

Good-night: Ladu C

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need. Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell!-God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, That almost freezes up the heat of life: I'll call them back again to comfort me;-Nursel-What should she do here? My dismal scene I needs must act alone.-

Come, vial. What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?-No, no; this shall forbid it:-lie thon there-[Laying down her dagger.

Enfer an Attendant.

What is your tidings?

Atten. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it:

Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,

Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true: -our thane is coming:

One of my fellows had the speed of him; Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending, He brings great news. [Exil Attendant.

The raven himself is hoarse
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, yon spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here;
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood,
Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
[ministers,

And take my milk for gall, you murdering Wherever in your sightless substances [night, You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell, That my keen knife see not the wound it makes, "Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark, To cry, Hold, hold!

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdorl Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! Thy letters have transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feel now The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,

Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never

Shall sun that morrow see!

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men May read strange matters:—to beguile the time,

Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye, Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,

But be the serpent under't. He that's coming Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night's great business into my despatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear;

To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

Scene VI .- The same. Before the Castle.

Hautboys. Servants of Macbeth attending. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Barquo, Lehnox, Macduff, Ross, Angus and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat: the Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer, The temple-haunting martlet, does approve, By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath

Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze, buttress, Nor coigne of vantage, but this bird hath made His pendant bed and procreant cradle:

Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd

The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH,

Dun. See, see, our hononr'd hostess!—
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,

Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you

How you shall bid God ild us for your pains, And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double,

Were poor and single business to contend Against those honours deep and broad where-

Your majesty loads our house: for those of old, And the late dignities heap'd up to them, We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor? We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose To be his purveyor: but he rides well; [him And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp To his home before ns. Fair and noble hostess, We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt, To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,

Still to return your own.

Dun.

Give me your hand;

Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,

Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly, And shall continue our graces towards him. By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The same. A Lobby in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well

It were done quickly. If the assassination Could trammel np the consequence, and catch, With his surcease, success; that but this blow Might be the be-all and the end-all here, But here, npon this bank and shoal of time,— We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases We still have judgment here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which being taught, return To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice Commends the ingredients of our poison'd

chalice
To our own lips. He's here in donble trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed: then, as his host.
Who should against his murderer shut the door,

O woeful time! Lady C. Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail. Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:-O son, the night before thy wedding-day Hath death lain with thy bride: -there she lies, Flower as she was, deflowered by him. Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir; My daughter he hath wedded: I will die, And leave him all; life, living, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this? Iday! Lady C. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful Most miserable hour that e'er time saw In lasting labour of his pilgrimage! But one, poor one, one poor and loving child, But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight! Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day, That ever, ever, I did yet behold! O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! Never was seen so black a day as this: [slain!

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, s
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd, spited, By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kili'd!-

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now To murder, murder our solemnity?— [child!— O child! O child!—my soul, and not my Dead art thou, dead!—alack, my child is dead;

And with my child my joys are buried!
Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not

Heaven and yourself In these confusions. Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all, And all the better is it for the maid: Your part in her you could not keep from death; But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. The most you sought was her promotion; For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd: And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself? O, in this love, you love your child so ill That you run mad, seeing that she is well: She's not well married that lives married long; But she's best married that dies married young. Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary On this fair corse; and as the custom is, In all her best array bear her to church: For though fond nature bids us all lament, Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival Turn from their office to black funeral: Our instruments to melancholy bells; Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast; Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change; Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse, · And all things change them to the contrary. Fri. L. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with him;—

And go, Sir Paris; -- every one prepare To follow this fair corse unto her grave: The heavens do lower upon you for some ill;

Move them no more by crossing their high will. Exeunt CAP., LADY CAP., PARIS, and Friar. I Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone. lout up: Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit.

I Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's case, Heart's ease: O, an you will have me live, play Heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why Heart's ease?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays My heart is full of woe: O, play me sone merry dump to comfort me. [now. 1 Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play

Pet. You will not, then? I Mus. No.

Pet. I will, then, give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pct. No money, on my faith; but the gleek, I will give you the minstrel. cresture.

I Mus. Then will I give you the serving-Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you; do you note me?

1 Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us. 2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron degger .- Answer me like men:

When griping grief the heart doth wound, And doelful dumps the mind oppress, Then music with her silver sound—why silver sound? Why music with her silver sound?-What say you, Simon Catling? r Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound. Pet. Pretty!-What say you, Hugh Rebeck? Mus. I say silver sound because musicians sound for silver. [Sound-post?

Pet. Pretty too!-What say you, James 3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy; you are the singer: I will say for you. It is music with her silver sound because musicians have no gold for sounding:

Then music with her silver sound

With speedy help doth lend redress. Exit.

z Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same! 2 Mus. Hang him, Jack!—Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. Excunt.

ACT V.

Scene I .- MANTUA. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep, My dreams presage some joyful news at hand: Ban. Thanks, sir; the like to you!
[Exeunt Banquo and Fleance.
Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready.

She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.
[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—

clutch thee:—
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going; And such an instrument I was to use. Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still; And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood, Which was not so before.—There's no such thing:

It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one-half world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder, Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,

Whose how!'s his watch, thus with his stealthy pace, (design With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth. (fear

Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for The very stones prate of my whereabout, And take the present horror from the time, Which now suits with it.—Whiles I threat, he lives;

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.
[A bell rings.
I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.

Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell. [Exit.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold:

What hath quench'd them hath given me fire.— Hark!—Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is ahout it:

The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets,

drugg'd their possets,

That death and nature do contend about them,

Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who's there?—what, ho!

Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,

And 'tis not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
[ready]
Community us.—Hark!—I laid their daggers

Contounds us.—Hark!—I laid their daggers He could not miss'em.—Had he not resembled My father as he slept, I had done't.—My husband!

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed.—Didst thou not hear a noise? [crickets cry. Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the Did not you speak?

Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Macb. As I descended?

Lan M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M.

Donelhei

Macb. This is a sorry sight.

[Looking on his hands. Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight. Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried Murder!

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them: [them But they did say their prayers, and address'd Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.
Macb. One cried, God bless us! and, Amen,
the other;
As they had seen me with these hangman's
Listening their fear, I could not say, Amen,

When they did say, God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could I not pronounce

Amen?
I had most need of blessing, and Amen

Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry, Sleep

no more! [sleep: Macbeth does murder sleep,—the innocent Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave of care, The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second

Chief nourisher in life's feast.

course,

Lady M. What do you mean?
Macb. Still it cried, Sleep no more! to all the house: [Cawdor
Glamis hath murder'd sleep: and therefore

Shall sleep no more,—Macbeth shall sleep no more! [worthy thane, Lady. Who was it that thus cried? Why,

You do unbend your noble strength to think So brainsickly of things.—Go get some water, And wash this fifthy witness from your hand.—Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there: go carry them; and smear The sleepy grooms with blood. Macb. I'll go no more:

I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M.

Infirm of purposel

Give me the daggers; the sleeping and the dead

Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the dead Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal, For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within-Macb. Whence is that knocking? How is't with me, when every noise appals me? And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;—
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tombl
[Exit.

Scene III.—A Churchyard; in it a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter PARIS, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof:—

Yet put it out, for I would not he seen. Under yond yew trees lay thee all along, Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground; So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,—Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,—But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me, As signal that thou hear'st something approach. Give me those flowers. Do as I hid thee, go. Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone

Here in the churchyard; yet will I adventure. [Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal hed I strew:

O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones! Which with sweet water nightly I will dew; Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd hymoans: The obsequies that I for thee will keep, Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. If the Page whistles.

The boy gives warning something doth approach. What cursed foot wanders this way to-night, To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, awhile. [Retires.

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning See thou deliver it to my lord and father. Give me the light: upon thy life I charge thee, What'e'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof, And do not interrupt me in my course. Why I descend into this hed of death Is partly to behold my lady's face, But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger A precious ring,—a ring that I must use In dear employment: therefore hence, he gone:—

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-wild; More fierce and more inexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will he gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—

Take thou that: [fellow.

Live and be prosperous: and farewell, good Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout:

His looks I fear, and his intents I douht.

Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womh of death.

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth, Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open, [Breaking open the door of the monument

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more foodi-Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague That murder'd my love's cousin,—with which grief,

It is supposed, the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead hodies: I will apprehend him.—
[Advances.]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague! Can vengeance he pursu'd further than death? Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee: Ohey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.—
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;

Fly hence, and leave me:—think upon these gone;

Let them affright thee.—I heseech thee, youth, Put not another sin upon my head By urging me to fury: O, he gone! By heaven, I love thee hetter than myself; For I come hither arm'd against myself: Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say, A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations, And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, hoy! [They fight. Page. O lord, they fight! I will go call the watch. [Exit. Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.
Rom. In faith, I will.—Let me peruse this

face:-

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!—What said my man, when my betossed soul Did not attend him as we rode? I think He told me Paris should have married Juliet: Said he not so? or did I dream it so? Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand, One writ with me in sour misfortune's hook! I'll hury thee in a triumphant grave;—A grave? O no, a lantern, slaughter'd youth, For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light. Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd. [Laying Paris in the monument. How oft when men are at the point of death Have they heen merryl which their keepers call A lightning hefore death: O, how may I Call this a lightning?—O my love I my wife!

Call this a lightning?—O my love I my wife!

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy hreath.

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd, beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee [twain
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe

That unsubstantial death is amorous; And that the lean abhorred monster keeps

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

What's the business, Lady M. That such hideous trumpet calls to parley The sleepers of the house? speak, speak! O gentle lady,

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak: The repetition, in a woman's ear.

Would murder as it fell.

Re-enter BANQUO

O Banquo, Banquo! Our royal master's murder'd! Lady M.

What, in our house?

Woe, alas!

Too cruel anywhere .-Ban. Dear Duff, pr'ythee, contradict thyself, And say it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lennox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this in-

There's nothing serious in mortality: All is but toys: renown and grace is dead: The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know't: The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd. Mal.

O, by whom? Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had [blood; done't:

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found

Upon their pillows:

They star'd, and were distracted; no man's life

Was to be trusted with them. Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Wherefore did you so? Macd. Mach. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate, and furious, Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love Out-ran the pauser reason. Here lay Duncan, His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood; And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in derers, nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the mur-Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their Help me hence, ho! Lady M. Macd. Look to the lady.

Why do we hold our tongues, Mal. That most may claim this argument for ours? Don. What should be spoken here, where our fate

Hid in an auger-hole, may rush, and seize us? Let's away;

Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow Upon the foot of motion.

Ban.

Look to the lady:-

LADY MACBETH is carried out. And when we have our naked frailties hid. That suffer in exposure, let us meet, And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake

In the great hand of God I stand; and thence, Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight Of treasonous malice.

Macd.And so do I. All.

So all. Macb. Let's brieny put on manly readiness And meet i' the hall together. All.

Well contented. Exeunt all but MAL, and DON.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are, There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood.

The nearer bloody.

This murderous shaft that's shot Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse; And let us not be dainty of leave-taking, But shift away: there's warrant in that theft Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—The same. Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an old Man. Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well: Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful and things strange; but this sore night Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah, good father, Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with (day, man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 'tis And vet dark night strangles the travelling lamp;

Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame, That darkness does the face of earth entomb, When living light should kiss it?

'Tis unnatural, Old M. Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday

A falcon, towering in her pride of place,

Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses.-a thing most strange and certain,-Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,

Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung imake out,

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would War with mankind.

'Tis said they eat each other. Old M. Ross. They did so; to the amazement of [Macduff. mine eyes, Here comes the good That look'd upon't.

Enter MACDUFF. How goes the world, sir, now?

Why, see you not? Macd.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

r Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain;

And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes. [Romeo's man, i Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd With instruments upon them fit to open

These dead men's tombs. [danghter bleeds! Cap. O heaven!—O wife, look how our This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo, his honse Is empty on the back of Montegue,—
And is mid-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

Lady C. O me! this sight of death is as a hell. That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night; Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her hreath: What further woe conspires against my age?

Prince. Look, and thon shalt see. [this. Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in To press before the father to a grave? [awhile, Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for Till we can clear these ambiguities.

Till we can clear these ambiguities, And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes, And lead you even to death: meantime forbear, And let mischance be slave to patience.— Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this. [breath

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of Is not so long as is a tedious tale. Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet; And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife: I married them; and their stol'n marriage-day Was Tyhalt's doomsday, whose untimely death Banish'd a new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tyhalt, Juliet pin'd.
You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To County Paris:—then comes she to me,
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident; and yesternight

Return'd my letter back. Then all alone At the prefixed hour of her waking Came I to take her from her kindred's vault; Meaning to keep her closely at my cell Till I conveniently could send to Romeo: But when I came, -some minute ere the time Of her awaking, -here untimely lay The noble Paris and true Romeo dead. She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, And hear this work of heaven with patience: But then a noise did scare me from the tomh; And she, too desperate, would not go with me, But, as it seems, did violence on herself. All this I know; and to the marriage Her nurse is privy: and if ought in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life Be sacrific'd, some hour hefore his time, Unto the rigour of severest lzw. [man.— Prince. We still have known thee for a holy Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this? [death;

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's

And then in post he came from Mantua

To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early hid me give his father;

And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter,—I will look on it.— [watch?— Where is the county's page that reis'd the Sirrah, what made your master in this place? Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb;
And hy and by my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words.

Their course of love, the tidings of her death: And here he writes that he did huy a poison Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.— Where be these enemies?—Capulet,—and Montague,—

See what a scourge is laid upon your hate, That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!

And I, for winking at your discords too, Have lost a hrace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand: This is my daughter's jointure, for no more Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more: For I will raise her statue in pure gold; That while Verona by that name is known, There shall no figure at such rate be set As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Can. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie; Poor sacrifices of our enmity! [it brings;

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with The sun for sorrow will not show his head: Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things; Some shall he pardon'd and some punish'd: For never was a story of more woe Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Excunt. That it was he, in the times past, which held

So under fortune; which you thought had been Our innocent self: this I made good to you In our last conference, pass'd in probation with [instruments,

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the Who wrought with them, and all things else that might

To half a soul and to a notion craz'd Say, Thus did Banquo.

I Mur. You made it known to us. Macb. I did so; and went further, which is DOW

Our point of second meeting. Do you find Your patience so predominant in your nature, That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd, To pray for this good man and for his issue. Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave, And beggar'd yours for ever?

z Mur. We are men, my liege. Mach. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men; As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves are clept All by the name of dogs: the valu'd file Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, The house-keeper, the hunter, every one According to the gift which bounteous nature Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill That writes them all alike: and so of men. Now, if you have a station in the file, And not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it; And I will put that business in your bosoms, Whose execution takes you enemy off; Grapples you to the heart and love of us, Who wear our health but sickly in his life, Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege, Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world Have so incens'd that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.

And I another, I Mur. So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune That I would set my life on any chance, To mend it, or be rid on't.

Both of you Mecb.

Mcco.
Know Banquo was your enemy.
True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance.

That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near'st of life: and though I could With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, For certain friends that are both his and mine Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall Who I myself struck down: and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love; Masking the business from the common eye For sundry weighty reasons.

We shall, my lord, 2 Mur. Perform what you command us-

Though our lives-1 Mur. Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves; Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,

The moment on't; for't must be done to-night, And something from the palace; always thought That I require a clearness: and with him, To leave no rubs nor botches in the work, Fleance his son, that keeps him company, Whose absence is no less material to me Than is his father's, must embrace the fate Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart: I'll come to you anon.

Both Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord. Mach. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. Exeunt Murderers It is concluded: - Banquo, thy soul's flight, If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

Exit.

Scene II.—The same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servani. Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court? Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure For a few words.

Madam, I will. Serv. Exil. Lady M. Naught's had, all's spent, Where our desire is got without content: 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, Of sorriest fancies your companions making; Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard: what's done is done. Mach. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it; [malice

She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor Remains in danger of her former tooth. But let the frame of things disjoint, Both the worlds suffer. Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams That shake us nightly: better be with the dead, Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace, Than on the torture of the mind to lie Duncan is in his grave; In restless ecstacy. After life's fitful fever he sleeps well; Treason bas done his worst: nor steel, nor poison, Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing Can touch him further.

Come on; Lady M. Gently my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks: Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night. Mccb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be

You: Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;

Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue: Istreams;

Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honours in these flattering And make our faces vizards to our hearts, Disguising what they are.

You must leave this. Lady M.

Mal. This is the sergeant, Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought 'Gainst my captivity.-Hail, hrave friend! Say to the king the knowledge of the hroil, As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood: As two spent swimmers that do cling together And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald,-Worthy to he a rehel-for to that The multiplying villanies of nature

Do swarm upon him,—from the Western isles Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied; And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling. Show'd like a rehel's whore. But all's too weak: [name.-

For brave Macheth,—well he deserves that Disdaining fortune, with his hrandish'd steel, Which smok'd with bloody execution, Like valour's minion. Carv'd out his passage till he fac'd the slave:

And ne'er shook hands, nor hade farewell to (chaps, Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the And fix'd his head upon our hattlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman! Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders hreak; So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come, Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:

No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,

But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men, Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this Our captains, Macheth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes: As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion. If I say sooth, I must report they were As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks; So they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe: Except they meant to hathe in recking wounds, Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell:--

But I am faint; my gashes cry for help. Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds: They smack of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons. Exit Soldier, attended. Who comes here? Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look

That seems to speak things strange.

Enter Ross.

God save the king! Ross.Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?
Ross. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norweyan banners flont the sky And fan our people cold. Norway himself, with terrible numbers, Assisted by that most disloyal traitor The Thane of Cawdor, hegan a dismal conflict; Till that Bellona's heidegroom, lapp'd in proof. Confronted him with self-comparisons, Point against point rehellious, arm 'gainst arm.

Curbing his lavish spirit; and, to conclude, The victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!

Ross. That now Sweno, the Norway's king, craves composition;

Nor would we deign him hurial of his men Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes-inch, Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive Our hosom interest:-go pronounce his present death, And with his former title greet Macheth.

Ross. I'll see it done. Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macheth hath won. Exeunt.

Scene III. - A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

I Witch. Where hast thou heen, sister?

2 Witch. Killing swine. 3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

r Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd: -Give me, quoth I:

Aroint thee, witch! the rump-fed ronyon cries. . Her hushand's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger: But in a sieve I'll thither sail, And, like a rat without a tail, I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.
I Witch. Thou art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.
I Witch. I myself have all the other; And the very ports they hlow,

All the quarters that they know I' the shipman's card. I will drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day Hang upon his pent-house lid; He shall live a man forhid: Weary seven-nights nine times nine Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine: Though his hark cannot he lost, Yet it shall be tempest-tost.—

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me, 1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumh, Wreck'd as homeward he did come.

Drum within.

3 Witch. A drum, a drum! Macheth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand, Posters of the sea and land, Thus do go ahout, ahout: Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine, And thrice again, to make up nine:-Peace!-the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen. · Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres?-What are these.

Who may I rather challenge for unkindness Than pity for mischancel

His absence, sir. Ross. Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness

To grace us with your royal company.

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here's a place reserv'd, sir. Macb. Where?

Here, my lord.

What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake

Thy gory locks at me. [well. Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not Lady M. Sit, worthy friends:-my lord is often thus,

And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep The fit is momentary; upon a thought He will again be well: if much you note him You shall offend him, and extend his passion:

Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man? Mocb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that

Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff! This is the very painting of your fear: This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said, Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws, and starts,-Imposters to true fear,—would well become A woman's story at a winter's fire, Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself! Why do you make such faces? When all's done, You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there! behold! look! lol how say you?— (too.— Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak

If charnel-houses and our graves must send Those that we bury back, our monuments

Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears. What, quite unmann'd in folly? Lady M. Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie, for shamel Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal; Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd Too terrible for the ear: the times have been, That, when the brains were out, the man would die,

And there an end; but now they rise again, With twenty mortal murders on their crowns, And push us from our stools: this is more strange Than such a murder is.

My worthy lord, Lady M:

Your noble friends do lack you. I do forget: Macb. Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;

I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing To those that know me. Come, love and health [full.

Then I'll sit down.—Give me some wine, fill I drink to the general joy o' the whole table, And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss; Would he were herel to all, and him, we thirst, And all to all.

Our duties, and the pledge. Lords.

Ghost rises again.

Macb. Avauntl and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee! .

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold: Thou hast no speculation in those eyes Which thou dost glare with!

Think of this, good peers, Lady M. But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other: Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare: Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear. The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger; Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves Shall never tremble: or be alive again,

And dare me to the desert with thy sword; If trembling I inhabit then, protest me The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadowl Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost disappears,

Why, so; -being gone, I am a man again.—Pray you, sit still. Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting, With most admir'd disorder.

 $\it Macb.$ Can such things be, And overcome us like a summer's cloud.
Without our special wonder? You make me strange

Even to the disposition that I owe, When now I think you can behold such sights, And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks, When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord? Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him: at once, good-night:-Stand not upon the order of your going, But go at once.

Len. Good-night; and better health Attend his majestyl

Lady M. A kind good-night to all! Exeunt Lords and Attendants.

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will [speak; have blood: Stones have been known to move, and trees to Augurs, and understood relations, have [forth By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night? Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which · his person, is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies At our great bidding?

Did you send to him, sir? Lady M. Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send: There's not a one of them but in his house I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow (And betimes I will) to the weird sisters: More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know, By the worst means, the worst. For mine own All causes shall give way: I am in blood Stept in so far that, should I wade no more, Returning were as tedious as go o'er: [hand; Strange things I have in head, that will to Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd. Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:-We are yet but young in deed. Exeunt.

New honours come upon him, Ban. Like our strange garments; cleave not to their mould

But with the aid of use.

Mach. [Aside.] Come what come may, Time and the bour runs through the roughest day leisure. Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your Mach. Give me your favour:-my dull hrain was wrought

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your Are register'd where every day I turn The leaf to read them .- Let us toward the king .ftime,

Think upon what hatb chanc'd; and, at more The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak Our free bearts each to other

Ban. Very gladly. Mach. Till then, enough.-Come, friends. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- Forres. A Room in the Palace. Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DON-ALBAIN, LENNOX and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not

Those in commission yet return'd? Mol. My liege, They are not yet come back. But I have spoke With one that saw him die: who did report, That very frankly he confess'd his treasons; Implor'd your highness' pardon; and set forth A deep repentance: nothing in his life Became him like the leaving it; be died As one that had been studied in his death, To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd, As 'twero a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art To find the mind's construction in the face: He was a gentleman on whom I huilt

An absolute trust.-

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.

O worthiest cousin! The sin of my ingratitude even now Was heavy on me: thou art so far before, That swiftest wing of recompense is slow To overtake thee. Would thou badst less deserv'd; [ment

That the proportion both of thanks and pay-Might have been minel only I have left to say, More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Mocb. The service and the royalty I owe, In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part Is to receive our duties: and our duties Are to your throne and state children and [everything servants;

Which do but what they should, hy doing Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither: I have begun to plant thee, and will labour To make thee full of growing .- Nohle Banquo, That hast no less deserv'd, nor must he known No less to have done so, let me infold thee, And hold thee to my beart.

There if I grow, Ban.

The harvest is your own

My plenteons joys, Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves In drops of sorrow.-Sons, kinsmen, thanes, And you whose places are the nearest, know, We will establish our estate upon Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name here-

The Prince of Cumherland: which honour must Not unaccompanied invest him only, But signs of nohleness, like stars, shall shine On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness. And bind us further to you.

[for you: Mach. The rest is lahour, which is not us'd I'll be myself the harhinger, and make joyful The hearing of my wife with your approach;

The hearing of my man So, humbly take my leave.

My worthy Cawdorl Mach. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumherland!

That is a step. On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires! Let not light see my black and deep desires: The eye wink at the handl yet let that he, Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit. Dun. True, worthy Banquo,-he is full so valiant;

And in his commendations I am fed. It is a hanquet to me. Let us after him Whose care is gone hefore to hid us welcome: It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish.

Scene V .- Inverness. A Room in MAC-BETH'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood topt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who oll-hailed me, Thane of Cawdor; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with Hail, king that shalt hel This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness that thou mightst not lose the dues of rejoicing, by heing ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. If we should fail? Macb. We fail! Lady M. But screw your courage to the sticking place, And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,-Whereto the rather shall this day's hard journey Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains Will I with wine and wassail so convince That memory, the warder of the hrain, Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason A limbec only: when in swinish sleep Their drenched natures lie as in a death

What cannot you and I perform upon The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon His spongy officers; who shall hear the guilt Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only; For thy undaunted mettle should compose Nothing hut males. Will it not he receiv'd When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers.

That they have done't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other, As we shall make our griefs and clamour TOST

Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and hend up Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. Away, and mock the time with fairest show: False face must hide what the false heart doth Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle.

Enter Banquo, preceded by Fleance with a torch.

Ban. How goes the night, hoy? Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take't, 'tis later, sir. Ban. Hold, take my sword.—There's hushandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out:—take thee that too.-A heavy summons lies like lead upon me, And yet I would not sleep:-merciful powers, Restrain me in the cursed thoughts that nature Gives way to in repose!-Give me my sword. Who's there?

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch. Macb. A friend. Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's He hath been in unusual pleasure, and

Sent forth great largess to your officers: This diamond he greets your wife withal, By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up

Macb. Being unprepar'd, Our will became the servant to defect;

Which else should free have wrought.

I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters: To you they have show'd some truth. Macb. I think not of them:

Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve, We would spend it in some words upon that business,

If you would grant the time.

At your kind'st leisure. Ban. Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,when 'tis.

It shall make honour for you.

So I lose none Ban. In seeking to augment it, but still keep My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear, I shall he counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Son. If he were dead, you'd ween for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler! how thou talk'st.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known.

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. I doubt some danger does approach you nearly: If you will take a homely man's advice, Be not found here; hence, with your little ones. To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage; To do worse to you were fell cruelty,

Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve I dare abide no longer. Exit. Whither should I fly? L. Macd. I have done no harm. But I remember now I am in this earthly world; where to do harm

Is often laudable; to do good, sometime Accounted dangerous folly: why then, alas, Do I put up that womanly defence, To say I have done no harm?-What are these Enter Murderers.

1 Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified Where such as thou mayst find him.

1 Mur. He's a traitor. Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain. 1 Mur What, you egg? [Stabbing him.

Young fry of treachery! He has kill'd me, mother: Run away, I pray you! [Dies. [Exit LADY MADCUFF, crying Murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

Scene III.—England. Before the King's Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade. and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Let us rather Macd. Hold fast the mortal sword, and, like good men, Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: each new morn sorrows New widows howl; new orphans cry; new Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour. What I believe, I'll wail; Mal. What know, believe; and what I can redress, As I shall find the time to friend, I will.

What you have spoke, it may be so perchance. This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our well: tongues,

Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; [dom but something

You may deserve of him through me; and wis-To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous

But Macbeth is. A good and virtuous nature may recoil In an imperial charge. , But I shall crave your pose; pardon; That which you are, my thoughts cannot trans-

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell: Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace.

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes. Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child .-Those precious motives, those strong knots of love.

Without leave-taking?—I pray you. Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, But mine own safeties:-you may be rightly just, Whatever I shall think.

Bleed, bleed, poor country! Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, For goodness dare not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs, Thy title is affeer'd.—Fare thee well, lord: I would not be the villain that thou think'st For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp And the rich East to boot.

Be not offended: I speak not as in absolute fear of you. I think our country sinks beneath the yoke; It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash Is added to her wounds: I think, withal, There would be hands uplifted in my right; And here, from gracious England, have I offer Of goodly thousands: but, for all this When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head, Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country Shall have more vices than it had before; More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, By him that shall succeed. -What should he be? Macd.

Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know All the particulars of vice so grafted That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth. Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd With my confineless harms.

Not in the legions Macd.Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd In evils to top Macbeth.

I grant him bloody, Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful, Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin That has a name: but there's no bottom, none, In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill The cistern of my lust; and my desire All continent impediments would o'erbear, That did oppose my will: better Macbeth Than such a one to reign.

Boundless intemperance Macd.In nature is a tyranny; it hath been The untimely emptying of the happy throne, But fear not yet And fall of many kings. To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty, And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough; there cannot That vulture in you, to devour so many As will to greatness dedicate themselves

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Ledy M. My hands are of your colour, but ! I shame

To wear a heart so white. [Knocking within.] I hear a knocking

At the south entry:-retire we to our chamber.

A little water clears us of this deed: How easy is it then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking within.]

Hark! more knocking: Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us, And show us to be wetchers:—be not lost

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. (Knocking.) Knock, knock, who's there, i the name of Beekzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged him-self on the expectation of plenty; come in time; have napkins enow about rou; here you'll sweat for't.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock! Who's there, i' the other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed tresson enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there! Faith, here's an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor, here you may roast your goose.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock: never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everissting bornire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon! I gray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the cale.

Enter Macduff and Lennox.

Mccd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do He so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Mccd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-psinting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes and it unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit, the performance: therefore, much drink may And look on death itselff up, up, and see be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it The great doom's image! Mord. Is thy master stirring? Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Enter MACBETH.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir! Mecb. Good-morrow, both! Mord. Is the king stirring, worthy thane? Mecb. Not yet. Merd. He did command me to call timely on him

I have almost slipp'd the hour. I'll bring you to him. M.ccb. Mccd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you; But yet 'fis one. Mccb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Mecd. Pil make so bold to call. For 'tis my limited service. Exit MACDUFF.

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?
Mecb. He does; he did appoint so. Len. The night has been unruly: where we lev.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes't? ltidings, When I came hither to transport the Ross.

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour Of many worthy fellows that were out;

Which was to my belief witness'd the rather, For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:

Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland Would create soldiers, make our women fight,

To doff their dire distresses. Mal. Be't their comfort We are coming thither: gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men;

An older and a better soldier none That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer This comfort with the like! But I have words That would be howl'd out in the desert air, Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?

The general cause? or is it a fee-grief Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that's honest But in it shares some woe; though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,

Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it. Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever, Which shall possess them with the heaviest

That ever yet they heard. Macd. Huml I guess at it. Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and Macd. My children too?

Wife, children, servants, all ${\it Ross.}$ That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thencel

My wife kill'd too?

I have said. Ross.

Be comforted: Mal.Let's make us medicines of our great revenge, To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.-All my pretty

{ones?

Did you say all?—O hell-kite!—All? What, all my pretty chickens and their dam At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

I shall do so; Macd. But I must also feel it as a man: I cannot but remember such things were,

That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look on, And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff, They were all struck for theel naught that I am, Not for their own demerits, but for mine;

ACT V.

Scene I .- Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you. but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep, Doct. A great perturbation in nature,-to. receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching!—In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard.

her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after Doct. You may to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech. here she comes!

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command. Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Harkl she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I sayl-One; two: why, then 'tis time to do't:-Hell is murkyl-Fie, my lord, fiel a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?-Yet who would have thought the old man to Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain. Ross. Alas, the day! What good could they pretend?

They were suborn'd: Macd. Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons, Are stol'n away and fied; which puts upon them Suspicion of the deed.

'Gzinst nature still: Ross. Thriftless ambition, that wilt ravin up Thine own life's means!-Then 'tis most like, The sovereignty will fall npon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and cone to Scone

To be invested.

Where is Duncan's body? Ross.Macd. Carried to Colme-kill. The sacred storehouse of his predecessors. And guardian of their bones.

Will you to Scone? Ross. Ross.
Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.
Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there, -adieu!-Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Farewell, father. (those Old M. God's benison go with you; and with That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene L.-Forres. A Room in the Palace Enter BANOUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now,-king, Cawdor,

Glamis, all As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear, . Thou play'dst most foully for't; yet it was said It should not stand in thy posterity; But that myself should be the root and father Of many kings. If there come truth from them. As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,-Why, by the verities on thee made good, May they not be my oracles as well, And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH as King. LADY MACBETH as Queen; LENNOX, Ross, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

If he had been forgotten, Lady M. It had been as a gap in our great feast, And all-thing unbecoming.

Mach. To-night we hold a solemn supper,

And I'll request your presence.

Let your highness Command upon me; to the which my duties are with a most indissoluble tie For ever knit.

Macb. Ride yon this afternoon?

Ay, my good lord. Ben. Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice,lous,

Which still hath been both grave and prosper-In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow. Is't far yon ride?

Ben. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time Twirt this and supper: go not my horse the better.

I must become a borrower of the night, For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast. Ban. My lord, I will not. [stow'd Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are be-In England and in Ireland; not confessing Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention: but of that to-morrow; When therewithal we shall have cause of state Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adien, Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you? Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot; And so I do commend you to their backs. Farewell.-Exil BANQUO. Let every man be master of his time Till seven at night; to make society The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself

Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you! Exeunt LADY MACBETH, Lords.

Ladies, &c. Sirrah, a word with you: attend those men Our pleasure?

Attend. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.

Exit Attendant. To be thus is nothing; But to be safely this: -our fears in Banquo Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature Reigns that which would be fear'd: 'tis much he dares;

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind. He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear: and, under him My genins is rebuk'd; as, it is said. (sisters Mark Antony's was by Casar. Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round; Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine armour .-

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord, As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies; That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that: Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd; Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow; Raze out the written troubles of the brain; And with some sweet oblivious antidote Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient Must minister to himself. fof it.

Scene IV.—Country near Dunsinane: a Wood in view.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand

That chambers will be safe.

We doubt it nothing. Ment. Siw. What wood is this before us?

The wood of Birnam. Ment.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a [shadow | bough, And bear't before him; thereby shall we The numbers of our host, and make discovery Err in report of us.

And beat them backward home.

[A cry of women within. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears: The time has been, my senses would have cool'd

To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir As life were in't: I have supp'd full with horrors:

Direness, familiar to my slaught'rous thoughts, Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry? Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead. Macb. She should have died hereafter; There would have been a time for such a word.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more: it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, I should report that which I say I saw, But know not how to do it. Well, say, sir. Macb.

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.

Maco. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats:

yet he's good That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it, Thou art the nonparell.

Mur. Most royal, sir.

Fleance is 'scap'd. [been perfect; Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else Whole as the marble, founded as the rock; As broad and general as the casing air: But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound

To sancy doubts and fears. But Banqno's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he bides,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head; With twenty desired to nature.

The least a death to nature.

Thanks for that:

There the grown serpent lies; the worm that's Hath nature that in time will venom breed No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone; tomorrow We'll hear, ourselves, again. [Exit Murderer. My royal lord, Lady M.

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making, 'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at home. From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony; Meeting were bare without it.

Sweet remembranceri-Macb.

Now, good digestion wait on appetite, And health on both!

May't please your highness sit? [The Ghost of BANQUO rises, and sits in MACBETH'S place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd, Was't not the way? Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present; That keep the word of promise to our ear, And break it to our hope!—I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward, And live to be the show and gaze o' the time: We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are, Painted upon a pole, and underwrit, Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,

And to be baited with the rabble's curse.

Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body
I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff;
And damn'd be him that first cries, Hold, enough!

[Exeunt, fighting.

Retreat. Flourish. Enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Ross, Lennox, Angus, Caithness, Menteith and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd. [see,

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these I So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only liv'd but till he was a man; The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd In the unshrinking station where he fought,

But like a man he died. Siw. Then he is dead?

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why, then, God's soldier be hel Had I as many sons as I have hairs, I would not wish them to a fairer death: And, so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow, And that I'll. spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MacDuff, with MacBeth's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands

The usurper's cursed head: the time is free: I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl That speak my salutation in their minds; Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! [Flourith.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time
Before we reckon with your several loves,

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do, Which would be planted newly with the time,—As calling home our exil'd friends abroad, That fled the snares of watchful tyranny; Producing forth the cruel ministers Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen, Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands Took off her life;—this, and what needful else That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace, We will perform in measure, time, and place: So, thanks to all at once, and to each one, Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V .- The Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting

I Witch. Why, how now, Hecatel you look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are, Saucy and overbold? How did you dare To trade and traffic with Macbeth In riddles and affairs of death: And I, the mistress of your charms, The close contriver of all harms, Was never call'd to bear my part, Or show the glory of our art? And, which is worse, all you have done Hath been but for a wayward son, Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do, Loves for his own ends, not for you. But make amends now: get you gone, And at the pit of Acheron Meet me i' the morning: thither he Will come to know his destiny. Your vessels and your spells provide, Your charms, and everything beside. I am for the air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end. Great business must be wrought ere noon: Upon the corner of the moon There hangs a vaporous drop profound: I'll catch it ere it come to ground: And that, distill'd by magic sleights, Shall raise such artificial sprites, As, by the strength of their illusion, Shall draw him on to his confusion: He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear: And you all know, security Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

[Music and song within: Come away, come away, &c. Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,

Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit. I Witch, Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again.

Scene VI .- Forres. A Room in the Palace. Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts, Which can interpret further: only, I say Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth:-marry, he was dead:-And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late; Whom, you may say, if't please you, Fleance kill'd.

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late. Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain To kill their gracious father? damned fact! How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight, In pious rage, the two delinquents tear, That were the slaves of drink and thralis of sleep? Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too; For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive, To hear the men deny't. So that, I say He has borne all things well: and I do think,

That had he Duncan's sons under his key, As, an't please heaven, he shall not,—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance. But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell Where he bestows himself?

The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd Of the most pious Edward with such grace That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect: thither Macduff Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward: That, by the help of these,—with Him above To ratify the work,—we may again Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights; Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives: Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,-All which we pine for now: and this report Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff? Lord. He did: and with an absolute, Sir, not I.

The cloudy messenger turns me his back, [time And hums, as who should say, You'll rue the That clogs me with this answer.

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel Fly to the court of England, and unfold His message ere he come; that a swift blessing May soon return to this our suffering country Under a hand accurs'd!

I'll send my prayers with him! Lord. {Exeunt.

ACT IV.

[Exeunt. | Scene L-A dark Cave. In the middle, a Caldron Boiling.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

- I Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd. 2 Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig. whin'd.
- 3 Witch. Harpier cries:—'tis time, 'tis time. I Witch. Round about the caldron go;
- In the poison'd entrails throw .-Toad, that under the cold stone, Days and nights hast thirty-one Swelter'd venom sleeping got, Boil thou first i' the charmed pot!

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

- Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble. 2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake, In the caldron boil and bake: Eye of newt, and toe of frog, Wool of bat, and tongue of dog, Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting, Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing, For a charm of powerful trouble Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.
- All. Double, double toil and trouble, Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble.

Fran. Give you good-night. Mar.

Bernardo has my place-Exit. Hollal Bernardol Say.

Ber. What, is Horatio there?

Hot.A piece of him. Ber. Welcome, Horatio:-welcome, good Marcellus. loight?

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy, And will not let belief take hold of him Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us: Therefore I have entreated him along With us to watch the minutes of this night; That, if again this apparition come He may approve our eyes and speak to it. Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile, And let us once again assail your ears.

That are so fortified against our story.

What we two nights have seen. Hor. Well, sit we down.

And let us hear Bernardo speak of this. Ber. Last night of all, When you same star that's westward from the pole Had made his course to illume that part of heaven Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself, The bell then beating one,— [comes again! Mar. Peace, break thee off; look where it Enter Ghost, armed.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's Horatio.

Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio. and wonder.

Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio. Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,

Together with that fair and warlike form In which the majesty of buried Denmark Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalks away! Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer. [pale: Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look Is not this something more than fantasy? What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe thout the sensible and true avouch mine own eyes

Is it not like the king? Mar. Hor. As thou art to thyself: Such was the very armour he had on When he the ambitious Norway combated; So frown'd he once when, in an angry parle, He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice. 'Tis strange. [hour, Mar. Thus twice before, and just at this dead With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch. Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;

But, in the gross and scope of my opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch So nightly toils the subject of the land; And why such daily cast of brazen cannon, And foreign mart for implements of war; [task Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore Does not divide the Sunday from the week; What might be toward, that this sweaty haste Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:

Who is't that can inform me?

That can I; At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, Whose image even but now appear'd to us. Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway, Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride, Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet,-(him,--For so this side of our known world esteem'd

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd. compact, Well ratified by law and heraldry, Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands, Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror: Against the which, a moiety competent

Was gagged by our king; which had return'd To the inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he been vanquisher; as by the same And carriage of the article design'd, His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, you ibras, His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortin-Of unimproved mettle hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there. Shark'd up a list of landless resolutes,

For food and diet, to some enterprise That hath a stomach in't: which is no other,-As it doth well appear unto our state,-But to recover of us by strong hand, And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands So by his father lost: and this, I take it, Is the main motive of our preparations,

The source of this our watch, and the chief head Of this post-haste and romage in the land. Ber. I think it be no other, but e'en so: Well may it sort, this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the king That was and is the question of these wars. Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye. In the most high and palmy state of Rome, ídead A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets: As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, Disasters in the sun; and the moist star, Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse: And even the like precurse of fierce events, As harbingers preceding still the fates, And prologue to the omen coming on, Have heaven and earth together demonstrated Unto our climature and countrymen. But, soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion! If thou hast any sound or use of voice,

Why do you show me this?-A fourth?-Start.

eyes! What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet?-A seventh?-Pil see no more:-And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass Which shows me many more; and some I see That twofold balls and trehle sceptres carry: Horrihle sight!—Now, I see, 'tis true; For the blood-holter'd Banquo smiles upon me, And points at them for his.—Whatl is this so?

I Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so:-but why

Stands Macbeth thus amazedly? Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites, And show the best of our delights; I'll charm the air to give a sound. While you perform your antic round; That this great king may kindly say,

Our duties did his welcome pay.

]Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone?—Let this pernicious hour

Stand are accursed in the calendarl-Come in, without there.

Enter LENNOX.

What's your grace's will? Macb. Saw you the weird sisters? Len. No, my lord. Macb. Came they not by you? Len. No, indeed, my lord. Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride; And damn'd all those that trust them!-I did hear The galloping of horse: who was't came by? Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring

This deed I'll do hefore this purpose cool: But no more sights!-Where are these gentlemen?

Come, bring me where they are. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Fife. A Room in MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and Ross.

Lady Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land? Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none: His flight was madness: when our actions do not,

Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not

Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his hahes.

His mansion, and his titles, in a place From whence himself does fly? He loves us not: He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren, The most diminutive of birds, will fight, Her young ones in her nest, against the owl. All is the fear, and nothing is the love; As little is the wisdom, where the flight So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz, I pray you, school yourself: but, for your

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors, And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

To what they were before.-My pretty cousin, Blessing upon you! L. Macb. Father'd he is, and yet he's father-Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer, It would he my disgrace and your discomfort: I take my leave at once. Exit.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead; And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As hirds do, mother.

L. Macb. What, with worms and flies Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thon do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband? L. Macd. Why, I can huy me twenty at any market.

Then yon'll bny 'em to sell again. L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet, i' faith,

With wit enough for thee. Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was. Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies. Son. And he all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, [and lie? and must he hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them? L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools: for there are liars and swearers enow to heat the honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now, God help thee, poor mon-keyl But how wilt thou do for a father?

ifather

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not for ever with thy vailed lids Seek for thy noble father in the dust: Idie, Thou know'st 'tis common,-all that live must | Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common. Oueen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee? [seems. Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not 'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother, Nor customary suits of solemn black, Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath, No, nor the fruitful river in the eye. Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage, Together with all forms, moods, shows of grief, That can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem; For they are actions that a man might play: But I have that within which passeth show; These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father: But, you must know, your father lost a father; That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound.

In filial obligation, for some term To do obsequious sorrow: but to persevere In obstinate condolement is a course Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief: It shows a will most incorrect to heaven; A heart fortified, a mind impatient; An understanding simple and unschool'd: For what we know must be, and is as common As any the most vulgar thing to sense, Why should we, in our peevish opposition, Take it to heart? Fiel 'tis a fault to heaven, A fault against the dead, a fault to nature, To reason most absurd; whose common theme Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried, From the first corse till he that died to-day, This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth This unprevailing woe; and think of us As of a father: for let the world take note You are the most immediate to our throne; And with no less nobility of love Than that which dearest father bears his son Do I impart toward you. For your intent In going back to school in Wittenberg, It is most retrograde to our desire: And we beseech you bend you to remain Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye, Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,

Hamlet:

I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg. Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:

Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come; This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof, No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell; And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit again, Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away. Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt.

Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew! Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd [God! His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O Godl O How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable Seem to me all the uses of this world! Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden. That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg? Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord. Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so; Nor shall you to mine ear that violence, To make it truster of your own report Against yourself: I know you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore? We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart. Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's [student;

With this there grows, Mal. In my most ill-compos'd affection, such A stanchless avarice, that, were I king, I should cut off the nobles for their lands: Desire his jewels, and this other's house: And my more-having would be as a sauce To make me hunger more; that I should force Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal, Destroying them for wealth.

This avarice Sticks deeper; grows with more pernicious root Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear; Scotland hath foysons to fill up your will, Of your mere own: all these are portable, With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces. As justice, verity, temperance, stableness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude, I have no relish of them; but abound In the division of each several crime, Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland! Scotland! Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:

I am as I have spoken.

Fit to govern! Macd.No, not to live!-O nation miserable, With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd. When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again, Since that the truest issue of thy throne By his own interdiction stands accurs'd, And does blaspheme his breed?-Thy royal father

Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore Oftener upon her knees than on her feet, Died every day she lived. Fare-thee-well! These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself Have banish'd me from Scotland .- O my breast,

By many of these trains hath sought to win me Into his power; and modest wisdom placks me From over-credulous haste: but God above Deal between thee and me! for even now I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure The taints and blames I laid upon myself, For strangers to my nature. I am yet Unknown to woman; never was forsworn, Scarcely have coveted what was mine own; At no time broke my faith; would not betray The devil to his fellow; and delight ling No less in truth than life: my first false speak-Was this upon myself:—what I am truly, Is thine, and my poor country's, to command: Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach, Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men, Already at a point, was setting forth:

Now we'll together; and the chance of goodness !

Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent? lat once Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things 'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray yon? [souls Docf. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched That stay his cure: their malady convinces The great assay of art; but, at his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend.

Mal. I thank yon, doctor.

[Exit Doctor. Macd. What's the disease he means? Mal. 'Tis called the evil: A most miraculous work in this good king: Which often, since my here-remain in England, I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, Himself best knows: but strangely-visited people

Enter Ross.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, hetimes remove

The means that makes us strangers! Ross. Sir, amen. Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Alas, poor country,-elf! It cannot Almost afraid to know itself! Be call'd our mother, but our grave: where nothing, But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile; Where sighs, and groans, and shricks, that rent the air, Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow

Macd. O, relation Too nice, and yet too true!

What's the newest grief? Mal.

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker; Each minute teens a new one. Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well. And all my children? Macd.Well too. Ross. Blacd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace? No; they were well at peace when Ross.

I did leave 'em.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep within the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are most select and generous chief in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For a loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell: my blessing season this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord. [tend. Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd, And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Lagr. Farewell. [Exit.
Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:

If it be so,—as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,—I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me. [girl, Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green Unrifted in such perious circumstance.

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or,—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wronging it thus,—you'll tender me a fool. Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.
Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks.

do know, When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter, Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both, Even in their promise, as it is a-making, You must not take for fire. From this time Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence; Set your entreatments at a higher rate Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, Believe so much in him, that he is young; And with a larger tether may he walk Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia, Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers,-Not of that die which their investments show, But mere implorators of unholy suits, Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds, The better to beguile. This is for all,-I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth, Have you so slander any moment leisure As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet. Look to't, I charge you; come your ways. Exeunt. Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

Scene IV .- The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Hor. I think it lacks of twelv Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: then it draws near the season

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Doct. Do you mark that? Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife; where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh! Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged. Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—
Gent. Pray God it be, sir.
Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Ledy M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale:—I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate: come, come, come, come, give me your hand: what's done cannot be undone: to bed, to bed, to bed. Exit.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?
Gent. Directly.
Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine than the physician .-God, God forgive us all!-Look after her: Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her:—so, good-night: The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear. My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight: Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear. I think, but dare not speak.

Good-night, good doctor. Gent.

Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd course Within the belt of rule. Ang. Now does he feel

His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach; Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who, then, shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start. When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on, To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd: Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal; And with him pour we, in our country's purge, Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs. To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.

blake we our march towards Birnam. [Exeunt, marching,

SCENE III .- DUNSINANE. A Room in the Cosile.

Enter Machern. Doctor, and Attendents.

Mach. Bring me no more reports; let them

[Excunt. | The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd

To tell the secrets of my prison-house, I could a tale unfold whose lightest word Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood: spheres; Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their Thy knotted and combined locks to part And each particular hair to stand on end, Like quills upon the fretful porcupine: But this eternal blazon must not be To ears of flesh and blood .- List, list, O, list! If thou didst ever thy dear father love

Ham. O God! murder. Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural Ham. Murder!

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is; But this most foul, strange, and unnatural. - Ham. Haste me to know't that I, with wings as swift As meditation or the thoughts of love,

May sweep to my revenge.

I find thee apt; And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, [hear: Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, 'Tis given out that, sleeping in mine orchard, A scrpent stung me; so the whole ear of Den-

Is by a forged process of my death Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth, The serpent that did sting thy father's life Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! mine uncle! Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous O wicked wit and gifts that have the power So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust The will of my most seeming virtuous queen: O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there! From me, whose love was of that dignity That it went hand in hand even with the vow I made to her in marriage: and to decline Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor To those of mine! But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,

Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven; So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, Will sate itself in a celestial bed And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air; Brief let me be .- Sleeping within mine orchard, My custom always in the afternoon Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole

With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial, And in the porches of mine ears did pour The leperous distilment; whose effect Holds such an enmity with blood of man That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through

The natural gates and alleys of the body; And with a sudden vigour it doth posset And curd, like eager droppings into milk, The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine; And a most instant tetter bark'd about,

Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust, All my smooth body. Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,

Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd: Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin, Unhousel'd, unanointed, unanel'd;

No reckoning made, but sent to my account

With all my imperfections on my head: O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not; Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damned incest. But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act. Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven, And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge, To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once! The glowworm shows the matin to be near, And igins to pale his uneffectual fire: Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! what else? lheart:

And shall I couple hell?—O, fie!—Hold, my And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, But bear me stiffly up.—Remember thee! Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat In this distracted globe. Remember thee! Yea, from the table of my memory I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past. That youth and observation copied there: And thy commandment all alone shall live Within the book and volume of my brain, Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven.

O most pernicious woman! O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!

My tables,-meet it is I set it down, That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain; At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark: [Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word; It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me:

I have sworn't. Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord,-Lord Hamlet. Mar. [Within.] Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him! Mar. [Within.] So be it! Hor. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord! Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord? What news, my lord? Hor. Ham. O, wonderful! Good my lord, tell it. Hor. Ham. No; you'll reveal it. Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven. Nor I, my lord.

Мат. Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?-

But you'll be secret?

Ay, by heaven, my lord. Hor. and Mar. Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

Why, right; you are i' the right;

Ham. Why, right; you are at all, And so, without more circumstance at all, I hold it fit that we shake hands and part: You, as your business and desire shall point you.-

For every man has business and desire, Such as it is; and for mine own poor part, my lord. Look you, I'll go pray. Hor. These are but wild and whirling words

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill, I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,

The wood began to move.

Macb.

Liar, and slavel

[Striking him. Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not

Within this three mile may you see it coming; I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false, Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive, Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth, I care not if thou dost for me as much.— I pull in resolution; and begin To doubt the equivocation of the fiend That lies like truth: Fear not, till Birnam wood Do come to Dunsinane;—and now a wood out!—

If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
I'gin to be a-weary of the sun, [done.—
And wish the estate o' the world were now unRing the alarum-bell!—Blow, wind! come, wrack!

Comes toward Dunsinane .- Arm, arm, and

At least we'll die with harness on our back.
[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leafy screens throw down,

And show like those you are.—You, worthy uncle.

Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon's what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.—
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our frumpets speak; give them all breath. Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.

(Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The same. Another part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly, [What's he But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb.

Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name

Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title

More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword

PH prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.—

But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,

Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.

[Exit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is.—Tyrant, show thy face! If thou be'st slain, and with no stroke of mine, My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou,

Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbatter'd edge,
I sheatheagainundeeded. Therethousbouldst be:

By this great clatter, one of greatest note Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune! And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord;—the castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,

And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes

That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.

[Excunt. Alarums.

SCENE VIII.—The same. Another part of the

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why, should I play the Roman fool, and die [gashes On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee. But get thee back; my soul is too much charg'd With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words,—
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macb. Thou losest labour: As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed:

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; I bear a charmed life, which must not yield To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb

Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,

That palter with us in a double sense;

According to the phrase or the addition Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does,—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was About to say something:—where did I leave?
Rey. At closes in the consequence,

At friend or so, and gentleman. [marry; Pol. At—closes in the consequence,—ay, He closes with you thus:—I know the gentleman; I saw him yesterday, or t' other day, [you say, Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as There was he gaming; there o'ertook in's rouse; There falling out at tennis: or perchance, I saw him enter such a house of sale,—

Videlicet, a brothel.—or so forth.— See you now:

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth: And thus do we of wisdom and of reach, With windlaces, and with assays of bias, By indirections find directions out: So, by my former lecture and advice, [not?

Shall you my son. You have me, have you Rey. My lord, I have.
Pol. God b' wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord!
Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.
Pol. And let him ply his music.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell! [Exit REYNALDO.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelial what's the matter? Oph. Alas, my lord, I have been so affrighted! Pol. With what, i' the name of God? Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my chamber,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd; No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd, Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle; Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;

And with a look so piteous in purport As if he had been loosed out of hell To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know; But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard:

Then goes he to the length of all his arm; And with his other hand thus o'er his brow, He falls to such perusal of my face As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so; At last,—a little shaking of mine arm, And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound That it did seem to shatter all his bulk And end his being; that done, he lets me go: And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd, He seem'd to find his way without his eyes; For out o' doors he went without their help, And to the last bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstacy of love; Whose violent property fordoes itself, And leads the will to desperate undertakings, As oft as any passion under heaven That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—What, have you given him any hard words of late? (command, Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did

I did repel his letters, and denied His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. I am sorry that with better heed and judgment I had not quoted him: I fear'd he did but trifle, And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!

It seems it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
This must be known; which, being kept close,
might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love. [Exeunt.

SCENE II .- A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you, The need we have to use you did provoke Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it, Since nor the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him

So much from the understanding of himself, I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, That being of so young days brought up with:

him, [humour, And since so neighbour'd to his youth and that you vouchsafe your rest here in our court. Some little time: so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus.

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And sure I am two men there are not living To whom he more adheres. If it will please you

To show us so much gentry and good-will As to expend your time with us awhile, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties.
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command.

Than to entreaty.

Guil.

And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good-night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev'd you?

Speak to me: If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do ease, and grace to me, Speak to me: If thou art privy to thy country's fate, Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid, O, speak! Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life Extorted treasure in the womb of earth, For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death, [Cock crows. [Cock crows.

Speak of it:-stay, and speak!-Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan? Hor. Do, if it will not stand. Ber. 'Tis here!

Ber. It was about to speak when the cock Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat Awake the god of day; and at his warning, Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air, The extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine: and of the truth herein This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, The bird of dawning singeth all night long: And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad; The nights are wholesome; then no planets

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, Walks o'er the dew of you high eastern hill: Break we our watch up: and, by my advice, Let us impart what we have seen to-night Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him: Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know

Where we shall find him most conveniently. Excunt.

Scene II.—Elsmore. A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, LOIDS, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet cur dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe: Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature That we with wisest sorrow think on him, Together with remembrance of ourselves-

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, The imperial jointress of this warlike state, Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,-With one auspicious and one dropping eye, With mirth and funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone With this affair along:-for all, our thanks. Now follows that you know, young Fortinbras, Holding a weak supposal of our worth, Or thinking by our late dear brother's death Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, Colleagued with the dream of his advantage, He hath not fail'd to pester us with message, Importing the surrender of those lands Lost by his father, with all bonds of law, To our most valiant brother. So much for him.

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting: Thus much the business is: - we have here writ To Korway, uncle of young Fortiubras,-Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress His further gait herein; in that the levies, The lists, and full proportions, are all made Out of this subject:—and we here despatch You, good Comelius, and you, Voltimand, For bearers of this greeting to old Norway; Giving to you no further personal power To business with the king more than the scope of these dilated articles allow. [duty. Farewell; and let your haste commend TOUT

Cor. and Vol. In that and all things will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell. Exeunt Vol. and Con. And now, Lacries, what's the news with you? You told us of some suit; what is't, Leertes? You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,

And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg, Laertes, That shall not be my offer, nor thy asking? The head is not more native to the heart, The hand more instrumental to the mouth, Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father. What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Dread my lord. Lcer. Your leave and favour to return to France; From whence though willingly I came to Denmark, To show my duty in your coronation; Yet now, I must confess, that duty done, My thoughts and wishes bend again toward [parden. France,

And bow them to your gracious leave and King. Have you your father's leave? says Polonius? SOW leave Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my

By laboursome petition; and at last Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent: I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will-But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my sen,-Ham. [Aside.] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clonds still hang on

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern;—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swathing-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child. Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o'

Monday morning; 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you.

When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzzl

Pol. Upon mine honour,-

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,— Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoralcomical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—

One fair daughter, and no more, The which he loved passing well.

Pol. [Aside.] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.
Pol. What follows, then, my lord?
Ham. Why—

As by lot, God wot,

and then, you know,

It came to pass, as most like it was,- the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look where my abridgement comes-

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, my old friend! Thy face is valanced since I saw thee last; comest thou to beard me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see: we'll have a speech straight: come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

r Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was,—as I received it, and others whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine,—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indite the author of affectation; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: if it live in your memory, begin at this line;—let me see, let me see:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast, it is not so:—it begins with Pyrrhus:—

The rugged Pyrrhus,—he whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse,—Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now is he total gules; horridly trick'd With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters,

Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous and damned light To their vile murders: roasted in wrath and fire.

And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks.—

So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion.

r Play. Anon he finds him [sword, Striking too short at Greeks; his antique Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command: unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide; But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilium, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword.

Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick: So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood; And, like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.

But as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, The blood winds speechless, and the orb below As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder Dothrend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause, A roused vengeance sets him new a-work; And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars his armour, forg'd for proof eterne, With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

Now falls on Priam.— Igods,
Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you
In general synod, take away her power;

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted: speak.

But from what cause he will by no means Gul. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof When we would bring him on to some confession Of his true state.

Oueen. Did he receive you well? Ros. Most like a gentleman. Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands, Most free in his reply. Did you assay him Oueen.

To any pastime?
Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players

We o'er-raught on the way: of these we told him

And there did seem in him a kind of joy To hear of it: they are about the court; And, as I think, they have already order This night to play before him.

'Tis most true: Pol. And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties To hear and see the matter. fcontent me King. With all my heart; and it doth much

To hear him so inclin'd.-Good gentlemen, give him a further edge. And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too; For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither That he, as 'twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia:

Her father and myself,-lawful espials,-Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen, We may of their encounter frankly judge; And gather by him, as he is behav'd, If't be the affliction of his love or no That thus he suffers for.

I shall obey you:-And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness: so shall I hope your virtues

Will bring him to his wonted way again,

To both your honours. Obh. Madam, I wish it may.

Exit QUEEN. Pol. Ophelia, walk you here.—Gracious, so please you, bestow ourselves .- [To OPHELIA.]

Read on this book; That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,

'Tis too much prov'd,—that with devotion's visage

And pious action we do sugar o'er The devil himself.

King. [Aside.] O, 'tis too true! How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience! The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it Than is my deed to my most painted word: Nord. O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming: let's withdraw, my

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:— Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer

The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. Or to take arms against a sea of troubles, And by opposing end them?-To die.-to sleep,

No more; and by a sleep to say we end The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wish'd. To die,—to sleep;-To sleep! perchance to dream:-ay, there's the rub:

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come.

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil. Must give us pause: there's the respect That makes calamity of so long life; [time, For who would bear the whips and scorns of The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely.

The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay, The insolence of office, and the sourns That patient ment of the unworthy takes. When he himself might his quietus make With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear, To grunt and sweat under a weary life, But that the dread of something after death,— The undiscover'd country, from whose boum No traveller returns,—puzzles the will, And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of? Thus conscience does make cowards of us all; And thus the native hue of resolution Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought; And enterprises of great pith and moment, With this regard, their currents turn awry, And lose the name of action.—Soft you now! The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons Be all my sins remember'd.

Good my lord, Oph. How does your honour for this many a day? Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,

That I have longed long to re-deliver; I pray you, now receive them. No, not I;

[you did; I never gave you aught. Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd

As made the things more rich: their perfume Take these again; for to the noble mind Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord. Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?
Oph. What means your lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty? Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty [Exeunt King and Polonius. will sooner transform honesty from what it is to Hor.

Hor.

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse, freels: Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish

The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out The triumph of his pledge. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't: But to my mind,—though I am native here, And to the manner horn, -it is a custom More honour'd in the breach than the observ-

Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute. So oft it chances in particular men That, for some vicious mole of nature in them, As in their birth, -wherein they are not guilty, Since nature cannot choose his origin, By the o'ergrowth of some complexion Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason; Or hy some habit, that too much o'er-leavens The form of plausive manners;-that these men,-

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect, Being nature's livery or fortune's star,— Their virtues else,—be they as pure as grace, As infinite as man may undergo, Shall in the general censure take corruption From that particular fault: the dram of eale Doth all the noble substance of a doubt To his own scandal.

Look, my lord, it comes!

Enter Ghost.

. Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend ns! Be thou a spirit of health or gohlin damn'd,

Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable. Thou com'st in such a questionable shape That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet, King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me! Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death, Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre, Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd, Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws To cast thee up again! What may this mean, That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel, Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous, and we fools of nature So horridly to shake our disposition With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls? Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we [Ghose beckons HAMLET. do?

Hor. It heckons you to go away with it, As if it some impartment did desire To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action It waves you to a more removed ground:

Hor. No, hy no means. Ham. It will not speak; then will I follow it. Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee; And for my soul, what can it do to that, Being a thing immortal as itself? It waves me forth again:-I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood. my lord.

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff That heetles o'er his hase into the sea, And there assume some other horrible form, Which might deprive your sovereignty reason. And draw you into madness? think of it: The very place puts toys of desperation, Without more motive, into every hrain That looks so many fathoms to the sea And hears it roar heneath.

Ham. It waves me still .-Go on: I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands. Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go. My fate cries out, Ham. And makes each petty artery in this hody As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.

[Ghost beckons. Still am I call'd;—unhand me, gentlemen;— [Breaking from them. By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it. Nay, let's follow him. Mar. Exeunt.

SCENE V .- A more remote part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Hem. Where wilt thou lead me? speak I'll go no farther. Ghost. Mark me-

I will. Ham.

My hour is almost come, Ghost. When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghostl Ghost. Pity me not, hut lend thy serious hearing

To what I shall unfold.

Speak; I am hound to hear. Ham.Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit; Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night, And, for the day, confin'd to waste in fires Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature Are hurnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns apeak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villanous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently. Ham. Bid the players make haste.

Exit Polonius. Will you two help to hasten them? Ros. and Guil. We will, my lord.

Exeunt Ros. and Guil. Ham. What, ho, Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service. Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,-

Nay, do not think I flatter; ${\it Ham.}$ For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits, To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd? No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp; And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear? Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice, And could of men distinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing; A man that Fortune's buffets and rewards Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well com-mingled That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee.—Something too much of this.-There is a play to-night before the king; One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death: I pr'ythee, when thou see'st that act a-foot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen; And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note: For I mine eyes will rivet to his face; And, after, we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming.

Well, my lord: If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing, And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:

Get you a place.

Danish march. A flourish. Enter Queen, Polonius, OPHELIA, Rosen-CRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once i' the university, you say? [To Pot. Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?
Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed

i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready? Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience. Queen. Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O, ho! do you mark that?

To the King.

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap? Lying down at OPHELIA'S feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?
Oph. Ay, my lord.
Ham. Do you think I meant country matters? Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs. Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing. Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgot-ten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily: Yes, faith, heartily.

There's no offence, my lord. Hor. Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio, lhere.

And much offence too. Touching this vision It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you: For you desire to know what is between us, O'ermaster't as you may. And now, good friends.

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers. Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seeu to-night.

Hor. and Mar. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear't. Hor. In faith.

My lord, not I. Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, truepenny?-Come on,-you hear this fellow in the cellar-Consent to swear.

Propose the oath, my lord. Hor. Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seeu,

With all my love I do commend to you: And what so poor a man as Hamlet is May do, to express his love and friending to you, God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray. The time is out of joint: O cursed spite, That ever I was born to set it right!-Nay, come, let's go together. (Excunt.

ACT II.

Scene I .- A Room in Polonius's House. Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes. Reynaldo. Rey. I will, my lord. [Reynaldo

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Before you visit him, to make inquiry Of his behaviour.

Rcy. My lord, I did intend it. Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir, Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris: And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding, By this encompassment and drift of question. That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it: Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;

As thus, I know his father and his friends, And in part him; -do you mark this, Reynaldo? Rey. Ay, very well, my lord. [not well: Pol. And in part him;—but, you may say, But if t be he I mean, he's very wild; Addicted so and so; and there put on him What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank As may dishonour him; take heed of that; But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips As are companions noted and most known To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord. Pol. Ay, or drinking, feneing, swearing, quarrelling, Drabbing:—you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him. Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him, That he is open to incontinency; That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly That they may seem the taints of liberty; The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;

A savageness in unreclaimed blood, Of general assault. But, my good lord,-

Rey. But, my good lord Pol. Wherefore should you do this? Ay, my lord, Rey. I would know that.

Marry, sir, here's my drift; Pol. And I believe it is a fetch of warrent: You laying these slight sullies on my son, As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working, Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound, Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd He closes with you in this consequence;

Good sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,-

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are a good chorus, my lord. Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen. Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your hushands.— Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces and begin. Come:—The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing; Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecate's ban thrice hlasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison into the sleeper's ears. Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for's estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire! Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights! Exeunt all but HAM. and HOR. Ham. Why, let the strucken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play For some must watch, while some must sleep

So runs the world away.-

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with two Provencial roses on my razed sho get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear, This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rhymed

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's ord for a thousand pound. Didst perceive? word for a thousand pound. Hor. Very well, my lord

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,— Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, hal-Come, some music! come, the recorders!-

For if the king like not the comedy, Why, then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy. Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history. Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him? stempered. Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous dis- utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Hom. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Hom. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.
Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right hreed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot. Guil. What, my lord?

Hom. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseas'd: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,-

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admira-

Hom. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration?

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to hed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me. Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, har the door upon your own liberty if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Hom. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that he, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, but While the grass grows,-the proverh is something musty.

Re-enter the Players, with Recorders.

O, the recorders:-let me see one .- To with draw with you:-why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you. Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you. Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord. Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops Guil. But these cannot I command to any My too-much-changed sou. - Go, some of you. And bring these geutlemen where Hamlet is. Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him! Oueen. Av. ameu! Exeunt Ros., Gun., and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God and to my gracious king: And I do think, -or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure As it hath us'd to do,—that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy. King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear. Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors

My news shall be the fruit to that great feast. King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit POLONIUS.

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found

The head and source of all your sou's distemper. Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main, His father's death and our o'erhasty marriage. King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends! Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway? olt. Most fair return of greetings and desires. Upon our first, he seut out to suppress His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack; But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: whereat griev'd, That so his sickness, age, and impoteuce Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests Ou Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys; Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine, Makes yow before his uncle never more To give the assay of arms against your majesty. Whereou old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee; And his commission to employ those soldiers, So levied as before, against the Polack: With an eutreaty, herein further shown, [Gives o paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominious for this enterprise, On such regards of safety and allowance

: As therein are set down. It likes us well; King. And at our more cousider'd time we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business. Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour: Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together: Most welcome home!

Pol. This business is well ended. My liege, and madam,-to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time, Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time. Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, Andtediousnessthelimbsandoutwardflourishes, I will be hrief:-your noble son is mad: Mad call I it; for to define true madness What is't but to be nothing else but mad? But let that go.

Оиееп. More matter with less art. Pol. Madam, I swear I use uo art at all. That he is mad, 'tis true 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure; But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him, theu: and now remains That we find out the cause of this effect; Or rather say, the cause of this defect, For this effect defective comes by cause: Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend.

I have a daughter,—have whilst she is mine,-Who, in her duty and obedieuce, mark, Hath given me this: now gather, and surmise.

Reods. To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelio,- That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase,—beautified is a vile phrase: but you shall hear. Thus: Reods.

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c. Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her? Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. Reods.

Doubt thou the stars are fire; Doubt that the sun doth move: Doubt truth to be o liar; But never doubt I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers. I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lody, whilst this mothine is to him, HAMLET. This, in obedieuce, hath my daughter show'd me: And more above, hath his solicitings, As they fell out by time, by means, and place, All given to mine ear.

But how hath she King.

Receiv'd his love?

work,

Pol. What do you think of me? King. As of a man faithful and honourable. Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think.

When I had seen this hot love on the wing-As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me, -what might you, Or my dear majesty you queen here, think, If I had play'd the desk or table-book; Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb; Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;-What might you think? No, I went round to

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak: Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere; This must not be: and theu I precepts gave her, That she should lock herself from his resort, Admit no messengers, receive uo tokens. Execut VOLT. and COR. | Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;

And now I'll do't-and so he goes to heaven; And so am I reveng'd:—that would be scann'd: A villain kills my father; and for that, I, his sole son, do this same villain send To heaven.

O, this is hire and salary, not revenge. He took my father grossly, full of bread; With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as

May; [heaven? And how his audit stands who knows save But in our circumstance and course of thought 'Tis heavy with him: and am I, then, reveng'd, To take him in the purging of his soul, When he is fit and season'd for his passage? No. Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:

When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage; Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed; At gaming, swearing; or about some act That has no relish of salvation in't;—

Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven:

And that his soul may be as damn'd and black As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays: This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exil. The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go. Exit.

Scene IV .- Another Room in the Castle. Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him: Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.

Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother! Queen. I'll warrant you: Fear me not:-withdraw, I hear him coming. [POLONIUS goes behind the arras.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter? Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much loffended. offended. Ham. Mother, you have my father much Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue. [tongue. Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

What's the matter now? Ham.

Queen. Have you forgot me? No, by the rood, not so: Ham. You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife; mother.

And,-would it were not so!-you are my Queen. Nay, then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;

You go not till I set you up a glass

Where you may see the inmost part of you. Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?— Help, help, hol

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help, help! Ham.How nowl a rat? | Draws. Dead, for a ducat, dead!

[Makes a pass through the arras.

Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain! Falls and dies.

Queen. O me, what hast thou done? Йат. Nay, I know not: Is it the king? Draws forth POLONIUS. Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed!—almost as bad, good As kill a king and marry with his brother. Queen. As kill a king!

Queen. As kill a kills:

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

[To POLONIUS.

I took thee for thy better: take thy fortune; Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger .-Leave wringing of your hands: peace; sit you down, And let me wring your heart: for so I shall, If it be made of penetrable stuff: If damned custom have not braz'd it so That it is proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me? Ham. Such an act That blurs the grace and blush of modesty; Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose From the fair forehead of an innocent love, And sets a blister there; makes marriage-vows As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed As from the body of contradiction plucks The very soul, and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words: heaven's face doth glow; Yes, this solidity and compound mass, With tristful visage, as against the doom

Is thought-sick at the act. Queen. Ah me, what act, That roars so loud, and thunders in the index? Ham. Look here upon this picture and on this, The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. See what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself; An eye like Mars, to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination and a form, indeed, Where every god did seem to set his seal, To give the world assurance of a man: This was your husband.-Look you now, what follows:

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes? Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed, and batten on this moor? Hal have you eyes? You cannot call it love; for at your age The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,

And waits upon the judgment: and what judg-Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you

Else could you not have motion: but sure that sense Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;

Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd But it reserv'd some quantity of choice

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so siry and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our heggars bodies, and our monarchs and ontstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. and Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion. Hem. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halipenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclin-ing? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, anything—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord? Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, hy the rights of our fellowship, hy the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a hetter proposer could charge you withal, he even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Gundenstern Ham. [Aside.] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late, -- but wherefore I know not,lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, -why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.
Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I ssid, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the handsaw.

way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome,—his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o' the sere; and the lady shall-say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in,—the tragedians of the city.

Hom. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty? Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases, that cry ont on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages,—so they call them, -that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goosequills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players,—as it is most like, if their means are no hetter,-their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was for awhile no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible? Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of breins

Ham. Do the hoys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not strange; for mine uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make mouths at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [Flourish of trumpets within.

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsi-Your hands, come: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this gard; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a No, in despite of sense and secrecy, Unpeg the basket on the house's top, Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape, To try conclusions, in the basket creep, And break your own neck down. Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that? Queen. Alack. I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows

Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,-They bear the mandate; they must sweep my

And marshal me to knavery. Let it work; For 'tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petard: and't shall go hard But I will delve one yard below their mines, And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet, When in one line two crafts directly meet.-This man shall set me packing: I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.-Mother, good-night.-Indeed, this counsellor Is now most still, most secret, and most grave, Who was in life a foolish prating knave. Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:-Good-night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; HAM. dragging out Pol.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves: them. You must translate: 'tis fit we understand Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while. [To Ros. and Guil., who go out.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet? Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit Behind the arras hearing something stir, He whips his rapier out, and cries, A rat, a rat! And, in this brainish apprehension, kills The unseen good old man.

O heavy deed! Kino. It had been so with us had we been there: His liberty is full of threats to all; To you yourself, to us, to every one. Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd? It will be laid to us, whose providence Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of [love, haunt

This mad young man: but so much was our We would not understand what was most fit; But, like the owner of a foul disease,

To keep it from divulging, let it feed Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone? Even on the pith of life. Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore Among a mineral of metals base, Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away! The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed We must, with all our majesty and skill, Both countenance and excuse. Ho, Guildensterni

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN. Friends both, go join you with some further aid: Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain, And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd body [Exeunt Ros. and Gull.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends: And let them know both what we mean to do And what's untimely done: so haply slander,-Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,

Exeunt.

Scene II,—Anather Room in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed. Ros. and Guil. [Within.] Hamlet! Lord Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet? O, here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body? Ikin.

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto tis Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence.

And bear it to the chapel. Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what? Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a spongel-what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord? Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry

Ros. I understand you not, my lord. Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear. Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing.

Guil. A thing, my lord! Hide Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. [Exeunt. fox, and all after.

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the harber's, with your beard.—Pr'ythee, say on.—He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on; come to Hecuba.

r Play. But who, O, who had seen the mobiled queen,—

Ham. The mobled queen?
Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

r Play. Run harefoot up and down, threatening the flames

And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look, whether he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in's eyes.—Pray you, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time; after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. [their desert.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to Ham. Odd's bodikin, man, better: use every man after his desert, and who should scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. [Exit POLONIUS with all the Players but the First.]—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murder of Gonzago? I Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines which I would set down and insert in't? could you not?

r Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit First Player.]

—My good friends, [to Ros. and Guil.] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exeunt Ros. and GUL. Ham. Ay, so God b' wi' yel—Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am Il Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wan'd;

Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my heard and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,
As deep as to the lungs? who does me this, ha? 'Swounds, I should take it: for it cannot be Remorseless, treachery, lecherous, kindless villain!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most hrave,
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing like a very drah,

Play something like the murder of my father Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him to the quick: if he but blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen May be the devil: and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps Out of my weakness and my melancholy,—As he is very potent with such spirits,—Ahuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds More relative than this:—the play's the thing. Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

ACT III.

Exit.

Scene I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, hy no drift of circumstance, Get from him why he puts on this confusion, Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little Exeunt all but HAMLET. before. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion or some craven scruple Of thinking too precisely on the event,-A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom

And ever three parts coward,—I do not know Why yet I live to say, This thing's to do; Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means To do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me: Witness this army, of such mass and charge, Led by a delicate and tender prince; Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd, Makes mouths at the invisible event: Exposing what is mortal and unsure To all that fortune, death, and danger dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great Is not to stir without great argument, But greatly to find quarrel in a straw {then, When honour's at the stake. How stand I, That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd. Excitements of my reason and my blood, And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see The imminent death of twenty thousand men, That, for a fantasy and trick of fame, Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause, Which is not tomb enough and continent To hide the slain?-O, from this time forth, My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! Scene V .- Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN and HORATIO.

Queen. I will not speak with her. Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract: Her mood will needs be pitied Oueen. What would she have?

Hor. She speaks much of her father; says

she hears

There's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her heart; [doubt, Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing, Yet the unshaped use of it doth move The hearers to collection; they aim at it, And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;

Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them, [thought, Indeed would make one think there might be Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily. 'Twere good she were spoken with; for she may strew Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds. Queen. Let her come in. [Exit HORATIO. To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is, Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss: So full of artless jealousy is guilt, It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter HORATIO and OFHELIA.

Obh. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. How should I your true love know [Sings. From another one? By his cockle hat and staff, And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song? Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

> He is dead and gone, lady, He is dead and gone; At his head a grass green turf, [Sings. At his heels a stone.

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,-Pray you, mark.

White his shrond as the mountain [Singe.

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet nowers,
Which bewept to the grave did go
With true-love showers. (Sings.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day [Sings. All in the morning betime, And I a maid at your window, To be your Valentine.

Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes, And dupp'd the chamber-door; Let in the maid, that ont a maid Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelial

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't;

By Gis and by Saint Charity, [Alack, and fie for shame! Young men will do't, if they come to't; [Sings. By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me, You promis'd me to wed.
So would I hi' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you; for your good counsel.—Come, my coach!—Good-night, ladies; good-night, sweet ladies; good-night, good-night. King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.

did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe

Ham. You should not bave believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thon be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent bonest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not born me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be sbnt upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in's own bouse. Farewell.

Oph. O, belp him, you sweet beavens! Ham: If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry,-be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go: fare-Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a numnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too well enough; God bas given you one face and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages; those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. Exit. To a nunnery, go.

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown! The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's eye, tongue, sword:

Scene II .- A Hell in the Castle. Enter HAMLET and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I bad as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with Jour hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. it offends me to the soul, to hear a robusticus periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable damb shows and noise: I could have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-berods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

t Play. I warrant your bonour. Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor; suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be King. SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter HORATIO and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with Serv. Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you. Hor. Let them come in .- [Exit Servant. I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet:

Enter Szilors.

1 Sail. God bless you, sir. Hor. Let him bless thee too. I Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know

Hor. [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shall have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them; on the instant they got clear of our ship: so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy: but they For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy, — [Sings. knew what they did; I am to do a good turn Laer. Rosencraniz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell. He that thou knowest thine. HAMLET. Come, I will give you way for these your letters; And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Castle. Enter King and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal And you must put me in your heart for friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he which hath your noble father slain Pursu'd my life. It well appears:—but tell me Loet. Why you proceeded not against these feats, So crimeful and so capital in nature.

As by your safety, wisdom, all things else, You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons; Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd.

But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks; and for myself, My virtue or my plague, be it either which, She's so conjunctive to my life and soul, That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but by her. The other motive; Why to a public count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bear him;

Who, dipping all his faults in their affection, Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone,

Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows, Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, And not where I had aim'd them.

Lcer. And so have I a noble father lost; A sister driven into desperate terms, Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age For her perfections:—but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think

That we are made of stuff so fiat and dull That we can let our beard be shook with more: danger, And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts: she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord? Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught: I'll mark the play.

 p_{T0} For us, and for our tragedy, Here stooping to your clemency, We beg your hearing patiently. Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring? Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord. Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone round

Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orbed ground, And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen About the world have times twelve thirties been Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be donel But, woe is me, you are so sick of late, So far from cheer and from your former state That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must: For women's fear and love holds quantity; In neither aught, or in extremity. Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so: Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there. (shortly too: P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and

My operant powers their functions leave to do: And thou shalt live in this fair world behind, Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind

For husband shalt thou,

Q. Queen. O, confound the rest1 Such love must needs be treason in my breast: In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second mar--riage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:

A second time I kill my husband dead When second husband kisses me in bed. P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak; But what we do determine oft we break. Purpose is but the slave to memory; Of violent birth, but poor validity: [tree; Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the But fall unshaken when they mellow be. Most necessary 'tis that we forget change; For 'tis a question left us yet to prove Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love. The great man down, you mark his favourite fiies;

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies. And hitherto doth love on fortune tend: For who not needs shall never lack a friend; And who in want a hollow friend doth try Directly seasons him his enemy. But, orderly to end where I begun,-Our wills and fates do so contrary run That our devices still are overthrown; Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our So think thou wilt no second husband wed; But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light! Sport and repose lock from me day and night! To desperation turn my trust and hopel An anchor's cheer in prison be my scopel Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy, Meet what I would have well, and it destroy! Both here and hence, pursue me lasting strife.

Sweet, leave P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. me here awhile; My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps. Sleep rock thy brain, P. Queen. And never come mischance between us twain!

Ham. Madam, how like you this play? Queen. The lady protests too much, methinks. Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play? Ham. The Mouse-trap. Man Marry, This play is the image of a murder Tropically. done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name: his wife, Baptista: yon shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what o' that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it tonches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare, Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,

It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this; Weigh what convenience both of time and means

May fit us to our shape: if this should fail. And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd: therefore this pro-

Should have a back or second, that might hold If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see:-

We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings,-When in your motion you are hot and dry,-

As make your bouts more violent to that end, And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd him

A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping. If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck Our purpose may hold there.

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen! Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel, Laertes. So fast they follow:—your sister's drown'd, Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream; There with fantastic garlands did she come Of crowflowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name, But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call weeds There, on the pendant boughs her coronet Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke; When down her weedy trophies and herself Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide; And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:

Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes; As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indu'd Unto that element: but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink, Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay To muddy death.

Alas, then, she is drown'd? Laer. Queen. Drown'd, drown'd. [Ophelia, Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet It is our trick; nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,

The woman will be out.-Adieu, my lord: I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze, Exit. But that this folly douts it. Let's follow, Gertrude;

How much I had to do to calm his rage! Now fear I this will give it start again; Therefore let's follow.

ACT V.

Scene I .- A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns with spades, &c. 1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be se. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman delver,-I Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes,—mark you that: but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's quest law. 2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

I Clo. Why, there thou say'st: and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian .- Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers: they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself,-

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee.

To't again, come.
2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

I Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.
1 Clo. To't.
2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

I Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with [Exeunt. | beating; and when you are asked this question

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me: you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think that I am easier to be played on than a pipe? me what instrument you will, though you can fret me vou cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a came!?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed. Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel. Pol. It is backed like a weasel. Ham. Or like a whale? Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by .- They fool me to the top of my bent. -I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By and by is easily said. [Exit POLONIUS.]—Leave me, friends.

[Exeunt Ros., Guil., Hon., and Players 'Tis now the very witching time of night, When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes fblood, Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.

O heart, lose not thy nature: let not ever The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom: Let me be cruel, not unnatural: I will speak daggers to her, but use none; My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites, How in my words soever she be shent, To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in the Castle. Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guilden-STERN.

King. I like him not: nor stands it safe with [Zon; To let his madness range. Therefore prepare I your commission will forthwith despatch, And he to England shall along with you: The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow Ont of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide: Most holy and religious fear it is

To keep those many many bodies safe That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strange and armour of the mind, To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone; but like a gulf doth draw What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes tenthons and lesser things Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls Each small annexment, petty consequence Attends the boisterous ruin. Hever alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray yon, to this speedy

Voyage:

For we will fetters put upon this fear, Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. and Guil.

We will haste us. Exeunt Ros and Gun.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself home: To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 'Tismeetthat some more audience than a mother, Since nature makes them partial, shouldo'erbear The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed, And tell you what I know,

Kina. Thanks, dear my lord. Exit Polonius.

), my offence is rank, it smells to heaven: It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,-A brother's murder!-Pray can I not, Though inclination be as sharp as will: My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent; And, like a man to double business bound, I stand in pause where I shall first begin, And both neglect. What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,-Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy But to confront the visage of offence? And what's in prayer but this twofold force,-To be forestalled ere we come to fall Or pardon'd being down? Then I'll look up; My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!-That cannot be; since I am still possess'd Of those effects for which I did the murder,-My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen. May one be pardon'd and retain the offence? In the corrupted currents of this world Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice; And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself Buys out the law: but 'tis not so above; There is no shuffling,—there the action lies In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd, Even to the teeth and forchead of our faults, To give in evidence. What then? what rests? Try what repentance can: what can it not? Yet what can it when one can not repent? O wretched state! O bosom black as death! O limed soul, that, struggling to be free, Art more engag'd! Help, angels! make assay: Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart, with strings of steel.

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe! All may be well. (Retires and Imeels.)

Enfer HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat now he is praying:

This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This? I Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. [Takes the skull.]—Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

(Throws down the skull.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, oratio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likeli-hood to lead it: as thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam whereto he was converted might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O, that that earth which kept the world in awe Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!-

But soft! but soft! aside.—Here comes the Enter Priests, &c., in procession; the Corpse of Ophelia, Laertes and Mourners following; King, Queen.. their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: who is that they follow?

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken The corse they follow did with desperate hand Fordo its own life: 'twas of some estate. Couch we awhile and mark.

Retiring with HOR. Laer. What ceremony else? That is Laertes, Ham.

A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warrantise: her death was doubt-And, but that great command o'ersways the order.

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her,

Yet here she is allowed her virgin rites, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done? I Priest. No more be done: We should profane the service of the dead To sing a requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls

Lay her i' the earth: And from her fair and unpolluted flesh May violets spring!-I tell thee, churlish priest. A ministering angel shall my sister be

A ministering away.
When thou liest howling.
What, the fair Ophelial Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

Scattering flowers. I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife, maid, I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet

And not have strew'd thy grave. O, treble woe Laer.

Fall ten times treble on that cursed head Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth awhile, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the grave. Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead, Till of this flat a mountain you have made, To o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of SOTTOW stand

Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I. Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps one]

The devil take thy soull seemed in the devil take the soull seemed in the seeme Leaps into the grave.

[Grappling with him. Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I pr'ythee, take thy fingers from my throat; For, though I am not splenetive and rash, Yet have I in me something dangerous, Which let thy wiseness fear: away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder. Hamlet! Hamlet! Queen.

Àll. Gentlemen,-

Hor.Good my lord, be quiet. [The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme

Until my eyelids will no longer wag-

Queen. O my son, what theme? Ham. Ilor d Ophelia; forty thousand brothers Could not, with all their quantity of love, Make up my sum. - What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes. Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou'lt do: Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't tear thyself?

Woul't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile? I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine? To outface me with leaping in her grave? Be buried quick with her, and so will I: And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw Millions of acres on us, till our ground, Singeing his pate against the burning zone, Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I'll rant as well as thou.

To serve in such a difference. What devil was't That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind? Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight, Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all, Or but a sickly part of one true sense Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush! Rebellious hell, If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones, To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame

And reason panders will.

Queen.

O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thon turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots

When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,

Since frost itself as actively doth burn.

As will not leave their tinct.

Ham.

Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty,—

Queen. O, speak to me no more; These words like daggers enter in mine ears;

No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer and a villain; A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings; A cntpurse of the empire and the rule, That from n shelf the precious diadem stole, And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more. Ham. A king of shreds and patches.—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings, You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas, he's mad! [chide, Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by The important acting of your dread command? O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose. But, look, amazement on thy mother sits: O, step between her and her fighting soul,— Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works,—

Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady? Queen. Alas, how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up and stands on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?
Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares! [stones, His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to Would make them capable.—Do nov look upon me; Lest with this piteous action you convert My stern effects; then what I have to do Will want true colour; tears perchance for Oueen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham.

Do you see nothing there?

Oueen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

Do you see nothing there?

Oueen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear? Queen. No, nothing but ourselves Ham. Wby, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he liv'd!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal! [Exit Gbost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain: This bodiless creation ecstasy Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasyl
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time.

And makes as healthful music: it is not madness That I have utter d: bring me to the test, And I the matter will re-word; which madness Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace, Lay not that flattering unction to your soul, That not your trespass, but my madness speaks: It will but skin and film the ulcerous place, Whilst rank corruption, mining all within, Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven; Repent what's past; avoid what is to come; And do not spread the compost on the weeds, To make them ranker. Forgive me this my

virtue;
For in the fatness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.
Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good-night: but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,—
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery
That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrons potency. Once more, goodnight:

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord
[Pointing to POLONIUS.

I do repent: but Heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gare him. So, again, good-night—
I must be cruel only to be kind:
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.—
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do? Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:

Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
Pincb wanton on your cbeek; call you his monse;
And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in:madness, [know;
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him
For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Snch dear concernings hide? who would do so?

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the hody.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,

Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd, even,

To bear all smooth and But never the offence. This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases desperate grown By desperate appliance are reliev'd, Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now! what hath hefallen! [lord, Ros. Where the dead hody is bestow'd, my We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he? Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

Bring him hefore us. King. Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius? Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! where? Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten; a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service,-two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this? Ham. Nothing but to show you how n king may go a progress through the guts of a heggar. King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' But, indeed, if you the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall noso him as you go up the stairs into the lohby.

King. Go seek him there.

To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till ye come.

Exeunt Attendants. King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done,-must send thee hence

With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thyself; The bark is ready, and the wind at help, The associates tend, and everything is bent For England.

Ham. For England! King. Ay, Hamlet. Good. Ham. King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. - But, come; for England!-Farewell, dear mother. King. Thy loving father, Hamlet. Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother.—Come, for Englandl

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard; Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-night: Away! for everything is seal'd and done

That else leans on the affair, pray you, make haste. | Exeunt Ros. and Guil. And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,~

As my great power thereof may give thee sense, Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us,—thou mayst not coldly set Our sovereign process; which imports at full, By letters conjuring to that effect, Do it, England; The present death of Hamlet.

For like the hectic in my blood he rages, And thou must cure me: till I know 'tis done, Howe'er my haps, my joys will ne'er begin. Exit.

SCENE IV .- A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, and Forces marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish . king

Tell him that, by his license, Fortinhras Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous, If that his majesty would aught with us, We shall express our duty in his eye, And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord. For. Go softly on.

Excunt FOR. and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guilden-STERN, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these? Cap. They are of Norway, sir. Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you? Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir? Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinlsir.

hras. Ham Goes it against the main of Poland, Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition, Wo go to gain a little patch of ground That hath in it no profit but the name. To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole

A ranker rate should it be sold in fee. Ham. Why, then the Polack never will de-

Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd. Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats

Will not debate the question of this straw: This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace, lout That inward breaks, and shows no cause with Why the man dies .- I humhly thank you, sir.

Cap. God h' wi' you, sir. [Exn. Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude.

When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in hattalions! First, her father slain: Next, your son gone; and he most violent author Of his own just remove: the people muddied. Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers

For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly

In hugger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia Divided from herself and her fair judgment. Without the which we are pictures, or mero beasts:

Last, and as much containing as all these, Her hrother is in secret come from France; Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not huzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father's death; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, Will nothing stick our person to arraign In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, Like to a murdering piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

Alack, what noise is this? Оцесп. King. Where are my Switzers? let them guard the door.

Enter a Gentleman.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord: The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord:

And, as the world were now but to begin. Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, Choose we, Laertes shall be king! Caps, hands, and tongues applaud it to the clouds, Lacries sholl be king, Lacries king! Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they crvl O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs! King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following. Laer. Where is this king?-Sirs, stand you all without. Dones. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave. Dones. We will, we will.

(They retire without the door. Lacr. I thank you:-keep the door.-O thou vile king,

Give me my father! Oueen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me hastard:

Cries cuckold to my father; brands the harlot Even here, hetween the chaste unsmirched hrow

Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rehellion looks so giant-like?-Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person: There's such divinity doth hedge n king,

That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will .- Tell me, Laertes Why thou art thus incens'd .- Let him go. Gertrude:-- Speak, man. Laer. Where is my father?

Kina. Dead. Oueen. But not hy him.

King. Let him demand his fill. [with: Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be jnggled To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pitl I dare damnation:-to this point I stand,-That both the worlds I give to negligence Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd

Most throughly for my father. King. Who shall stay you? Laer. My will, not all the world:

And for my means, I'll husband them so well. They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes. If you desire to know the certainty Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your land foe, revenge That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

Will you know them, then? Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms And, like the kind life-rendering pelican. Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak Like a good child and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father's death, And am most sensible in grief for it, It shall us level to your judgment pierce

As day does to your eye.

Dones. [Within.] Let her come in.

Lacr. How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter Ophelia, fantastically dressed with strows and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eyes!-By heaven, thy madness shall he paid hy weight Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May! Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!-O heavens! is't possible a young maid's wits Should be as mortal as an old man's life! Nature is fine in love; and where 'tis fine It sends some precious instance of itself After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier [Sings. Hey no nonny, nonny, hey nonny, And on his grave rain'd many a tear,—

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing. Down-a-down, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel hecomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemarry, that's for remembrance; pray, love, rememher: and there is pansies that's for thoughts. I lov'd your father, and we love ourself; And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! Who hrought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:

[them

They were given me by Claudio,—he receiv'd Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.— Leave us. [Exit Messenger, [Reads.] High and mighty,—You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.

HAMLET.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character:—Naked,—And in a postscript here, he says, alone.

Can you advise me? [come; Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him It warms the very sickness in my heart, That I shall live, and tell him to his teeth, Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,—
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—
Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord: So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd.—

As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it.—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame shall hreathe:

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd; The rather if you could devise it so

That I might be the organ.

King.

It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality

Wherein they say you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him

As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?
King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less hecomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sahles and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months

since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—
I've seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,
And they can well on horseback: but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorps'd and demi-natur'd

With the brave heast: so far he topp'd my thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?
King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamond.
King. The year same

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;

And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould he a sight indeed
If one could match you: the scrimers of their nation,

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy, That he could nothing do hut wish and heg Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.

Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,

A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will ahate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too much: that we would do
We should do when we would; for this would changes,

And hath ahatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh
That hurts hy easing. But to the quick o' the ulcer:—

Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake

To show yourself your father's son in deed More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the chnrch.
King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize: [Laertes,

Revenge should have no hounds. But, good Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home: We'll put on those shall praise your excellence, And set a double varnish on the fame [gether, The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, to-And wager on your heads: he, heing remiss, Most generous, and free from all contriving. Will not peruse the folls; so that, with ease, Or with a little shuffling, you may choose A sword unhated, and, in a pass of practice, Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't: And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword. I hought an unction of a mountehank. So mortal that hut dip a knife in it,
